Hoover, Smith, and Coolidge Speak.

New York, Jan. 22.—[Special.]—A nation wide plea for contributions to the $10,000,000 Red Cross fund for drought relief was voiced tonight with a President of the United States, a former candidate for President and a former President joining in urging prompt giving.

President Hoover appealed to "the heart of the nation" for immediate relief for the destitute sufferers of the drought states. The situation there, he said, constitutes a calamity which called for a common effort to drive suffering and want from the country. His appeal was for the prompt subscription of the $10,000,000 fund that is needed by the Red Cross to carry on its work.

Mr. Hoover's talk was made in Washington. Former President Calvin Coolidge made his appeal from his home at Northampton, Mass.; former Gov. Al Smith, Mrs. August Belmont and Mary Pickford spoke from New York. John Barton Payne spoke at Washington and Will Rogers at Little Rock, Ark. Rogers is touring by air with Capt. Frank Hawks for the Red Cross drive.

Tells of Crop Losses.

In his address President Hoover said:

"The area affected is roughly limited to the states bordering upon the Potomac, Ohio, and Mississippi rivers, with limited acute areas in some south eastern and northwestern states. The people in this area lost a large part of their crops, and many thousands are even short of food supplies.

"The Red Cross now appeals for $10,000,000 of additional funds in order that that essential task may be equally performed. There is no question but that they are needed. It unthinkable that any of our people should be allowed to suffer from hunger or want. The heart of the nation will not permit it. It is to the heart of the nation that I am appealing tonight. I urge all of my fellow countrymen to contribute promptly and in accordance with their means. It is a call to citizenship and to generosity in time of trial, but it is a call for protection to our greatest American institution of charity and above all, a call on behalf of those in need."

Coolidge Adds His Plea.

Mr. Coolidge reviewed the relief sent by "the generosity of the American people" into all parts of the world and said that in the event of a fire or earthquake the whole nation rushed to the aid of the suffering. And while a catastrophe "like drought and business depression" comes on so gradually its effects cannot be visualized, the need for relief is "as urgent as though some great calamity had struck down the means of livelihood over a great area in a single day."

Smith Also Urges Aid.

Former Gov. Smith spoke of both the drought and the work of the Red Cross and added:

"Today a large part of our country is suffering from a drought. Lands here not produced, live stock is threatened with starvation, and hungry women and children are looking to the Red Cross. The Red Cross is already bringing relief to the stricken areas in so constructive a way as to help the people affected to help themselves and is strengthening and encouraging those who receive Red Cross aid.

"Disaster to any one section of the country should be the concern of us all. The Red Cross can drive the wolf of hunger from the door, but the American people must stand behind the Red Cross. They must provide the means, and the American Red Cross will provide the ways."

Mary Pickford Speaks.

Miss Pickford said that "There are areas of this country where men and women are suffering, where food is needed now by Americans just as much as it was once needed by Belgians and Armenians." She spoke of New York's bread lines and said, "I know conditions are no different here than they are in other parts of the country." Then, speaking of the Red Cross as having "brought order out of chaos in a thousand crises," she said:

"It is time for the strong to aid the weak, for the thinking men and women of America to form a solid bloc behind the unselfish workers of the Red Cross."

John Barton Payne, Red Cross chairman, said help must be given, not only those applying, but to "the families living on the mountain sides, in the valleys and the backwoods, isolated

CON MEN MUST GO, SAYS LYLE; CROWD CHEERS

Slickers Are Added to Public Foes.

BY PARKE BROWN.

Resuming the platform after recovering from a severe cold and sore throat which for several days kept him from speaking, Judge John H. Lyle, Republican candidate for the mayoralty nomination, last night added to his anti-gangster platform a plank declaring war on confidence men.

He did not mention a name and spoke with a serious face until after several outbursts of laughter from his hearers he himself was compelled, first to smile, and then to laugh heartily. But he continued to treat his subject seriously until he had disposed of it. Those on the platform with him charged him with being a humorist, but he insisted he meant every word he said.

This was the only formal political utterance of the day considered as having a bearing on the Blacklidge-Litsinger case, but the subject was much discussed around various headquarters where the opinion frequently was heard that the Springfield incident might have some effect in the present campaign on the Deneen group and its mayoralty candidate, Ald. Arthur F. Albert.

Lyle Speaks in Snow's Ward.

Judge Lyle spoke before the Sixth Ward Republican club at 1020 East 63d street. This is County Chairman Snow's own ward and it was the candidate's first speech before a political organization.

"I believe," he said, "it was former President Taft, when he was chief justice of the United States Supreme court, who said that the people of this country are mulcted out of more than five billion dollars a year through confidence games and other nonviolent crimes.

"Other persons of prominence have made estimates of such loss that were much higher, but certainly the sum obtained by devious and unholy methods without the aid of guns or bludgeons is so vast that the number of victims yearly must run into the hundreds of thousands.

"The Contemptible Slickers."

"Cowardly though pistol carrying gangsters may be, and most always are, in their attacks upon citizens, yet to me there is an even greater cowardice and a more contemptible purpose in the 'slickers' who with fair words and false representations lure hard earned savings from respectable but unsuspecting individuals.

"Right here in Chicago there must be thousands who could relate sad stories about how they have been victimized. I have often been deeply moved by such tales, and it is my firm belief that if I am elected mayor I shall be able to make Chicago a very unhealthy place for the gentry who live by their wits, even if they are not gun toters.

"A drive against them, combining publicity as to their methods with legal prosecution for discovered frauds, would go far toward saving Chicago citizens most of that enormous sum out of which heretofore they have been mulcted annually.

Has Plans to Help Dupes.

"I may say at this time that I have in mind several procedures by which the victims of confidence game operators can even scores with the crooks. Whether these crooks are selling real estate or mines to which they have no title or which are worthless, or are promoting 'blue sky' corporations with little or no value in the stock, I think you will agree with me that, for the good name of Chicago, we should have the city cleaned of these 'slickers' during the approaching World's Fair.

"Crimes of violence—we must and will reduce them to the absolute minimum. But the confidence games—they, too, must go!"

Lyle headquarters made public an indorsement of the judge by Commissioner Thomas W. Gilmore of the Lincoln park board, for many years identified with the Deneen forces in the Forty-ninth ward.

"The most important duty confronting the voter," said the Gilmore statement, "is the elimination of the present city administration. I have been closely affiliated with the Deneen group in the Forty-ninth ward, but at the coming primary I intend to support Judge Lyle. With the multiplicity of leaders in our party, a voter should have the right of aligning with any group his judgment dictates, and Judge Lyle's candidacy seems to me to offer the best chance of success."

FLAMES MENACE ROOSEVELT HOME AT OYSTER BAY

Oyster Bay, N. Y., Jan. 22.—(AP)—Flames attacked the upper portion of Sagamore Hill, home of the late Col. Theodore Roosevelt, tonight and ate their way to within a few yards of the attic armory room housing the famous collection of firearms of the former President of the United States.

With the mercury close to zero and a strong wind adding to their difficulties, firemen fought the blaze and held the damage to about $1,000.

Mrs. Roosevelt, widow of the colonel, alone in the house with the servants, found the blaze and telephoned an alarm to the village fire department at a few minutes after 8 o'clock.

Firemen found that two fires burned simultaneously, one on each side of the roof near a chimney from which they evidently had started. It was necessary to lay nearly a mile of hose.

A large number of neighbors from adjoining estates and scores of motorists watched the blaze.

When the excitement had subsided Mrs. Roosevelt served coffee and cake to all of the fire fighters and police officers who had kept the crowds back and the narrow road open.

G. W. MATHEWS JR. DIES; ILL A WEEK OF PNEUMONIA

George W. Mathews Jr., 219 Lake Shore drive, died in the Passavant hospital early this morning after an illness of less than a week.

Pneumonia was the cause of death. After being taken to the hospital last Saturday he was placed in the oxygen room, recently installed. He was the first patient to occupy this room. For a time his condition seemed to improve as a result of this treatment, but he failed rapidly last night.

Surviving Mr. Mathews are a widow, Minnie Crilly Mathews, and one daughter, Erminie, who is the wife of Sangston Hettler. Mr. Mathews was 54 years old, a native of Chicago. His father was of the same name and for many years was one of Chicago's leading merchant tailors. Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

VICEROY OF INDIA AGREES TO GIVE GANDHI FREEDOM

NEW DELHI, India, Jan. 23.—(AP)—Viceroy Lord Irwin, it was understood here today, already has made a decision to release Mahatma Gandhi, imprisoned nationalist leader. Only the details of his removal from Yeroda Poona, so as to avoid a public demonstration, remain to be arranged.

Union Station Holdup Hoax Is Confessed

Hobart E. Smith, assistant cashier at the union station, who last Monday reported to the police that he had been robbed of more than $10,000 by a bandit who locked him in the vault, last night confessed that the story was a hoax and that he had stolen the money to repay gambling debts.

Smith's confession was obtained after Joseph Prendergast, chief of railroad detectives at the station, had questioned him insistently on minor details of the alleged holdup. Smith said he could not endure the ordeal any longer, that "my conscience was yelling at me so loud it was getting on my nerves."

Leads Police to Money.

In company with Prendergast Smith went to the detective bureau, put the confession in the form of a signed statement, and then accompanied the police to his home at 513 West 66th street. There he showed them where he had cached the money. It was in a small box, in a cold air draft pipe of his furnace, in the basement.

The amount recovered was $10,685, which Chief Prendergast said is $315 less than was taken. Smith said he would make restitution, if he was granted time. He was held at the detective bureau last night, charged with larceny.

Smith, who is 36 years old, married, and the father of a 9 year old boy, has been a trusted employe of the ticket office since 1919, Chief Prendergast said.

Tells of Playing Races.

"About eight years ago," Smith said last night, "I started playing the races. I had what I considered straight inside information. For a while I won pretty consistently. Occasionally, however, I would lose. My luck deserted me altogether about five years ago, and I could never recoup enough to get even.

"I began falsifying my accounts, always thinking I would some day make a killing. I made one or two, but I couldn't stop gambling. I kept getting in deeper and deeper. Finally I was so desperate I decided on the fake holdup. I figured $1,000 would square me, but I thought as long as I was going in for it I might as well do a good job.

How He Took the Cash.

"Early Monday morning I was all alone. I removed the screws from the inside of the vault lock first. Then I took the money, in bills, and put it in the outside casing of the spare tire on my car, parked near the station.

"I hurried back to the cashier's cage, got in the vault, pulled the door to, and replaced the screws. I waited in there, with my eye on my watch, for my relief to arrive. He is William Hickebottom, 6559 Harvard avenue. I began pounding and kicking on the door at the minute I knew he should be there.

"He heard me, but couldn't open the combination. He called the police, and they summoned another assistant cashier, George Kessler, who was able to open it."

After Smith had made his confession he smiled and said: "I'm glad it's over. I feel like a brick house had been lifted from my mind."

GIANT METEOR SWIRLS ACROSS SKIES IN EAST

New York, Jan. 22.—(AP)—A meteor attracted considerable attention in eastern skies tonight.

At Elmira, N. Y., observers said it traveled at a great height, at a speed about three times that of a fast airplane and that it left two lines of light behind it. Mary Clegg Suffa, professor of astronomy at Elmira college, said it was a meteor. At Syracuse, N. Y., the flashes were especially impressive. It was visible nearly a minute.

At Atlantic City, N. J., Charles Earle, an amateur astronomer, described it as half the size of the moon, with a bright red hue and a tail of dark red and yellow. It was 20 times its own diameter in length, he said. It took 15 seconds to cross the sky from west to east and did not fade. It darkened the stars.

At South Newfane, Vt., John E. Morse said it was about the size of a large automobile headlight and left a perceptible trail of sparks. He and Mrs. Morse said it appeared to fall and go out with a quite audible explosion, high in the heavens, far to the north.

'NICKY' ARNSTEIN HUNTED IN $50,000 FARO SWINDLE

Litsinger Says He Will Go to Law About It.

Jules (Nicky) Arnstein, notorious New York confidence man, was being hunted by police and federal agents last night as the author of the faro game swindle which cost Edward R. Litsinger $50,000 on a trip to Springfield Wednesday night and which inspired Litsinger yesterday to accuse his former political associate, Mrs. Myrtle Tanner Blacklidge, as a principal in the plot.

Mrs. Blacklidge, federal collector of internal revenue for northern Illinois, returned secretly from Springfield last night to find her official affairs being investigated by special federal agents on orders from Washington. She went into immediate retirement.

Litsinger Says He'll Prosecute.

Although her exact whereabouts were known only to her friends, the federal agents were confident they could question her today concerning Litsinger's charges. Litsinger, who lives at 1400 North State parkway, is a banker, lawyer and member of the board of review. He publicly declared yesterday that he would prosecute Mrs. Blacklidge as a conspirator in a confidence game on the basis of his experience with her in a Springfield hotel.

In view of the fact that both Mrs. Blacklidge and Mr. Litsinger are prominent in the political group of Senator Charles S. Deneen, the exposure created a whirlwind of comment.

Seen in Chicago.

Suspicion was first directed against Arnstein when the federal agents learned that he had been seen in the loop last Monday. It was on the preceding Saturday night and Sunday morning that Mrs. Blacklidge won, as she claims, the $207,000 faro stake which led her to seek a $50,000 loan from Litsinger as a cash guarantee for the faro banker.

Aware of Arnstein's previous exploits and his penitentiary record, the agents on a chance checked his description against those Mrs. Blacklidge furnished the Springfield police of the three card sharps who, she claimed, inveigled her into the Saturday night faro game and eventually took Mr. Litsinger's $50,000.

Descriptions Almost Alike.

The agents discovered that Arnstein's description, as listed in the bureau of identification records of 1927, almost exactly fitted that of one of the Springfield trio, calling himself George Parker. The bureau record describes Arnstein as 6 feet 7-8 inch tall, weighing 167 pounds, with slate blue eyes and chestnut hair. Mrs. Blacklidge described the so-called Parker as 6 feet one inch tall, weighing 200 pounds, with light hair and blue eyes.

Discrepancies as to weight and age were explained. The informant of the agents remarked that Arnstein seemed much stouter than formerly, while the Chicago police assert he appears ten years younger than his 49 years. Strengthening suspicion against him was the discovery in the hotel room the trio occupied of a tweed cap, purchased in St. Jean, Que., coupled with the report that Arnstein had been in the Canadian province before Christmas.

Calls It "Political Plot."

"It's a rotten deal and a plot to ruin me politically," was Mrs. Blacklidge's sole and tearful comment over the telephone before leaving Springfield for home. Questioned from midnight to daybreak yesterday at the Springfield police headquarters and quizzed further in the forenoon by the Springfield state's attorney, she was hysterical and distraught as she left the state capital.

The revenue collector took elaborate precautions to avoid newspapermen on her return trip. Slipping out of Springfield in a car, she was driven north to Lincoln and there caught the 5:29 p. m. Alton train, from which she alighted at Joliet. Awaiting her there was another car bearing a license issued to Robert E. Neely, chief deputy collector, who presumably drove her to Chicago.

While Litsinger was posting a $2,000 reward for the arrest and conviction of the fugitives he described as her accomplices, State's Attorney H. E. Fullenwider and Police Chief T. P. Sullivan of Springfield both announced that, in their opinion, Mrs. Blacklidge was, as she claimed, the innocent victim of a faro swindle.

Prosecutor Fullenwider announced that, so far as his office was concerned, no action would

MYRTLE VS. ED.

MYRTLE. ED.

Myrtle says: She told the Litsingers all about the faro game while the trio were en route to Springfield. She did mention an estate at first but later explained the faro layout.

Ed says: Mrs. Blacklidge told him she needed $50,000 for one day to pay off a claim on a $90,000 estate. She never mentioned the card game.

Myrtle says: The $50,000 was lost when Fred Litsinger staked it on the cards.

Ed says: His nephew, Fred, was strong-armed by three men as he walked into their room.

Myrtle says: Ed Litsinger waited in an adjoining room while the card game was played.

Ed says: He stayed in the lobby of the St. Nicholas hotel while Fred and the others went upstairs.

Myrtle says: Ed Litsinger went to Springfield to make $10,000 promised as his reward for using the $50,000 one day.

Ed says: He gave Mrs. Blacklidge the $50,000 without thought of personal reward—because he sympathized with her.

Myrtle says: She has done nothing wrong.

Ed says: It was a swindle and he will give a reward of $2,000 for apprehension of the swindlers, who, he says, were in league with Mrs. Blacklidge.

be taken unless a formal complaint was sworn out. Chief Sullivan said: "I heard her story three times and I believe she's telling the truth. She was duped."

Litsinger announced last night, however, that he would forward to the Springfield prosecutor a letter embodying all the charges contained in his statement yesterday, together with an offer to furnish evidence supporting his charges, and a suggestion that the prosecutor take such action as the law required in the case.

It was a long and involved story that Mrs. Blacklidge told Chief Sullivan—one tallying in certain details with Mr. Litsinger's, but differing on essential points. It went back to the time, three years ago, when her husband, John W. Blacklidge, former Chicago druggist, used to play a friendly game of cards with Roy Burgess, whom the police and Mrs. Blacklidge both regard as the villain in the plot.

Offered Financial Assistance.

At her husband's death a year ago, Mrs. Blacklidge maintained, she was left penniless, except for her government salary of $7,500. A few weeks ago Burgess, a broad faced, stocky individual of 35 years with a double chin, approached her with condolences and an offer of financial assistance, for her deceased husband's sake.

His proposition seemed alluringly dangerous, Mrs. Blacklidge said. In brief, he announced he had intimate connections with a huge gambling syndicate operating in several Springfield hotels, was in possession of a secret code which made him an invariable winner, and suggested she come down and join the game, using a stake he promised to supply.

The widow accepted the proposition eagerly. On Saturday night she and Burgess registered in adjoining rooms of the Leland hotel, Mrs. Blacklidge signing the register as Mrs. Myrtle T. Smith of Dubuque, according to the hotel clerk. The play, according to her story, went on through the night with Burgess, Parker, and one Roscoe Reynolds in the deal, and in the morning Mrs. Blacklidge found herself a winner by $207,000.

Hurries Back to Chicago.

She was ready to collect her winnings, much of which seemed evident in cash on the table, when the banker, Parker, informed her that by the rules of the game she must put up $50,000 as evidence of good faith. Mrs. Blacklidge hastened to Chicago.

On Monday morning, according to the report, she approached R. J. Neal, president of the Drexel State bank, seeking a $50,000 cash loan for 24 hours, the loan to be secured by the signature of two unidentified friends who accompanied her to the bank. In view of Mrs. Blacklidge's vagueness in describing the purpose of the loan and because of the lack of security, the banker declined.

Thereafter she is said to have approached several friends, who likewise rejected her plea, and finally about noon she telephoned Litsinger. In her statement to Chief Sullivan, she admits that, in her first negotiations with Litsinger, she gave the reviewer the impression she sought the money for business purposes. Later, she insists, when she, Litsinger and his nephew, Fred, were aboard the train bound for Springfield, she fully explained that the money was a faro stake. Further, she insists, she pledged Litsinger a $10,000 commission upon her collection of her winnings.

Carries Money in Pocket.

Fred Litsinger, 26 year old nephew of the reviewer and president of the Litsinger Motor company, carried the money in his inner pocket, Mrs. Blacklidge avers, adding that at no time during the affair did she touch the bills. Reaching the St. Nicholas hotel, where the settlement was to be made, she and young Litsinger went up to the payoff room, leaving Edward Litsinger below because, she says, all felt his official position might be jeopardized by his appearance in a gambling room.

At this point Mrs. Blacklidge's explanation becomes somewhat vague. While the uncle and nephew strenuously insist that the trio—Parker, Burgess, and Reynolds—strong-armed the young man, Mrs. Blacklidge declares he was induced to lay the $50,000 as a stake, losing it all at one play. The Litsingers and Mrs. Blacklidge agree there was considerable astonishment and confusion as two of the sharpers, Parker and Reynolds, stepped outside, disappearing down a corridor.

Tells Story of Robbery.

Meanwhile Edward Litsinger waited below, passing the time in conversation with Police Captain Hugh McCarthy of the Town Hall station, who was in the capital lobbying for the police pension fund. Litsinger says his nephew came up breathlessly, saying, "Uncle Ed, we've been robbed."

On this point Mrs. Blacklidge says nothing. The elder Litsinger acted. Turning to Capt. McCarthy, he pointed out Burgess, who slipped away, however, vanishing in an aperture behind a telephone booth. Litsinger then telephoned for the Springfield police, demanding that Mrs. Blacklidge be arrested.

Litsingers Return to Chicago.

The Litsingers left Springfield on the train at 2 a. m. yesterday. Mrs. Blacklidge remained at the police station until 4 a. m., later going to the Abraham Lincoln hotel, where she remained in her room until about 11 a. m., when she left to confer with Fullenwider, Attorney Oscar J. Putting of Springfield, whom she engaged as counsel, and Oscar G. Addelman, federal collector of internal revenue for southern Illinois, who proffered his advice and services.

Little work was accomplished yesterday in the internal revenue offices, as the 500 employés chattered among themselves over their chief's predicament. Much genuine sympathy was discernible as the employés recalled Mrs. Blacklidge's grief over the death, first of her husband and within two weeks of her son about a year ago. The employés recalled how depressed she had been at Christmas time, facing the prospect of spending a lonely holiday in her apartment at the Flamingo hotel.

Meanwhile, however, on instructions from David Burnet, the internal revenue commissioner, at Washington, A. F. Madden, chief of the local special intelligence unit, spent the day examining Mrs. Blacklidge's records. It was unofficially reported that the examination disclosed no irregularities.

Under the instructions as outlined in Washington, Mr. Madden's report will, upon receipt there, be compared with the Washington records on Mrs. Blacklidge's office. If the findings and Washington records tally, a supplementary report, bearing also on the faro episode, will be submitted to Secretary of the Treasury Mellon and ultimately to President Hoover, who holds the power of removal.

Litsinger Charges Mrs. Blacklidge with Plot in $50,000 Swindle; Vows to Prosecute Her

Edward R. Litsinger, in an interview last evening, related in detail his version of the Wednesday night affair in a Springfield hotel in which he lost $50,000 cash to three confidence men through what he terms a blackmail scheme engineered by his former political associate, Mrs. Myrtle Tanner Blacklidge.

Born in poverty and a product of the stockyards district, Mr. Litsinger has risen to a position as a banker, lawyer, member of the board of review and former candidate for mayor. Mrs. Blacklidge, a Deneen political worker for many years, now holds one of the most important federal offices in the middle west, collector of internal revenue for the northern district of Illinois with responsibility for the annual collection of $225,000,000 in taxes.

Would Prosecute Mrs. Blacklidge.

Reflecting on the incidents leading to his $50,000 loss, Mr. Litsinger admitted that, even now, he could scarcely credit his lack of sagacity in the situation. Last any one doubt the sincerity of his position, however, he vowed to have Mrs. Blacklidge prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law and posted a $2,000 reward for the arrest and conviction of the three fugitives he termed her accomplices.

"First of all, this woman's statement that I loaned her money for gambling and that she lost it in a faro game is an absolute falsehood," Mr. Litsinger declared. "I have never played a hand of cards in my life and I'll dispose of the faro angle in the course of this interview.

"To get the background of this situation, you must realize that I've known Mrs. Blacklidge for twenty years and in all that time never heard a question of her honesty. She's been associated with the Deneen crowd for a long time and, about two years ago, on recommendation of Senator Deneen, President Coolidge appointed her collector of internal revenue.

Husband and Son Die.

"I and all of the Deneen crowd felt sympathy for Mrs. Blacklidge when her husband died a year ago and, with his funeral hardly over, her son died too. I understand she was wrapped up in the future of that boy and I know the double blow was a hard one.

"Well, the shock prostrated her and for three months, as I understand it, her life was despaired of. Even after her recovery I was told she was in a depressed condition, mentally and physically. On an occasional call at the federal building I always stopped at her office to inquire for her health. Lately she seemed to be regaining her good spirits.

"All right, I regarded her as a trustworthy friend. When she telephoned me last Monday morning, although I was very busy, I consented to see her about noontime. She insisted it was a very important legal matter.

Tells of Husband's Income.

"Well, she came into my office and here's the story she told me:

"It seemed that, following her husband's death, she found herself almost penniless except for her government salary. However, as she told it, she had always had a suspicion that Blacklidge had a source of income of which she knew nothing. 'He always had money, and I could never find out where he got it,' she told me.

"The secret finally came out, according to her story. It seemed that a man who had been Blacklidge's partner in the mysterious business approached her not long ago and informed her she was entitled to $90,000, representing her husband's share in the business. But there was a catch in it.

"It appeared, from her story, that there was a claim of $50,000 against the estate, and that's where I came in. She wanted a loan of $50,000. She wanted no probate of the estate, no publicity, and was not in a position to negotiate a bank loan. It was to be just a quiet settlement, by which she paid out $50,000 and received $90,000.

He Asks Full Facts.

"Naturally, I was skeptical," Mr. Litsinger went on, "I attempted to question her regarding the nature of her husband's mysterious business. I told her that her request was an extraordinary one and that I felt entitled to the full facts. She became tearful.

"'My God, Ed, you've known me all these years,' she said. 'You know I wouldn't lie or misrepresent things. Can't you trust me, knowing I am responsible for millions of government funds and hold one of the most important federal offices in the country?'

"'This money is my all,' she went on. Well, I admit her plea convinced me and, although I was suspicious of the whole business, I agreed to advance her the loan. She appeared tremendously grateful, promising me I could claim any reward I liked. But I waved that aside. I regarded it as a service done a friend. She might have done the same for me."

Gets Money from Bank.

Telephoning a bank, Mr. Litsinger procured a cashier's check for $50,000 that same afternoon, he explained. Being unable to leave the city because of business, he telephoned his nephew, Fred G. Litsinger, president of the Litsinger Motor company, to come to his office, get the check and accompany Mrs. Blacklidge to Springfield on an evening train.

"But," Mr. Litsinger went on, "there was another hitch. Just before train time, Mrs. Blacklidge telephoned me that a check wouldn't do. She claimed to have talked with the men in Springfield, who told her they must have cash. I dropped the matter for the time being and went home.

"Early next morning she was back at my office, imploring me to send Fred down with the cash. He cashed the check, getting fifty $1,000 bills and was ready to leave with her on the 11:30 morning train when, at the last minute, a suspicion entered my mind and I decided to go along. Mrs. Blacklidge had a stateroom and, on the trip, we discussed the affair further, but she made no mention of faro.

Suspicions Are Disarmed.

"Reaching Springfield, we registered at the Abraham Lincoln hotel, Fred and I in a room adjoining hers. Experienced as I am in financial matters, I must say that my suspicions were completely disarmed.

"Fred and I were in haste to get back to Chicago. Mrs. Blacklidge left the hotel, saying she wanted to find the parties and complete the transaction. Fred had the money in an envelope in his pocket.

"Mrs. Blacklidge was away about an hour. On returning, she claimed to have found two of the parties but said the third, who had the entire fund, was covering his location to avoid being waylaid. After another wait, she received a telephone call to come to room 406 of the Leland hotel.

"Now, to understand the sequel, you must realize that my nephew is just a young man of 27, who spends his days at business and his nights at the Y. M. C. A., completing a high school course. He's never played cards and has a rather timid disposition.

"Well, the three of us started for the Leland hotel. On the way Mrs. Blacklidge announced that one of the parties on the other side knew me and didn't want his identity disclosed. I agreed to remain in the lobby while Fred went up to room 406. They were back in a few minutes with the announcement that the deal would be completed at the St. Nicholas hotel.

"Fred, Mrs. Blacklidge, and two of the other party took a taxi to the St. Nicholas. The third party was waiting at the St. Nicholas. I walked, and at no time did I get a good view of any of the three.

Fred Tells of Robbery.

"I stayed in the lobby of the St. Nicholas. Fred and the others went upstairs. Within a few minutes Fred, Mrs. Blacklidge, and one of the other men came down. Fred rushed over to me, saying, 'Uncle, we've been robbed.'

"I looked around just in time to see the big fellow, whose name I believe is Roy Burgess. He disappeared behind a telephone booth. I saw two Chicago policemen standing in the lobby and asked them to arrest the man, but he had disappeared."

What happened in the upstairs room was related by Mr. Litsinger, his nephew declining to be interviewed.

"The minute Fred walked in the three men strong armed him," the uncle said. "One of them mugged him and another seized the money. Mrs. Blacklidge moved over to a table, on which some one had spread a deck of cards. That, I suppose, was to make it appear as if Fred had lost the money in a card deal.

Try to Pacify Youth.

"The boy was flustered. On the ride down the elevator Mrs. Blacklidge and the big fellow tried to pacify him. I suppose he felt frightened having to come and tell his uncle he had lost the money.

"I called for the Springfield police and Mrs. Blacklidge was held for questioning. She cried hysterically and begged me for a chance to return the money. I told her to make a full confession. She refused.

Makes His Stand Clear.

"I left for Chicago at 2 a. m. after telling the police I would return and swear out a warrant for her arrest. To make my position clear I want to say I firmly believe Mrs. Blacklidge entered into the plan to make this holdup. In frankly admitting I was swindled I say that in view of the responsibility of her office and the confidence I had in her integrity, that anybody else having the same feeling might have been swindled just as well.

"I believe Mrs. Blacklidge thought she could get away with this deal on the basis I would be afraid to talk or, in other words, be blackmailed into silence.

"I say now that I shall present the facts to the state's attorney and the courts of Sangamon or Cook county, wherever there may be jurisdiction. I will not only prosecute every one involved in this crime, but I hereby offer $2,000 for the arrest and conviction of any one of her confederates."

PROF. X TELLS ALL ABOUT THE GAME OF FARO

How It Is Played and Some Other Things.

Prof. X last night, in a downtown hotel suite, delivered an illustrated lecture on the technique of faro to an appreciateive audience consisting of one reporter.

"First you buy the chips," he began. "These come in all colors and are very pretty. Browns cost the most, from $10 to $1,000, depending on the limit of the game; then they run on down through the reds, blues, greens, and pinks to the whites, which cost the least, as low as 10 cents.

"The whites will do," said the audience.

"Okay," said Prof. X., which of course is not his real name. He drew his chair closer to the audience, producing a small metal box. His expressionless, steely blue eyes peered through his audience, causing him (the audience) to squirm slightly.

The professor had consented to lecture only after being assured the reporter was not a spy in the employ of the uplift or reform element, but was there in the interest of public enlightenment.

"Some of our best people play faro," remarked the professor, as he placed a deck of cards sidewise in the metal box.

"Do they win or lose?"

"Yes."

"Even as much as $200,000, eh?"

"Nick, the Greek, won $100,000 in a night. But," added the professor, "he lost it the next day."

"Could I win $200,000 in a night?"

"Could I sell you a street car?" The professor displayed the metal box. It had no top, and the cards were turned face upward, which let the top card be seen.

"Now," he continued, "this box is used by the dealer. He draws out the cards, one at a time. Three men are necessary to handle a faro game—the dealer, the case keeper, and the lookout. The lookout stands on a platform at the right side of the dealer. He sees that the cards are dealt correctly.

"The case keeper has a thing—say, have you a Chinese laundryman? Then you know that gadget he keeps his accounts with. Well, that's a case—a contraption with thirteen rods and four buttons on a rod—52 buttons altogether, representing all the cards in the deck. The case keeper, who stands opposite the dealer, keeps track of all the cards the dealer draws out of the little box.

"We see," continued the professor, "that the top card in the box is an 8. That card doesn't count. It's what we call the soda card.

"Faro is simple. You bet what the alternate card will be. That is, every other card is a winner or every other card is a loser. You can bet it to win or lose.

"If you put your chips, say, on the six to win, and it remains in the box on the draw, you lose. But if you bet on it to lose, and it remains in the box, you win. In other words the card that stays in the box is the losing card."

The professor explained that the player places his bets by stacking his chips on a layout of cards inlaid on a green billiard cloth table, about three feet by one and a half feet in size. The layout is a complete hand, beginning with the ace and on up through the deuce, trey, and so forth to jack, queen and king.

RACKET BUREAU SEIZES BOOKS OF PLUMBERS' UNION

Books and records of the Plumbers' union, local 130, one of the oldest and most powerful locals, were seized yesterday by a raiding squad from the state's attorney's racket bureau. The raid was made on information supplied by the secret six committee of the Association of Commerce.

An audit of the books of the union is to be made by the racket bureau because of the complaints made by members of the union. The members said they have been refused information as to what was being done with the $6 assessment each week against each working member for the aid of the unemployed. The complaining members say they were told it was "none of their business" when they asked for an accounting.

DENY HOOVER IS OPPOSED TO ANY DRY LAW CHANGE

Another View Inspired by White House.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 22.—[Special.]—Interest in the prohibition controversy produced by the report of the Wickersham commission veered today to the question whether President Hoover has or has not closed the door, so far as he is concerned, to any modification of the 18th amendment.

With virtually the entire country, wet as well as dry, construing the President's message transmitting the Wickersham commission report to congress as a rejection not only of the particular modification suggested by the commission but of any other modification, a White House spokesman inspired a newspaper dispatch this morning to the effect that Mr. Hoover is retaining an open mind as to other modifications that may be proposed.

Reminds of Past Experience.

This procedure was reminiscent of what took place at Palo Alto on the eve of Mr. Hoover's acceptance speech in 1928. When the press had been furnished with advance copies of the speech in which Mr. Hoover declared for the retention of the 18th amendment, but proposed a commission inquiry into the "abuses" of prohibition enforcement, a spokesman for the candidate called in the correspondents of wet newspapers and assured them on behalf of Mr. Hoover that the acceptance utterance on prohibition left the way open for modification.

In this case the inspired construction of the President's message followed the receipt at the White House yesterday of an avalanche of telegrams congratulating and denouncing Mr. Hoover on his rejection of the Wickersham commission's suggestion of revision of the 18th amendment in the event that a further trial of prohibition proves a failure. Reports that the President was given pause by word from his secretaries that the unfavorable far outnumbered the favorable messages could not be confirmed, the White House refusing to disclose the character of the telegrams.

May Consider Other Plans.

Now the administration spokesmen are passing out the word that Mr. Hoover is ready to give consideration to a modification of the eighteenth amendment which appeals to him as more feasible than that proposed by the commission. Wet as well as dry administration spokesmen were found in agreement today that the position of the President has been misunderstood. One of the wets, a high administration official who enjoys close relations with the President, said that Mr. Hoover is still openminded as to modification of the eighteenth amendment and at the appropriate time will espouse a liberalization of the prohibition law which will be written into the Republican platform by the convention that renominates the President.

Predicts G. O. P. Will Ask Change.

"I predict," he said, "that the Democrats will advocate repeal and that the Republicans will propose a modification of the eighteenth amendment which will enable individual states to retain or reject prohibition, but obligate the national government to protect dry states from introduction of liquor."

Senator Simeon D. Fess of Ohio, chairman of the Republican national committee, who is a bone dry and who predicts that the Republican party will remain dry in its platform pronouncement next year, asserted that Mr. Hoover in his message did not close the door to any modification.

"I believe the President has an open mind on this question," said Senator Fess. "I would not say that he is keeping the door open for modification, for that would be to suggest that he is considering some revision of the eighteenth amendment. But his message rejects only the modification proposal by the Wickersham commission which would operate to keep liquor in politics. It would make prohibition the paramount issue in the congressional elections every two years. The President's message went no farther than disapproving that one proposal."

Meanwhile senate action on a resolution of Millard E. Tydings [Dem., Md.], proposing that the judiciary committee investigate the circumstances by which the Wickersham commission reached its conclusions, and whether any outside influence had affected it, was blocked by objection of Senator Watson, Republican leader.

It has developed that bitter disputes had taken place during the framing of the report. Five drafts were made before one that the members would sign was obtained. Even then Monte Lehmann refused to sign and it was only with difficulty that another was persuaded to affix his name.

It was reported that the dispute continued after the report was in type and proofs were being read. One member protested, it is revealed, that the final recommendations were at variance with the evidence unfavorable to prohibition recited in the body of the report.

Loesch Dodges Address.

There was a repercussion tonight of the furor over the Wickersham commission's report and of the rumors regarding it.

Frank J. Loesch of Chicago, a member of the commission, was advertised to address a meeting on the prohibition question at the Chuch of the Covenant tonight. This afternoon he telephoned the pastor canceling his address. Mr. Loesch explained that in view of the clamor of which the commission is the storm center he felt that his discussion of the subject might embarrass himself and others.

FIVE MEN ARE KILLED BY DRINKLNG ALCOHOL THAT COST 20 CENTS

Ashland, Ky., Jan. 22.—(AP)—A fruit jar containing 20 cents worth of filling station alcohol was a loving cup of death for five of seven men who drank from it.

The story of M. L. Queen, one of the survivors, brought about the arrest today of Marion G. Collins, 43, filling station proprietor, and William Bates, 17, an employé. Bates was released after an inquest, but Collins was held for further investigation.

The dead are: Charles [Buck] Brown, 45; Cyrus O'Brien, 54; Ben Fannin, 35; Dudley Gee, 37, and Beryl Wilcox, 28.

Bates told police he sold a pint of alcohol to a man who said his car was frozen up near by.

Queen, in an affidavit given by the police, related the story of the "loving cup" party held in a rooming house here.

"Fannin [one of the victims], said he could get some good stuff for 20 cents a pint," Queen said, "and I gave him a quarter. He left and came back in a few minutes with the stuff.

"We poured it into a quart fruit jar and diluted it with water," Queen continued. "Then we passed it around and made a loving cup of it, all drinking alternately. I didn't like the taste of the stuff. It tasted and smelled like perfume. I took only about a spoonful, and I don't think Boggs drank any more. We left then and the others got sick."

DRY LAW'S FOES REPORT $800,000 SPENT IN 1930

Washington, D. C., Jan. 22.—(AP)—The Association Against the Prohibition Amendment reported to the house clerk it spent $853,860 in 1930.

Receipts for the same period, exclusive of loans, were given as $711,381. The loans totaled $112,000.

BLIND PIGS RUN BY UNCLE SAM WIN DRYS' O. K.

House and Senate Defeat All Wet Moves.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 22.—[Special.]—Before the uncompromising stand of the drys, wet supporters in both houses of congress met defeat today in their efforts to strike out or modify legislative appropriations for the bureau of prohibition.

In the house of representatives a well organized attempt was made to amend prohibition bureau items in the appropriation bill for the departments of state, justice, commerce, and labor. But every amendment was voted down.

Put another way, the votes declared the drys to favor the following practices in the enforcement of prohibition:

That dry agents should have the right to tap telephone and telegraph wires.

That under cover dry agents may be used to entrap violators to obtain evidence.

That the prohibition bureau may continue to issue dry propaganda.

That the government may run speakeasies to entrap violators.

That dry agents may continue to buy liquor to obtain evidence and introduce this liquor in court as evidence.

Tydings Measure Swamped.

In the senate Senator Millard Tydings [Dem., Md.] offered an amendment to strike from the first deficiency a $543,000 item, including the salaries of 130 additional dry agents, but was shouted down on a viva voce vote.

With the failure of the house wets to modify the prohibition appropriations, the state, justice, commerce, and labor departments bill will go to the senate with the dry bureau's grant of $11,369,500 intact. This sum includes provision for 370 additional dry agents, making, with the 130 approved today by the senate's rejection of the Tydings amendment, the 500 additional agents asked for by Amos W. W. Woodcock, prohibition director.

Two minor victories came to the wets under the tutelage of Representative F. H. La Guardia [Rep., N. Y.] when a proviso permitting $50,000 to be used for dry propaganda and another affecting court jurisdiction of seized property were stricken out on points of order.

The strongest marshaling of the wet forces was on the amendment offered by Representative George H. Tinkham [Rep., Mass.] to provide that no part of the prohibition bureau's appropriation be used for tapping wires. When the vote came the wets were able to rally 78 members in favor of the amendment, one of the largest showings on the wet side of the house has seen.

Beck Speech Cheered.

The vote followed a speech by Representative James M. Beck [Rep., Pa.], former solicitor general, which brought cheers as well as the usual handclapping granted a speaker.

"Let prohibition be decently enforced," he declared. "Though the Supreme court has decided that there is no law under which wire tapping can be declared illegal, yet the opinion of the court virtually invites a law to put an end to this indefensible practice."

But the vote showed 78 against and 99 for continuing the practice of wire tapping.

The amendment to provide that none of the funds should be used for undercover agents was made by Representative Robert L. Bacon [Rep., N. Y.].

But the drys held otherwise and voted down the amendment, 62 to 101.

Representative Thomas L. Blanton [Dem., Tex.] particularly was active on the dry side and often interrupted to read paragraphs showing some prohibition benefit or some wet difficulty from the Wickersham report. He was challenged by Representative La Guardia to read other paragraphs of opposite portent.

Blanton Is Squelched.

Representative Blanton persisted—until this remark by Representative Beck:

"You were a jurist, I believe," said Mr. Beck. "Now, what would you have done if a jury in your court came in with a verdict of guilty, but when the jury was polled a majority of the members said 'Not guilty?'"

Representative Blanton subsided.

Amendments by Representative Emanuel Celler [Dem., N. Y.] and others to provide that prohibition bureau money should not be used to spread dry propaganda were attempted.

Representative Cellar charged that the dry propaganda contained false material. Representative Linthicum declared that the government had admitted an interest in speakeasies where violators were trapped, that one was run in Indianapolis, another in Peoria, Ill., that in one case the government had made a profit of $6,000, and that Director Woodcock intended to run more such establishments.

The amendments were voted down.

Dry Stand of Hoover Perils His Re-election, Beck Warns

Washington, D. C., Jan. 22.—(AP)—Representative Beck of Pennsylvania said tonight President Hoover had "imperiled the chances of his reelection" by his recommendation on the Wickersham report.

Beck, a former assistant attorney general, issued a statement saying he had advised President Hoover against a declaration of belief in the 18th amendment during the 1928 campaign.

"That he should now, quite unnecessarily, reaffirm that declaration is disheartening to me," Beck added, "not only as a citizen who is earnestly striving to end the reign of corruption, hypocrisy and oppression, but as a Republican and as one who did his best to secure the nomination and election of President Hoover, and would like to see him serve a second term under more favorable conditions.

"By his uncompromising declaration the President may not have injured his prospects for a renomination, but, in my judgment, he has imperiled the chances of his reelection."

Because there are other issues and because Beck saw a Democratic victory as "probably an irreparable calamity to the nation," the Pennsylvanian said the "unfortunate contribution to Democratic success seems to me a misfortune to him, the Republican party, and the nation."

Will Kill 18th Amendment.

In an analysis of the report, Beck concluded that it "has substantially advanced the day of our emancipation."

"Possibly the very diffuseness of the commission's report was to conceal its obvious purpose to destroy the 18th amendment," Beck remarked, addin git was obvious the majority were of the opinion it was "a supreme futility."

Beck termed the conclusions "inexplicable." He found them "a travesty," in that the individual opinions showed a majority "favored such revision of the 18th amendment as virtually to repeal it."

Representative Charles A. Kading, Republican, Wisconsin, an anti-prohibitionist, said today:

"The Wickersham report is a disappointment. It is quite generally conceded that national prohibition is a failure, that public opinion is against it, and that it cannot be successfully enforced."

Baker Stands By His Report.

MONTE CARLO, Monaco, Jan. 22.—(AP)—Newton D. Baker, member of the Wickersham commission, who now is on a Mediterranean cruise today authorized the following statement:

"The report I signed speaks for itself. What I think of the situation I have expressed. What I have to say has been written in my reports."

Likes Hoover Letter.

Columbus, O., Jan. 22.—(AP)—Dr. Daniel A. Poling, New York, editor of the Christian Herald, told the Ohio pastors' convention today that the Wickersham prohibition report "is high and low, wet and dry, makes everybody happy and nobody glad."

"I much preferred the letter of the President that accompanied the report of the commission to the senate than I did the report," Dr. Poling said.

Dr. Cadman said the Wickersham report on the liquor question shows a "violent state of mind and a variety of conflict."

"Prohibition lost ground after our first fatal trust to legislation and the falling off of our efforts in education on the subject," the speaker said. "Ninety-nine per cent of all lasting reform is gained only through education."

Labor Praises Dry Report.

Miami, Fla., Jan. 22.—(AP)—Ira N. Ornburn, secretary of labor's committee for the modification of the Volstead act, said in a report submitted today to President William Green of the American Federation of Labor, "The report of the Wickersham commission registers distinct progress in the return to sanity and temperance."

"While we join in the belief that the commissioners might well have come to a more harmonious position," the report said, "we nevertheless cannot fail to be deeply impressed by the fact that so many seem to have overlooked, which is that of the eleven commissioners only two can be said to stand unreservedly for the present condition."

$500,000 LIQUOR REPORT A TOTAL LOSS, GLENN SAYS

Raps Wickersham Inquiry at Bankers' Meeting.

Senator Otis F. Glenn [Rep., Ill.] told 1,500 members of the Illinois Bankers' association at their mid-winter dinner at the Palmer house last night that he considered the $500,000 spent by the Wickersham commission in its dry law investigation a "total loss" of public funds.

The senator, whose jab at the Wickersham report came as one of the most pertinent statements he has yet made on the prohibition issue, was the second of two important speakers at the dinner. The other, David Friday, economist and suther, cheered the bankers with a declaration that major forces are at work which will restore prosperity during 1931.

See Business Improving.

The dinner closed a day of discussions by members of the banking association, all of which were marked by indications of the belief that business is definitely on the upgrade.

Fresh from Washington, where the Wickersham report has caused a turmoil of dissension, Senator Glenn suggested that it would be wise for him politically to say nothing about prohibition, but that he believed something should be said.

He began with a reference to his vote in favor of the Tydings amendment to the treasury appropriation bill to ban the use of poison denaturants in industrial alcohol. With government poison blinding and killing citizens, he declared, such a ban would have been "wise and humane."

"A Total Loss," He Says.

"As a candidate I didn't know the exact solution to the prohibition question," he went on. "Everybody else in Illinois knew it, but they didn't agree. I admit now that I don't know the exact solution, but I do know that the $500,000 we gave the Wickersham commission to conduct its investigation was a total loss.

"Eleven members signed the report and nine signed individual opinions contrary to the report. We are in a daze. Nobody knows what to do. All I can say is that the question is never going to be solved by the radical wets and drys, but by the great body of sober minded people in between."

On the world court issue, now before the senate, Mr. Glenn said that he proposed to think "long and seriously" before he consented to allow the domestic affairs of the United States to be put in the hands of other nations which cannot solve their own.

Criticizes Farm Board.

The senator severely criticized the federal farm board's operations, stating that he believed the Hoover farm relief act to be "hopeless" as an eventual solution of the agricultural problem. He added that further funds were voted to the board in December to prevent a collapse of the grain markets.

While voicing his opposition to the report of President Hoover's dry law commission, his world court stand, and his farm relief plan, Senator Glenn ended his speech with an appeal for public support of the President in his efforts to aid in the business situation.

Economist Is Optimistic.

The statement of James A. Farrell, president of the United States Steel corporation, two days ago, that business is swinging upward, was indorsed by Mr. Friday, who spoke on "The Forces Which Restore Prosperity."

These forces, he said, are lower commodity prices, maintenance of employment and wages, an increase in the production of capital goods, and an aggressive bond market. Each of these forces, he said, will continue stronger in the future.

BILL TO REPEAL IOWA DRY LAW FILED IN HOUSE

Des Moines, Ia., Jan. 22.—[Special.]—A bill to repeal Iowa's prohibition laws was filed today for introduction in the Iowa house of representatives by Representative James N. Hayes [Dem.] of Dubuque county.

The measure, which is only 75 words in length, would strike out any reference in the Iowa code relating to prohibition of intoxicating liquors.

"It is the purpose of this act," the title reads, "to repeal what is known as the state prohibitory laws." Hayes declared. "It is nothing short of ridiculous that Iowa courts must rule, under the present laws, that sale of bay rum is illegal. The workings of the law which can interpret bay rum as an alcoholic intoxicant capable of being used as a beverage are a shameful abuse of individual rights and business privileges."

Hayes pointed to the recent report of the Wickersham commission as a "jellyish statement displaying a lack of courage to meet issues and conditions squarely."

Hayes' bill is the first of this legislative session to pertain to liquor laws.

MRS. THOMAS RUSSELL
(Peggy Boynton)

An annulment will be sought soon to dissolve the marriage of Peggy Boynton, 16 years old, of Highland Park, and Thomas Russell, 18 years old, also of Highland Park, who eloped two weeks ago as the result of a dare at a party in Waukegan. The proceedings, although contemplated by the parents, will be instituted by young Russell, he said last night.

The girl is the daughter of Donald S. Boynton, vice president of the Pickands-Brown company, 332 South Michigan avenue, and a grandchild of the late Charles T. Boynton, multimillionaire. She attends the Roycemore school in Evanston. Russell, a leader in athletics at the Deerfield-Shields High school, is the son of T. E. Russell, a North Shore Line conductor.

$150,000 FRAUD CHARGE BOBS UP ON YELLOW KID

Contractor Swindled by Weil on Races, He Says

Joseph [Yellow Kid] Weil, who is being held at Rockford with his associate, Fred Buckminster, on charges of duping a Racine contractor out of $5,500, was accused last night by a retired Chicago contractor of swindling him and his wife of $150,000 through a bogus race horse scheme. Weil and Buckminster were arrested in the Rogers Park district on Wednesday and were taken to Rockford to face the charges of the Racine man, Jerry Maule.

The Chicago complainant is Edward W. Gilsdorf, 68 years old, of 805 Junior terrace. He identified Weil through a newspaper photograph and a police bureau of identification picture, as the leader of a group of confidence men who fleeced him. He was unable to recognize photographs of Buckminster. Last night Gilsdorf, accompanied by his wife, departed for Rockford to meet Weil face to face.

Four Others Aid in Swindle.

According to Gilsdorf, the fleecing began at Hot Springs, Ark., and was completed near Reno, Nev., last spring. An "ex-judge," with a polished and manufactured Kentucky accent, and three other men participated with Weil in the confidence game, Gilsdorf told Capt. Patrick Harding of the Rogers Park police.

"My wife and I were driving home to Chicago from California last spring," related Gilsdorf, "and we stopped at Hot Springs. I was sitting in the lobby of a hotel there bouncing a couple of children of some other guest on my knees when Weil, standing near by, began a conversation about youngsters. He later mentioned something about horses, but I said I didn't fool around with them."

Well, according to Gilsdorf, replied he had no faith in the horses either, but added that an old friend of his, a former judge residing in Arizona, had won a million dollars 15 or 20 years ago on the races.

They Meet the Ex-Judge.

"If I'm not mistaken I saw my old friend in town the other day," said Weil, according to Gilsdorf.

"The next afternoon," Gilsdorf went on, "I was walking in the street and Weil met me. Down the block we met the 'ex-judge' who appeared not to recognize Weil, but finally did so."

The "ex-judge" during the conversation casually informed Gilsdorf and Weil, the contractor said, that he was about to lose his position as head of the handicapping committee of a racing association because he could not resist the temptation of passing good tips on horses to his friends.

About this time the three entered a bookie shop. The "ex-judge" advised Weil to bet, Gilsdorf said, and the latter did so, and won $5,000 for $3,000.

Gilsdorf became interested, he said, and after a week was induced to wager. Weil, he said, advanced him the money, and he bet several thousand dollars. Finally, Gilsdorf said, his winnings amounted to $150,000, and he was ready to collect. The bookie, however, refused, despite Weil's entreaties, to pay the money.

The bookie insisted he must see for himself $150,000 of Gilsdorf's own money before he would pay the winnings. Gilsdorf agreed to go to Chicago to gather the necessary amount. He did so, converting real estate, bonds, and other holdings into cash. Then he returned to Hot Springs with his wife. Again the bookie demurred at payment. He suggested the debt be settled at his bank in Reno, Nev., and offered to pay all expenses.

The Gilsdorfs, the bookmaker, the "ex-judge" and Weil journeyed to Reno, Gilsdorf holding his money. Gilsdorf was asked to remain with his wife in a mountain cabin, ten miles from the city, overnight. Weil said he would stay, too. During the night Weil, according to Gilsdorf, persuaded him to let Weil take the money to the Reno bank. That, he said, was the last he saw of Weil and his money.

MRS. BRUCE HERE ON LAST STAGE OF LONG FLIGHT

Mrs. Victor Bruce, English aviatrix, arrived at the municipal airport yesterday afternoon from St. Louis on the final stages of a journey around the world. From the airport she went to the Stevens hotel.

Mrs. Bruce, flying a Blackburn Bluebird, has flown more than 15,000 miles on her trip. She flew from London to Tokio, shipped her plane to Vancouver, and after her arrival in America, flew from Seattle to Los Angeles, to San Diego, Tulsa, and St. Louis. She was escorted from California by Mike Doolin, chief pilot of the Standard Oil company of California, who flew a Stearman.

FORMER POLICE CAPTAIN GUILTY OF TAX FRAUD

Given 3 Months in Jail and Fined $1,000.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Jan. 22.—[Special.]—Capt. Thomas J. McLaughlin, former commander of Troop A, state police, at Greensburg, pleaded guilty in federal court today to charges of failure to file an income tax report and attempting to evade payment of income tax on $133,689.

Judge R. M. Gibson sentenced him to serve three months in the Westmoreland county jail and pay a fine of $1,000 and costs.

McLaughlin was indicted last March on nine counts; he faced a maximum sentence, if Judge Gibson had cared to impose it, of 45 years in prison plus a $90,000 fine.

Offers No Defense.

Prosecutor Graham refused to accept it and Estep than allowed McLaughlin to plead guilty.

McLaughlin's salary as captain of state police was $3,600 yearly. Agents of the internal revenue department reported his income was: 1924, $23,000; 1925, $10,000; 1926, $17,000; 1927, $34,000; 1928, $26,000, and 1929, $21,000. The total, investigators said, was $133,689.

Sentence 12 Ex-Customs Men.

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 22.—[Special.]—Twelve former customs border patrol inspectors and two bootleggers were sentenced to prison terms today by Judge Edward J. Moinet in federal court after pleading guilty to charges of conspiracy to violate the customs laws.

The former patrol inspectors were sentenced to Leavenworth penitentiary for 20 months each. The bootleggers also were given 20 months each in Leavenworth in addition to a fine of $1,000 each.

Dry Spy Guilty in Rum Case.

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 22.—[Special.]—Because he apparently did some unofficial as well as official purchasing of liquor, Paul Swafford, undercover man for the Ingham county sheriff, was found guilty of illegal possession of three pints of whisky by a Circuit court jury today following his trial at Mason.

Swafford was arrested in Lansing by a motorcycle officer, who said he was speeding. When stopped Swafford was suspected of intoxication by the officer and taken to headquarters, where a search of his car revealed the liquor.

Swafford told police he had been investigating liquor cases for the sheriff and it was learned that several raids by county officers had been made on evidence supplied by him.

NORTHUP FLAYS CROWE REGIME IN CANAL BOARD

First Assistant State's Attorney John E. Northup, in his argument yesterday before Judge Joseph B. David in the Criminal court, charged that Timothy J. Crowe, former president of the sanitary district board, and his seven co-defendants, took more money from the public purse to build the north shore channel road than "Tweed did in his whole career." The prosecutor has been arguing for two days in support of a graft conspiracy indictment against Crowe and the other former trustees.

"The drive cost $3,000,000, of which $1,000,000 was for lights," said Prosecutor Northup. "Is the public going to stand for that?"

"The public is asleep," Judge David remarked.

The arguments yesterday had to be cut short because Prosecutor Northup became ill. Unless he recovers today the arguments will not be resumed until Monday.

HELPED HER DIGESTION MORE THAN ANYTHING ELSE

"Suffered over thirty years with sour indigestion. ACIDINE has helped me more than anything I have ever taken," says Mrs. Emma Green of Detroit, Michigan.

Just another of thousands who are astonished at the way this new prescription ACIDINE succeeds when other known remedies fail. The reason is it is different from other medicines. ACIDINE contains Japtase, which, in laboratory tests, digested 800 times its own weight of certain heavy starchy foods. ACIDINE neutralizes harmful acid, soothes irritated stomach and intestinal linings, helps end acidosis.

Eat, drink all you want. When sour stomach, gas, pain, heartburn, bad taste, heavy feeling, short breath, dizziness, belching, nervousness, sick, grassy headaches and sleeplessness trouble you, take ACIDINE. Results guaranteed. If not delighted, maker refunds money.

LEAGUE BACKERS TOLD EUROPE IS NEAR REVOLUTION

Plead for U. S. Entry at Convention Here.

The reluctance of public office holders to declare themselves definitely in favor of the entrance of the United States into the league of nations and the "sissyfooting" of league proponents were deplored yesterday by speakers who addressed 200 delegates to the League of Nations association meeting in annual convention at the hotel La Salle.

The fact that a great amount of public sentiment is against the league proposal will not deter the association from its efforts to build up public support for their cause, the speakers asserted. Their meeting here, attended by delegates from 30 states and principally made up of eastern league supporters, is held for the purpose of intensifying their efforts in this direction.

Says Europe Nearing Revolution.

Much was said at last night's meeting of the world-wide depression and its effect upon the league cause. Prof. John R. Commons of the University of Wisconsin declared that the gold situation is primarily responsible for the present world economic slump, and that in consequence Europe is plunging toward one of two kinds of revolution—communism or fascism.

"America will, of course, be involved," he asserted. "The premonitions are the world-wide unemployment, the poverty of farmers, the world-wide fall of prices, the tariff wars, and the inability to get a reduction of armaments. In the midst of these struggles the league of nations can scarcely get itself regarded as more than a piece of paper."

Charges U. S. Dumping.

The United States, the speaker said, is guilty of the same commercial practice for which the world is condemning Russia. The practice of dumping is now an avowed American policy, he declared.

"We sell our manufactured and farm products to foreign countries at lower prices than those charged to American consumers," he continued. "Even the farm board congratulates farmers that domestic prices are higher than world prices for the same commodity."

Miss Strawn, who presided at last night's meeting, recounted observations made during a recent journey abroad. He said the depression is being most acutely felt in England and Germany, the industrial nations, while France, Sweden, Norway and Denmark have been less affected. The present economic situation, he said, has advanced the cause of the league of nations.

"The international interdependence of all nations is becoming more and more apparent," he asserted. "The world isn't as large as it used to be. We feel the need of more friendliness between nations."

The sessions will continue through Saturday. Delegates yesterday were anticipating the arrival of George W. Wickersham, chairman of President Hoover's crime committee, who is to speak today or tomorrow.

Mr. Wickersham is president of the national association.

INDICT WOMAN BROKER AND AID; BONDS $850,000

The grand jury in voting twenty indictments yesterday against Mrs. Hilda Schroeder, 42 years old, former mortgage broker at 10 North La Salle street, set a record bond of $500,000 in her cases. The jurors at the same time voted fourteen indictments against John M. Naghten and fixed his bond at $350,000.

It is charged by Assistant State's Attorney Wilkie Ham, who has worked on the case for weeks, that Mrs. Schroeder caused the loss of more than $1,000,000 to persons who invested in her securities. Naghten was secretary of her company.

The difficulties of Mrs. Schroeder became known several months ago when she failed to meet interest payments on some of the mortgages she had sold. It was then discovered, according to the prosecutors, that some of the mortgages had been falsified. She is named on eleven charges of embezzlement, three of conspiracy and six of larceny. Naghten is named on similar charges, but not in as many indictments.

LEAGUE COUNCIL STIFLES LIBERIA SLAVERY INQUIRY

Evades Probe Into Affairs of Nearby Markets.

BY HENRY WALES.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

GENEVA, Jan. 22.—Slavery in Liberia, under investigation by the league of nations commission, was practically whitewashed and further inquiry was stifled today by the council of the league when the facts revealed that most of the blacks were sold in captivity in neighboring markets in Fernando Po, belonging to Spain, and French Gabun.

The Firestone company, whose rubber growing experiments in Liberia were declared here by some to have instigated the inquiry because it was feared that its success might result in competition against the British and Dutch rubber growers, was completely cleared by the report, which stated:

"No evidence was found that the Firestone company consciously employed any but volunteer labor, but this was not always the case when recruiting was subject to government regulations over which the company had little control and all the company's employés were free to terminate their employment at will."

Find Criminal Methods.

Regarding the most important disclosures in the report, that cargoes of Negro slaves had been shipped to neighboring colonies for sale, the report said:

"A large proportion of the contract laborers shipped to Fernando Po and French Gabun from the southern part of Liberia were recruited under conditions of criminal compulsion which is scarcely distinguishable from slave raiding and slave trading and frequently by misrepresenting their destination."

Under pressure of the Spanish and French governments, the council did not attempt to probe further into these slave markets and did not even request the Paris and Madrid governments to cooperate in ending the traffic.

The report blamed former Vice President Allin N. Yancy of Liberia and certain other officials of the Liberian government as participating in the slave trade.

Dr. Cuthbert Christy, a Britisher [who, with Dr. Charles Johnson, professor of Fisk university, an American Negro, and Sir Arthur Barclay, a former resident of Libera, formed the investigating commission], told the council that maladministration in the interior of the country was at the root of the trouble, but expressed doubts whether Liberia would be able to find material for the means of carrying out necessary reforms.

Discuss Arms Plan.

Dr. Antoine Sottile, Liberian delegate to the league, speaking for the Monrovia government, asserted that Liberia requires financial aid and suggested the league should make the country a loan to permit reorganization and a reform of existing conditions.

Dr. Sottile asserted that Liberia is ready to carry out the league's suggestions for reforms, but it declined to submit to financial slavery which provided a heavier burden than the slavery of men.

The council of the league discussed in secret for two hours tonight the date, place and president for the disarmament conference, but failed to reach an agreement. It is rumored that Charles G. Dawes, American ambassador to the court of St. James's, was proposed as chairman and that his name met with the support of Germany and several other powers, but this was not confirmed. Dr. Eduardo Benes, Czecho Slovakian foreign minister, is probably the most likely candidate for president.

MISSING NEW YORK JUDGE'S WILL LEAVES ALL ESTATE TO WIFE

New York, Jan. 22.—[Special.]—In addition to $6,690 cash, the farewell note and insurance policies found by Mrs. Joseph F. Crater, wife of the mysteriously missing Supreme court justice, it suddenly developed today that Mrs. Crater also had discovered in the same drawer a will in which Crater left all his property to her.

The discovery of the will, dated in 1925, was confirmed by Ralph O. L. Fay, attorney for Mrs. Crater. Earlier in the day detectives had inspected her apartment and learned from her about the will.

FRENCH CABINET FALLS ON PLAN TO STABILIZE WHEAT

Chamber Refuses to Fix Price at $2 a Bushel.

PARIS, Jan. 22.—(AP)—The French chamber of deputies tonight overthrew the government of Premier Theodore Steeg, thereby serving notice that France is not going to pay $2 a bushel for wheat when it is selling for 80 cents in Chicago and around 60 cents in Winnipeg.

The cabinet fell by a vote of 293 against 283 after an existence of five and one-half weeks, and straightaway prepared its resignation for submission to President Doumergue, who accepted it. Tomorrow he will begin interviewing political leaders in the quest for a new premier.

Deputies Fight Wheat Plan.

A government plan to stabilize the price of wheat at $2 a bushel started the fireworks. When the opposition began gunning for Victor Boret, the minister of agriculture, Premier Steeg staked the life of the entire government in his defense and lost by the narrow margin of ten ballots after scenes which were tumultuous even for the French chamber.

Louis Buyat, a fiery left centrist, charged that the government's premature announcement of the scheme promoted speculation and resulted in an increase during the week of 40 cents a hundred weight on wheat.

At first the government did well in the debate and appeared to have a chance to survive, but the climax came with a vivid talk by Pierre Etienne Flandin, who was minister of commerce in the former government of Andre Tardieu.

Draws Comparison with U. S.

M. Flandin painted a dramatic picture of the high price of wheat and bread in Paris, while the commodity is practically going begging in the United States and Canada. This appeared to make a deep impression on the deputies representing cities, who are charged with looking after the interests of the workingman as against the farmers.

RUDY VALLEE IS BOMBARDED WITH OVERRIPE EGGS

Boston, Mass., Jan. 22.—[Special.]—Rudy Vallee was showered with overripe eggs here tonight.

The crooner was rounding out "Give me something to remember you by" in the last show of the evening at the Metropolitan theater, when his request was granted.

From a section of the orchestra seats came a barrage of eggs that went whistling past the Vallee megaphone to shatter among the lesser lights of his band. Rudy ducked and escaped.

Police searched through the audience and routed out three young men. They were held to face disorderly conduct charges.

VALUABLE HENS STOLEN.

Sheriff Lester T. Tiffany of Lake county yesterday asked the Chicago police to be on the lookout for 17 pedigreed Plymouth Rock hens stolen on Wednesday night from the coop on the Millburn estate of Thomas C. Dennehy Jr., an official of Sprague, Warner & Co., wholesale grocers.

RECORDS MISSING IN PROMOTION OF SERGT. HERDEGEN

Civil Service Head Before Special Police Jury.

Examination papers on which Sergt. Jack Herdegan obtained his promotion are missing from the records of the civil service commission, according to testimony yesterday of Maj. Carlos Ames, president of the commission. Ames was a witness before the special grand jury which for a week has been investigating charges that Herdegen's promotion in the police department was purchased with $1,500 advanced by Jack Zuta, then the vice boss of the west side, and that the sergeant then became a collector of graft in the Warren avenue district.

The jury was still investigating the mass of statements regarding Herdegen's activities, although the sergeant has been released from custody and Capt. Max Danner of the North Damen avenue station said Herdegen is carried on the rolls as "detained by the state's attorney's office" by order of Acting Police Commissioner Alcock.

Tells of New List.

Maj. Ames explained that the Herdegen promotion occurred before he became a member of the civil service commission. The jurors asked him about the markings for the present eligible list for promotions to sergencies and Maj. Ames said the list would probably be posted within three weeks. This will be prior to the primary in which Mayor Thompson is a candidate and the impression was that the promotional lists would not be disclosed until after the primary. Maj. Ames said he would give the jurors notice if the list can be made ready before three weeks.

He had no information about what had become of the papers on which Herdegen was given markings that enabled him to pass, he said.

Other witnesses before the jury yesterday included a woman whose name was given as Mrs. Harriet Borneck and a Negro whose name was not revealed. The woman is said to be a neighbor of Mrs. Shirley Kub, the former investigator for Acting Commissioner Alcock, whose testimony was described as "sensational" before her disappearance, and it was disclosed that Mrs. Borneck had seen and been with Mrs. Kub since the woman investigator refused to return before the grand jury.

Hunt Missing Witness.

The Negro said he was a reporter for a colored newspaper and also for a loop daily. He was seized at the Kub home, 744 North Pine avenue, investigators said. His story was that he went there at the instance of Ned Ragland, a Negro who is said to be married to Mrs. Kub, but whom she has said was her chauffer. Ragland asked him to go there and take out the dog and canary, the Negro newspaper man said.

Miss Bernice Shaw, former sweetheart of Sergt. Herdegen and source of many of the charges against him, and who said Mrs. Kub threatened to have her killed if she gave evidence against Herdegen, has been driving around with detectives to places where Mrs. Kub might be found, it was learned. Assistant State's Attorneys Charles J. Mueller and Charles E. Lounsbury said they regard the arrest of Mrs. Kub as vital to the exposure of graft conditions of which she had knowledge and in which she participated.

Detectives Fail to Appear.

Detectives Thomas Roche and Patrick Burke, who worked with Mrs. Kub on confidential investigations for Alcock, were summoned before the grand jury yesterday, but they did not appear.

Capts. John Prendergast, Willard Malone, Max Danner and Francis Matchett were witnesses yesterday. Prendergast told of conditions in his district, in which the Rex hotel, which was raided Sunday morning, is located. Malone said he has but 14 men on each shift to do regular police duty in the central district and he cannot have them hunting speakeasies or gambling places.

Tennessee Banking Inquiry Silences Governor's Lawyers

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Nashville, Tenn., Jan. 22.—[Special.]—Tennessee's book of political secrets was partially opened to the public today as the legislative investigating committee dug under the surface to place responsibility for the loss of an estimated $3,700,000 of state funds in the banks of Caldwell & Co.

After an examination of Attorney General L. D. Smith, which reflected strongly on D. D. Robertson, state superintendent of banks, an appointee of Gov. Henry H. Horton, and incidentally left the governor in an unfavorable light, the committee voted not to permit cross-examination by attorneys for the governor, three of whom were in the assembly hall hearing.

This was a test of the attitude of the committee and indicates that there will be no whitewash applied here.

Refuse Attorney's Plea.

"We do not want any interruptions," said Chairman Walter Faulkner, when M. N. Whitaker of Chattanooga, one of the governor's attorneys, sought to examine the witness.

"This is not a trial. There may be a thousand men involved here. Henry Horton has no more right to have an attorney examine here than these others, and we would never get through. We will proceed."

Mr. Whittaker sought to appeal to the committee, but after they had gone outside and taken a vote they upheld their chairman.

The committee sought particularly today to find out what became of the $1,200,000 in cash and the $3,840,000 in good securities which the superintendent of banks said were in the Bank of Tennessee on Sept. 25 last, when he made an examination. This had all disappeared on Nov. 11, the good securities being displaced by ones of little or no value, according to the attorney general.

Caldwell & Co. Subsidiary.

It was brought out that the Bank of Tennessee was only a subsidiary of Caldwell & Co. and had nothing of its own but a desk.

"I am advised it did not even have a spittoon," said the attorney general.

On Sept. 25 the state bank superintendent, now the receiver, found the bank in a weak condition and directed that $3,800,000 in securities be put in it. This was done.

"Was there any investigation made as to where the million in cash went?" Mr. Faulkner asked the attorney general.

"I have tried to find out. I would be glad if the committee would help me find it," was the answer.

The questioning then brought out that after an examination of the bank resulted in a demand for the posting of securities that these securities were deposited, but later disappeared.

Highway Funds Form Surplus.

Mr. Smith, in explaining what led up to such large state deposits in such a bank, said that on May 25, 1929, he had written an opinion at the request of the governor on the power of the funding board to designate depositories for highway funds when such funds were in excess of what the banks might carry under the law limiting them to 25 per cent of their capital. Such surplus funds, he had written in his opinion, might be deposited in regular depositories.

How there came to be such surplus funds is all part of the political story. It came about during the extraordinary session of the legislature of December, 1929, when $29,000,000 in highway bonds were voted and then additional $10,000,000 and $5,000,000 lots.

Mr. Smith produced an interesting letter from his files. It was to Col. Luke Lea, one of the partners of Rogers Caldwell in many enterprises, and was from the superintendent of the banks, written on May 8, 1929, and showing that surplus funds existed. How it came in his files Mr. Smith did not know.

Asked what was the necessity of borrowing so much money at that time, he said that he only knew that the governor and his board stated it was for carrying out his highway program.

Tells of Drafting Bills.

The bills which were put through at the special session, changing the number of the funding oard, giving them power to designate depositories, were questioned. Mr. Smith said they were very simple, and could have been drawn by his assistants. He had learned since he left the stand yesterday, he said, that Capt. Henderson did aid in drawing some of these bills. They were never called to his attention, however.

He produced correspondence between Capt. Henderson and W. E. Norvell, attorney for Caldwell & Co., showing that Norvell dracted the bills and submitted them to Henderson.

The account which Mr. Norvell rendered to the state for $12,500 showed that he included these bills in his work. Further questioning follows:

Q.—Was there anything in the governor's letter to you which advised you that he intended changing the funding board by addition of one of his appointees? A.—No, I was not advised.

Q.—How soon after this extra session before the Caldwell & Co. interests made efforts to become custodians of this $29,000,000? A.—Probably the January following [the next month].

Q.—You advised the treasurer that the funding board had no authority to bind him on depositories? A.—Yes, sir. The same opinion was given during Gov. Peay's time.

Q.—Was it respected then? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Was it respected this time? A.—They did make the contract.

Q.—Wasn't that a violation of law? A.—I don't like to express an opinion. If officers of the state violated the law I expect to sue them. I am trying to find out about things and collect money from whatever source I can. I am going to do it if I can, regardless of who gets hurt.

BARONESS DIES OF POISON; REVEAL TRAGIC LOVE LIFE

British Diplomat Involved in Shanghai Tangle.

BY JOHN POWELL.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SHANGHAI, Jan. 22.—The death here this morning of Baroness Paulette de Pidoll has ended a tragic love tangle which had ramifications on three continents, involving prominent figures in European, American, and Asiatic politics. The baroness died of poison. Officials called the case suicide.

Baroness de Pidoll, wife of Baron de Pidoll, local representative of the German steel cartel, with headquarters at Luxemburg, left Shanghai for Japan last October aboard the same steamer as Sir Frederick Whyte, British adviser to the Chinese government. It soon became known here that the baroness was estranged from her husband, and efforts were made by mutual friends to effect a reconciliation, but without avail.

Envoy's Wife Goes Home.

Lady Whyte, who had been here with her husband, left for England with her young son. They are now reported to be either in New York or San Francisco.

Baroness de Pidoll and Sir Frederick returned from Japan Sunday. When the boat docked physicians were summoned aboard. The baroness, seriously ill, was taken to a hospital. She died this morning.

Three letters with instructions were opened following her death. One was addressed to Sir Frederick, another to Baron de Pidoll, and the third to C. H. Arnold, a mutual friend here. Sir Frederick, who resides at a hotel here, refused to make a statement. Sir Frederick, who served as president of the Indian national assembly at Delhi in 1925, is well known in the United States and Canada, where he served as a member of the faculties at McGill, Michigan, and Dartmouth universities. He was a member of the British delegation to the meetings of the Institute of Pacific Relations at Honolulu and Kyoto and was appointed political adviser to the Chinese government three years ago.

Friend of Charles Crane.

He was a close friend and associate of Charles Crane of Chicago, former minister to China. It is understood that Mr. Crane, while here recently, made an unsuccessful attempt to untangle the love affair.

Baroness de Pidoll was an attractive auburn haired Viennese and was prominent in local diplomatic and society affairs. Sir Frederick described her as "altruistic, with a platonic nature."

CON MEN MUST GO, LYLE SAYS; CROWD CHEERS

Judge Declares War on the Slickers.

the Lyle camp was sustained last night by action in the 2d and 39th wards. In the former, the Barrett organization, led by W. A. Davis, for several years Deneen ward leader, indorsed Judge Lyle. Three ministers, the Rev. George W. Hart, the Rev. Henry P. Thurman, and the Rev. George M. Martin, took part in the program.

On the motion of Committeeman Frank Kalteux the Thirty-ninth Ward Regular Republican club indorsed Judge Lyle at a crowded meeting in its headquarters on North Cicero avenue.

Albert Hits All His Rivals.

Speaking at a luncheon of the foreign language press of Chicago, Ald. Albert renewed his charge that all of his opponents wear the band of Thompsonism.

Thompson, he said, is "deeply interested in international questions" and "is taking over the powers of the Almighty and setting himself up as a controller of floods" instead of working for Chicago.

"Then," Albert continued "there is Judge Lyle, who is conducting, or was until a few days ago, a daily circus in Felony court, putting on a brave ballyhoo about driving the criminals out of Chicago or putting them in Chicago jails."

Then the alderman charged that George K. Schmidt was put into the race to split his (Albert's) German vote.

"There's only going to be one bit of dramatics come out of this campaign so far as I'm concerned. That will be next April when I shall take great pleasure in handing Big Willie his hat with the same sarcastic formality that he used a little more than two years ago when he and his council unlawfully counted me out of my aldermanic seat and he ushered me out of the council chamber."

Cermak to Speak Today.

A. J. Cermak, mayoralty candidate of the Democratic organization, will speak at a luncheon at the Hotel Sherman this noon when the effort to get out a big primary vote for Cermak in spite of his lack of serious opposition will be launched.

At a meeting of the Voters' Nonpartisan association in County Judge Jarecki's chambers sentiment favored the employment of ex-service men as paid watchers at the polls instead of the plan of enlisting volunteers used in past elections.

FINED FOR TAKING CHARITY TRUCK.

Marion J. Genant, 26 years old, who drove away with a truck owned by the Tower Town Food and Shelter on Dec. 21, was fined $10 when arraigned in Speeders' court yesterday. It was not ingratitude, but moonshine, he said, that impelled him to take the truck from the shelter where he was befriended.

SENATE MAY SUE TO OUST THREE ON POWER BODY

Walsh Favors Instituting Court Proceedings.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 22.—[Special.]—Senator Thomas J. Walsh [Dem., Mont.] today renewed the demand for senate reconsideration of the nominations of Chairman George Otis Smith and Commissioners Marcel Garsaud and Claude L. Draper to the federal power commission.

He argued that the nominations should be sent back to the senate interstate commerce committee, and announced that if the senate would agree to such a motion he would offer a resolution directing the district attorney of the District of Columbia to institute quo warranto proceedings to ascertain if the three commissioners were not now illegally in office.

The three commissioners were confirmed last December and were sworn into office. On Jan. 9 the senate voted to reconsider their names and asked that the President return their nominations. This, President Hoover refused to do.

Senator Walsh's action followed a senate vote to send back to committee the nomination of Eugene Meyer Jr., to be governor of the Federal Reserve bank.

The Meyer vote came on motion of Senator Smith W. Brookhart, insurgent Republican of Iowa, who demanded an investigation of charges that while a member of the farm loan board Meyer had used his office to depress the value of bonds of joint stock land banks and of further charges that Meyer's opportunity to sit as governor of the federal reserve system had been manipulated under cover and that he is overly sympathetic with international bankers.

ROBBERS CAUGHT; SUSPECTED IN GUN BATTLE KILLING

With the arrest of three men, two of them confessed robbers, and two women, police last night believed they had cleared up the murder of Robert S. Wallace, 41 years old, 2404 Ashland avenue, Evanston, an architect, who was killed by a robber's bullet during an exchange of shots between fleeing gunmen and police.

The prisoners are Frank Smythe, 23 years old, 2256 Cleveland avenue; Lester Frankl, 27 years old, 2222 Sedgwick street; John McSwaney, 1810 North Clark street; Geraldine De Phillips, 32, and Mrs. Elizabeth Tosi, 20. Smythe and Frankl confessed to 55 robberies. McSwaney denied commission of any crime. The women are believed to be sweethearts of Smythe and Frankl.

According to police, Frankl and Smythe deny the murder of Wallace, but admit they were pursued by police Dec. 20 at Western and Ardmore avenue, and that the officers fired at them. It was on that night, and at that intersection, that Wallace drove his automobile between a police car and a bandit machine and was caught between their fire.

JURY LOCKED UP FOR 2D NIGHT IN CLARA BOW CASE

Appear Unable to Agree; Try Again, Judge Says.

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 22.—[Special.]—Apparently hopelessly deadlocked, the seven men and five women jurors debating the fate of Daisy De Boe, on trial on 35 counts of grand theft, totaling $15,000, from Clara Bow, late tonight were locked up for the second night.

At six o'clock tonight Superior Judge William Doran called the talesmen into the jury box and interrogated Foreman Ralph Boynton on the chances of the jury reaching a verdict.

"There doesn't seem to be any at the present," replied Boynton.

The juror seated next to the foreman was questioned, and said:

"I don't think there is any chance of a verdict, your honor."

Third in line, a woman juror, thought a verdict "was not possible." Practically the same reply came from several others.

Asks Definition of Word.

At last a male juror said, "I don't think it clear to some jurors what you meant in your instruction when you said, 'with intent to permanently deprive the owner of property.' I'd like a definition of the use of the word 'permanently.'"

A woman juror interrupted to ask re-reading of the asserted confession Miss De Boe made in the district attorney's office last November.

Judge Doran then ordered the jurors to dinner. When they returned to the jury room for further deliberation there was no indication of a break in the deadlock. Since, however, it is within the jury's power to bring in a verdict on any one of the 35 counts, each based on a separate instance where Miss De Boe is charged with embezzling Clara Bow's money, Judge Doran ordered them again to retire, declaring he intended to keep the jury out until late tomorrow at least.

The girl defendant visibly brightened as the indications of a hung jury became emphasized. "I'll sleep better tonight," she commented.

Court Order Restores Son to U. S. World War Hero

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Jan. 22.—(AP)—Peter Christian Gross, 7, son of Capt. Christian Gross, world war hero and member of the diplomatic service, was returned to his father today. It was the first time in more than three years the two had seen each other. For the last 14 months the boy had been in the custody of James D. Burke at Staatsburg after Mrs. Gross had directed Miss Mary Burke, sister of the Staatsburg man, to take her son there. Gross obtained the custody of his son today on an order from Judge Witschief in Supreme court.

15 MEN ON ANOTHER MAN'S LOT MAKES PAY ROLL MYSTERY

Passersby paused yesterday to watch a group of fourteen laborers and a foreman in a vacant lot at 320 East 29th street, adjacent to the 2d ward offices.

The laborers, between periods of congregating around a brush fire and moments of joke telling, picked up shovelfuls of debris, walked a few steps to drop them, and then stared back at the casuals on the walk.

"We are leveling off this lot, taking out all bumps and clearing away the weeds," one of the laborers told an inquirer. "I don't know what it is for, but we get paid $5 a day and our meals by the city for doing it." Another laborer had heard the lot was to be included in the ward yard.

Information obtained in the neighborhood showed that the lot was not owned by the city.

A telephone call elicited the information that the lot was the property of the Burnham estate and was handled by the Benjamin N. Branch Jr. Real Estate company.

"I did not authorize any laborers to dig up the lot," Mr. Branch said. "There is no earthly reason why it should be smoothed out. Let it remain rough. It is in a poor location for a miniature golf course. As long as the city wants the laborers there and they don't move the lot away I won't complain."

HOLD INSURANCE COMPANY OFFICER ON FRAUD CHARGE

Thomas McClure of Wheaton, treasurer of the Chicago Fire and Marine Insurance company and the Presidential Fire and Marine Insurance company, was in the custody of State's Attorney Swanson's detectives last night pending grand jury action today on charges that he used securities of the insurance companies to cover his stock market gambling losses.

Chief Justice John P. McGoorty of the Criminal court late in the afternoon issued a subpoena duces tecum at the request of the grand jurors and Assistant State's Attorney Harry P. Gabel against the brokerage concern of Swift, Langill & Henke, 168 West Monroe street, calling for the production before the grand jury of some $53,000 worth of stock certificates said to have been pledged by McClure.

On the advice of Attorney Louis Blumenthal, the brokers refused last evening to turn over the certificates.

The attorney said that he was concerned with the civil litigation over the ownership of the stock, but that his clients, if forced before the grand jury today, probably would produce the documents. Prosecutor Gabel said he would take the matter before the jury and insist that the stock be produced.

According to the information given to Prosecutor Gabel, McClure started a brokerage account about one year ago. He put up certain bonds for collateral to guarantee his account, the prosecuter said. On Jan. 2 McClure realized that when the auditors came to examine the insurance company books this would be discovered and he then, according to Gobel, put up $53,000 stocks, which were in the name of Frederick O'Brien, vice president of the company, as substitutes for the original security. It is charged he forged O'Brien's name to the hypothecating slips as required by the brokerage concern.

McClure's account at the brokerage firm now shows a loss of $25,000, according to Attorney Blumenthal.

VARIATIONS IN SKIRT LENGTHS BLAMED FOR BUSINESS DEPRESSION

Pittsburgh, Pa., Jan. 23.—[Special.]—Women's skirt lengths, blamed for so many things, are held to be largely contributory to the business depression by Dr. Francis P. Tyson, professor of economics at the University of Pittsburgh.

Speaking before the Pitt Y. M. C. A., he told how women's styles and uncertain skirt lengths have upset the garment trade.

"Unless all women get together and decide whether skirts are going to be up or down and permanently," he said, "this and allied industries always will have seasonal depression."

HAVANA UNREST FAILS TO DISTURB SUGAR FIELD CALM

Cane Being Burned? Just a Spanish Custom.

BY EDWARD BURNS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MATANZAS, Cuba, Jan. 22.—This old Cuban city, capital of a province which is given over almost exclusively to the production of sugar, does not appear to be much worried over the complexities of government that are so upsetting the calm of Havana. The natives are as complacent as the oxen in the cane fields. Many are very, very poor and there is evidence of financial distress along each of the narrow streets. The natives are hungry but they are too tired to get stirred up over the political unrest that is a source of conversation every place in Havana.

Today we called on Mayor Benigno Gonzalez of Matanzas. We asked his honor to tell us about the efforts being made to curb the burning of cane fields by communists. Mayor Gonzalez spoke many words of Spanish to say that the practice of burning cane is as old as the sugar industry in Cuba. The mayor said, and his statement is confirmed by sugar men, that poor or lazy farmers sometimes get in a hurry to collect the proceeds of their crops. The mills underwrite the cane they expect to receive from the grower. If a farmer can burn his product and not get caught at it he is paid for his loss without the arduous task of harvesting the stuff. Hence the unwillingness of Matanzas to become alarmed about the political significance of a blazing cane field.

Difficult to Enforce.

Under the old Spanish law it is treason to burn cane, but there are enough cases of legitimate burning to make enforcement of the law exceedingly difficult. Mayor Gonzalez, as evidence that he was sincere in his explanation of the cause of fires, showed that a negligible number of soldiers are assigned to the sugar farming regions, the number being no greater than in times before things started popping in Havana.

At the central San Antonio mill in Madruga, a Hershey property, grinding began this morning. The mill will work 24 hours a day for four months, producing 3,000 bags or almost a million pounds of raw sugar a day. Thirty miles north another mill is grinding three times that much a month and eighty five mills will be grinding in Cuba before next week according to present plans.

Busy in Havana.

While the oxen and the men in Matanzas were happy, President Gerardo Machado and his administration were busier than ever in Havana. By a vote of 81 to 5 the Cuban house of representatives this afternoon passed the emergency tax bill, which for several days has caused all Cuba to forget such trivial violences as the dynamiting of the Havana aqueduct in an effort to cut off the capital's water supply.

Rioting students and communists have been given little thought during the rain of protests of many phases of the bill which has flooded the president and his cabinet during the week. The action of congress left open further opportunities for a change of front by the administration, but indications were that the only protest that President Machado has heard with an attentive ear is the one relative to the proposed tax of 10 per cent upon all moneys sent out of Cuba. It is said to be probable that this drastic measure will be greatly modified before it becomes a law.

Items to Be Taxed.

There was no indication that heed had been taken of detailed protests of the American Chamber of Commerce of Cuba relative to the proposed great increase of taxes on alcoholic drinks, tobacco, petroleum and its by-products, radio apparatus, profit taxes, income taxes, and numerous other items. The association pointed out that in the last six years Cuba has spent more than $100,000,000 on the construction of a central highway. This was paid for in taxes on the people, and now under the proposed tax law the people are going to be taxed for an article of luxury, if they own an automobile or truck, to drive on the highway which their taxes have bought.

It is all very interesting, and it might even be predicted that the oxen and the men of Matanzas eventually will hear about the new taxes and not like it very well. Already there is a tax of 11 cents for each 325 pounds of sugar, applicable to the crops of 1931, and it is proposed to increase the amount to 50 cents for the crops until 1940.

TWO CUBAN EDITORS PROTEST GOVERNMENT BAN ON NINE PAPERS

HAVANA, Jan. 22.—(AP)—A protest against a recent government decree suspending the publication of nine Cuban publications was issued jointly today by Rafael Govin, owner of El Mundo, and Count del Rivero, owner of Diario de la Marina, the two largest Spanish language morning papers in Cuba.

Both these newspapers, together with seven others, were suspended Jan. 9 for having "indirectly contributed to sedition in Cuba by giving prominent space to anti-government activities."

The statement, in part, follows:

"Article 25 of the Cuban constitution prohibits press censorship of any kind and guarantees freedom of the press, freedom of thought, and freedom of speech. The constitution expressly declares that this is one of the articles which can not be suspended under any circumstances, and the law recently passed by the Cuban congress suspending the guarantees made no attempt to suspend this article.

"It is therefore perfectly clear that the censorship previously imposed was in violation of the constitution."

Hunt Bandit Who Spread Terror Among Hotel Guests

Police last night were seeking the bandit who early yesterday morning terrorized guests in an apartment hotel at 240 East Delaware place. Fred Blankenberg, the clerk, was alone when he entered. He robbed him of $35. Then he stood by the counter and as seven of the residents arrived at intervals, he held them up. Finally he herded them into an elevator, took them to room 604, where, after helping himself to a cocktail, he left. Among the victims was Miss Carol Gerhardt, saleslady in a Michigan avenue dress shop.

Blames Husband's Suicide on Rum; Sues for $10,000

The Illinois prohibition act was invoked in a $10,000 damage suit filed yesterday in the Superior court by Mrs. Anna Murzyn, a widow, 1239 South 52d avenue, Cicero. The defendants in the suit are Frank and Karolina Krzysztof, owners of a soft drink establishment at 1325 South 52d avenue, Cicero. The suit charges that Mrs. Murzyn's husband, Sebastian, committed suicide on Aug. 8, 1926, while under the influence of liquor sold to him by the Krzysztofs.

Ames Student Fatally Burned in Laboratory

Ames, Ia., Jan. 22.—(AP)—Carl Kern of Cedar Rapids died tonight from burns received when fumes from furfural, with which he was working in the chemical laboratory at Iowa State college, ignited. A sudden burst of flame engulfed him, burning at least two-thirds of his body severely.

TRAP KIDNAPERS AS THEY TRY TO SEIZE CHILDREN

Informer Warns Police of Plans.

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 22.—[Special.]—A plot to kidnap one of the children of Horace S. Maynard, secretary-treasurer of the Senior Investment corporation for $100,000 ransom was frustrated Wednesday night by a squad of detectives who, concealed in Maynard's home at 15967 Avon road, arrested two men when they came for the child.

The police, told of the conspiracy by an informant, laid a counter plot to capture the kidnapers in the act. Maynard, who received his first information of the kidnapers' designs from the police, agreed to work with detectives in bringing about the arrests of the gang.

Others Arrested Later.

Two other men and a woman were arrested later and the four men confessed. They are:

Kenneth Harrington, 29, former soldier and Detroit policeman; George R. Spears, 45; Bernard Adusky, 31; Anthony Orlando, 21.

Orlando's wife Lena, 23, is held as a police witness. The kidnaped child was to have been held a prisoner in the Orlando home.

The president of the corporation with which Maynard is connected is Fred J. Fisher, vice president of the General Motors corporation. The Maynard's have two children, Horace S. Maynard III., 10, and Mary Elizabeth, 7. According to the police the kidnapers planned to abduct which ever of the two children first fell into their hands.

Met By Detectives.

Spears originated the plot and selected the Maynard child as the victim. Spears formerly was employed as a public accountant in the General Motors building, where the offices of the Senior Investment corporation are located.

At 8 p. m. the kidnap car drove up to the Maynard home. It contained the informer, Adusky and Harrington. Adusky remained at the wheel of the car while the informer and Harrington went to the door of the home. As a detective started to open the door Harrington thrust his foot into the opening. The door swung open. Harrington and the informer were gazing into the drawn guns of the detectives.

TRAIN ROBBERS HUNTED; VICTIM THOUGHT DYING

Bellefontaine, O., Jan. 22.—(AP)—Every community in this section was on watch tonight for trace of six daring train bandits who shot one passenger and robbed five others on a Big Four Pullman car as the train sped between Carey, O., and here early today.

Fired with a spirit of boldness reminiscent of the outlaws of another day, the robbers, masked and heavily armed, roused the passengers from their berths about 3 a. m. and made away with valuables worth $2,670.

They shot Edwin K. Nelson Jr. of Tampa, Fla., to silence him when he awakened from his sleep screaming. As the train pulled into Bellefontaine at a slackening pace they dropped off the coach, leaving three women and two men passengers herded into a drawing room and the wounded man near death in his berth.

Nelson was taken to the Mary Rutan hospital here. Big Four surgeons said he had little chance to recover. The bullet had pierced his chest.

The robbery victims were Mrs. L. G. Dearing of Chattanooga, Tenn.; Mrs. E. G. Zacharias of Atlanta, Ga.; Mr. and Mrs. Aleck McPherson of Cedar Springs, Ont., and E. W. Warner of Cincinnati, O.

Home of U. S. Embassy Official in Chile Looted

SANTIAGO, Chile, Jan. 22.—(AP)—Thirty minutes after a daylight robbery had been committed today in the home of Harry Norweb of Cleveland, O., counselor to the American embassy here, police arrested Aquiles Olivares Francasa, and charged him with the crime. Valuable heirlooms and some money were stolen.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE— WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute.

JUDGE WILL SET DATE TODAY FOR BROTHERS' TRIAL

Prosecution Is Ready to Start Case.

Judge John Prystalski of the Criminal court announced yesterday that he will set a date this afternoon for the trial of Leo V. Brothers, accused of the murder of Alfred Lingle.

The judge will also rule upon a motion by Brothers' attorneys for a bill of particulars, to be prepared by the prosecution, and outlining their evidence against Brothers. The state yesterday announced its objection to preparing a bill of particulars.

Two motions by the defense, and one by the state, stood out in yesterday's hearing before Judge Prystalski.

State Ready for Trial.

Assistant State's Attorney Charles F. Rathbun, who with Assistant State's Attorneys C. Wayland Brooks and James E. McShane will conduct the prosecution of Brothers, informed the court that the state was ready for trial, "today, tomorrow or at any time the court may determine."

"We want it understood that we are ready to proceed," Mr. Rathbun said. "We want the defendant to have every right to which he is entitled, in the preparation of his defense, and we understand, of course, that the court will give him every right."

Defense Attorney Robert E. Cantwell, Sr., said that the Supreme court has fixed 30 days as a reasonable period during which a defendant may prepare for trial, and Judge Prystalski remarked that what the Supreme court had said was that for the court to order a trial after 30 days was "not unreasonable."

Ask List of Witnesses.

The defense attorneys, in addition to asking a bill of particulars, asked for a list of the witnesses to be called by the state. This was granted without objection by the state, it being conceded by the judge and prosecutors that this procedure was clearly prescribed by the law. Judge Prystalski ordered the state to provide a list of its witnesses by Monday.

Defense Attorney Tyrrell Krum declared that he wished the court to warn the state not to present a "phony" list of witnesses, which he said was a common practice among prosecutors. Assistant State's Attorney Rathbun attacked the suggestion.

Another defense lawyer, Louis Piquett, said that the defense would not attempt to intimidate any of the witnesses, which moved Mr. Rathbun to remark significantly that prompt action would be taken by the state if any such tactics were attempted.

Piquett denied the report that the reason for Brothers' refusal to enter a plea of guilty or not guilty on Wednesday was intended to serve as a notice to gangland that Brothers would confess if funds were not forthcoming for his defense.

Both Cantwell and Piquett declared that the defense was without funds.

FRANCE ADVISES BRITAIN NAVAL "TRUCE" IS OFF

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Jan. 22.—The French government today formally notified Great Britain that the Franco-Italian naval conversations have broken down and that France means to begin immediately an independent program of naval construction based on her own needs, irrespective of Italian figures. Particulars of this program are not known here but it is feared that it may compel Great Britain to put the escalator clause of the London naval treaty into operation, thus automatically compelling the United States also to increase her naval program.

ITALY JAILS TWO FINANCIERS WHO LOST MILLIONS

One Held for 'Motive of Public Security.'

TURIN, Italy, Jan. 22.—(AP)—Arrest of Ricardo Gualino, Italian financier, yesterday by the so-called "political squadron" of the Fascist party of Turin for "motives of public security" was revealed here today.

In financial circles Gualino was said today to have lost heavily because of the world depression. A year or more ago his indebtedness to the Banca Agricola Italiana reached about $25,000,000, two-fifths of which was properly secured by collateral.

Bank Appeals for Help.

About a year ago the Banca Agricola Italiana was said to have appealed to the Banca d'Italia for help, having lost about seven times its capital. The Banca d'Italia agreed to assist it upon condition that Gualino's indebtedness was either cleared or secured.

Thereupon Gualino made an arrangement with the government, which was understood to convey to the government his valuable art collection of old Italian masters valued at about $12,500,000. The amount went to clean up the bank's affairs.

Gualino's fortune is estimated to have been well over $60,000,000.

Second Leader Seized.

MILAN, Italy, Jan. 22.—(AP)—Commendatore Panzarasa, a prominent business man, was arrested here today almost simultaneously with the arrest at Turin of Ricardo Gualino, the financier.

Like Gualino, Panzarasa was one of the leading business men of Italy. Until recently he was president o. Italo Gas and the Societa Idro Electric Piemontese, one of the most important electrical concerns in Italy. He resigned that post recently after some criticism had been directed against him, but he is still reputed to be very wealthy.

Involved in Oustric Failure.

PARIS, Jan. 22.—(AP)—The name of the Italian financier, Ricardo Gualino, was prominently mentioned in Paris in connection with the failure of the Oustric bank. He was questioned by a magistrate investigating that failure a few days ago and was to have given evidence before a parliamentary committee of inquiry.

ALL RUSSIA HALTS WORK AND PAYS TRIBUTE TO LENIN

Thousands Parade on 7th Anniversary of Death.

MOSCOW, Jan. 22.—(AP)—Soviet Russia today enjoyed one of the five holidays of the year in commemoration of the seventh anniversary of the death of Nicolai Lenin.

While industry, shops and business generally halted to pay a tribute to the great exponent of communism, theaters, halls and clubs were filled with workers, who listened to enthusiastic speeches extolling Lenin and the progress toward completion of the five year industrialization plan.

Although the mercury was near zero, there were numerous parades and other demonstrations and thousands visited the mausoleum in Red square, where the body of the communist leader lies.

Commissar Warns of War.

Soviet Russia is threatened with the greatest war in history, Commissar of War Voroshilov declared in an address to the congress of communist youths.

The soviet union, he declared, must organize the masses not only for the purpose of defending the country against inevitable intervention, but for victory over "the country which first draws the sword against us."

Three million young communists are in the congress of youth, he said, and 200,000 of them are in the army. He urged the entire membership to begin intensive training for defense of the state.

Surrounded by Enemies.

"Our country," he said, "is a socialistic island surrounded by capitalist enemies. These are difficult times and we must not forget the external factors all about us. The danger of attack is constantly growing and it is obvious that the international bourgeoisie are preparing to march against us."

He said capitalism, in the grip of an economic crisis, "blames the soviet union for all its misfortunes and is preparing for war against us.

THE LEGISLATURE AND ADMINISTRATION OF CRIMINAL JUSTICE.

State's Attorney Swanson in asking for amendment by the present legislature of the present statute against concealed weapons protests forcefully that the last session of the legislature "seemed more interested in passing laws that are detrimental to the enforcing of criminal law rather than a help." At this session the well considered bills for a more effective administration of the criminal law, formulated by the bar and supported by civic agencies, were all ignored, but the legislature adopted a bill which makes it easier to remove a case from a vigorous and responsible judge to a more complacent one; a bill to increase delay in final decisions of capital cases by making writs of error mandatory; a bill to permit the county board to compromise bail forfeitures; a bill to allow the defendant an appeal to the Supreme court in extradition cases, even when he has had two previous trials before the governor and in a criminal court, thus causing months of delay.

What does this readiness to relax laws in favor of defendants and neglect to enact laws asked by competent agencies representing the public security mean? Why, simply that organized lawbreaking has infiltrated politics and has more influence in legislature than good citizenship.

LIBERTIES IN INDIA.

The Indian round table conference in London has come to an end with the participants in good humor, which Mr. MacDonald esteems a gain, and with a hopeful plan for a new government to be further considered by the British and later offered. It will attempt the raising of India to dominion status, with reservations, retaining for Great Britain the control of defense and of foreign affairs and a supervision of finance. Otherwise the Indian states and federation are to have what is described as "responsible government."

Whatever concessions are to be made India in the direction of independence are due to the all-Indian congress, the followers of Gandhi. They were not represented in the conference and they do not indicate any satisfaction with the procedure or its probabilities. Sixty thousand of them are in jail. Their refusal of obedience and coöperation, their passive resistance, evasion of taxes, and boycott of British goods put the pressure on the British government. Without them there would not have been much change proposed for India. A new plan to which they do not consent will probably be futile, and yet they might be wise to take the form even if they did not think it contained the substance of independence.

It is the rule of self-government that it increases itself. The present status of the British dominions is one of unresisted progress toward precisely what they say they want. If India accepted a plan of responsible self-government offered by Mr. MacDonald and could fit the representative system into its own complexities it probably would find that the rest would take care of itself. The rights reserved to the crown would weaken and the rights asserted by the people would be strengthened.

PROF. DODD ON THE LEAGUE.

A letter from Prof. Dodd of the department of history of the University of Chicago will be found in the Voice of the People this morning. Prof. Dodd is replying to a recent editorial in which the success of Mr. Chadbourne in bringing about an international agreement for the restriction of sugar output was contrasted with the failure of the league of nations in such matters as the restriction of the output of opiates. We did not "give hearty indorsement" to Mr. Chadbourne's plan, but said his success was evidence that the league is a relatively ineffective agency of international action; and evidence, too, that the refusal of America to join the league has not deprived the world of American participation in international negotiations as league advocates said it would. On the contrary, American effort outside the league has been outstanding, for good or ill, in bringing about the international bank, the reparations revisions, disarmament and now the sugar cartel.

Mr. Dodd notes that Mr. Chadbourne was an active proponent of the league only a few years ago. If so, then the fact that Mr. Chadbourne did not negotiate through the league when he was faced with the task of obtaining an international agreement is not flattering to the league. A salesman of headache pills who does not take the pills when his head aches does not present a convincing testimonial for his medicine.

When Mr. Harding was first elected a majority of the American people favored joining the league, Mr. Dodd goes on to say. As he puts it, "it is a fair assumption that about half of the people who voted for Harding expected that he would induce congress to permit the United States to join the league." The Democrats made the "fair assumption" in 1920 and again in 1924, but by 1928 they had come to the conclusion that, though the assumption might be fair, it was not sagacious. There was no avowed advocacy of the league in Al Smith's platform, though there was in Mr. Cox's and Mr. Davis'. The Wilsonian foreign policy was and is unpopular in this country, not so much because Americans think they are better than other peoples as because Americans are convinced they are fortunate in their physical and political isolation and propose to retain their advantage.

American political instinct warned us that, if we joined the league, American strength and wealth might more easily be subjected to European ambitions and intrigue. Had we joined, we might have been used to enforce the injustices imposed upon the defeated and the smaller nations. If these injustices have been remedied in any part since Versailles it is in no small degree because American strength was not committed to the victors through league membership.

Mr. Dodd to the contrary, we do not hold that the league is "one of the worst contrivances ever set up." It may prove of great benefit to Europe in breaking up such war breeders as the traditional balance of power, though the evidence that it is doing so is still scanty. But whatever its value to Europe may be, to America the league offers less than nothing.

THE POPGUN ARTILLERY RANGE.

Rockford's representatives in the legislature, Mr. Leroy Green and Mr. David Hunter, have called attention to the fact that the appropriation of $600,000 for the purchase of an artillery range for the National Guard in the Rockford region has not been spent. They suggest that the appropriation be allowed to lapse and the money spent, instead, for the construction of armories where needed.

The proposal to establish an artillery range in a thickly settled region, where land values are relatively high, never should have been adopted. Not enough land for an adequate range could be bought with the money. The Rockford range could never be anything but a training ground for popgunners.

The qualities demanded of a good artillery range are great extent and variety of terrain. The sand hills in the region of Sparta, Wis., where a range exists, are admirable for the purpose. The preserve there is large enough to provide an inexhaustible series of problems in gunnery. The limited amount of land which might be bought near Rockford would provide a correspondingly limited number of firing positions and targets. Artillerymen, in consequence, would speedily exhaust the training possibilities of the region. Firing practice on the range would soon have little more value for gun crews and observers than practice indoors.

The Rockford region presents an additional objection. The area is well settled and farmers are naturally opposed to having cannon with a range of half a dozen miles fired in the vicinity of their houses and fields. The danger may be exaggerated, but the fact that the guns are handled by men of limited experience is not conducive to peace of mind in the neighborhood. The failure of the state thus far to purchase the desired lands is to be attributed largely to opposition of this character which deserves respectful consideration.

The proposal to spend $600,000 of the taxpayers' money to buy a popgun range and thereby cause needless anxiety to the countryside was unsound; the sooner it is abandoned, the better.

REGULATING THE BUSES.

The interstate commerce committee of the senate has delegated to a subcommittee the task of drafting legislation for the regulation of interstate bus companies. The committee hopes that the bill will be enacted at the present session.

The objectives of this legislation are far from clear, though it is likely that the committee is acting in response to the appeals of the railroad executives for relief from bus competition. If the bus is actually a more economical means of transportation than the passenger coach the effort is hardly deserving of praise. It is as if congress had legislated in 1850 to keep windjammers on the seas in competition with steamships. That kind of legislation is to be condemned in direct proportion to its success in achieving its object. It is legislation for higher fares and against mechanical progress. Incidentally, it is also legislation for unemployment, for it would throw bus company employés on the street.

Regulation of the railroads as at present practiced has resulted in the stifling of initiative on the part of railroad managements, which in turn is to no small extent responsible for the present unfortunate condition of the railroads. The extension of the regulatory system to cover bus lines will reduce the bus companies to the same level of impotence. Bus service will suffer and the public, which has patronized the railroads' competitors because they were giving more satisfactory transportation, will have to pay more for an inferior article.

The railroads' difficulties will not be solved by regulating the bus companies but by freeing the railroads of the evils of overregulation.

PREDICTING A DOGLESS TOWN.

[New York World.]

"The time is fast approaching," says Commissioner Wynne in his report for the department of health, "when the public will demand that dogs be excluded from the city." He softens the prediction by adding: "Perhaps no one will welcome this more than the poor dog, which is shut up in the house" except when taken out, muzzled, for an airing on a "2 foot leash."

Well, there is no law forbidding health commissioners to look a long way ahead. At any rate, if he seeks to make good his own prediction Dr. Wynne can reckon on a lively opposition. There are 231,632 licensed and numbered dogs in the city, not to mention bootlegged dogs bearing no license. Most of these are in one dog families, known and befriended by five persons in the family and by twenty-seven of the neighbors' children besides. Dr. Wynne need not expect all these friends to lose their voices when the canine procession starts for the lethal chamber.

The health department got word of 13,241 dog bites last year. Put that way the figure looks imposing. But consider all the 6,986,759 people who were not bitten. How many of the 13,000 biting dogs were adjudged rabid? Just 101. And how many human deaths resulted from rabies? Just one! Please do not suppose that in these remarks we are pleading the dog's cause. We are merely telling Dr. Wynne what he may expect in his campaign for an undogged town.

KNEW HIS ONIONS.

Workmen were making repairs on the wires of a Norwood schoolhouse one Saturday, when a small boy wandered in.

"What you doin'?"

"Installing an electric switch," one of the workmen said.

The boy then volunteered: "I don't care. We've moved away, and I don't go to this school any more."—Railway Clerk.

DISEASES IN AFRICA.

In the afternoon a talkie on hunting lions, elephants, and rhinos in Tanganyika, British East Africa; in the evening, reading "Tanganyika Territory, Annual Medical and Sanitary Report for the Year Ending Dec. 31, 1928," and a similar volume devoted to health work in 1929.

The afternoon's performance was no sort of preparation for the evening's reading. The reports show registration of births and deaths, vaccination against smallpox, laboratory work [both diagnostic and experimental], surgery, hospital facilities, clinics and health centers, health education, reporting of disease, preventive medicine and sanitation that is quite on a par with that done in some parts of North America, and better than that of some regions.

It is true that most of the reports related to the cities along the Pacific coast. However, what is being done in a health way for the Negroes who live in the bush among the lions and elephants compares favorably with what is being done among Indians in America.

This has been going on for about a decade and at least one generation is rquired to materially change the health habits of any people, savage or civilized. When the lion hunter goes to the bush country of Tanganyika in 1980 he may require a health examination before he is allowed to visit the disease free natives.

These reports throw some light on the source of certain diseases now prevalent in America. It has been said that typhoid fever was carried from Africa to America by slaves. If the natives of East Africa were ever heavily infested with typhoid they are not now. They drink badly polluted water, and there is enough typhoid among Europeans and Asiatics resident there, but natives have little. It seems more than possible that most Negroes in this part of Africa have become immune to typhoid. Another theory is that malaria originated in Africa and was spread to America by slaves. This could easily be true. The great disease menace of Africa is malaria. The malaria is likely to develop into hematuria just as it does, or did, in the worst malaria regions of America. But the Negroes suffer from it far less than the whites do. They are quite likely to become carriers rather than cases. All this lends support to the theory that malaria was a disease of prehistoric African Negroes and was brought by slaves to America.

There is no yellow fever in Tanganyika, but the mosquitoes that spread it abound. The slave trade of Africa involved little of the African continent except the west coast and in that region there is an abundance of yellow fever. The authorities of Tanganyika greatly fear that yellow fever infection will be introduced into their country from West Africa. It is rather strange that this disease has never spread from the west coast when it is well established in the Nile valley and elsewhere in Africa.

BOY LOSING HIS HAIR.

MAY BRING ON ANEMIA.

Mrs. X. writes:

1. Will you please tell me the cause of lack of acid in one's stomach?
2. What is the result of this condition if allowed to continue?
3. Is there any precaution one can take to keep from getting cancer of the stomach?

REPLY.

1. Analyses of the stomach contents which show too little acid should not be taken too seriously. While such condition may result from cancer, it may also result from anemia and from some conditions of minor importance.
2. Perhaps anemia may result.
3. Avoid drinking hot drinks and eating hot foods. If ulcers are present, or there are other disorders of the stomach, have appropriate treatment.

MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE.

Chicago, Jan. 15.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—A relative of mine has been out of work since last June and has not been able to make his payments on his home. The real estate owner has threatened foreclosure. Just how long would he be allowed to stay there after foreclosure proceedings? L. C. S.

If he has a warranty deed and keeps up the repairs and taxes, a court would be reluctant to put him out until the end of the fifteen month period allowed for redemption. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

CHILDREN'S CITIZENSHIP.

Chicago, Jan. 14.—[Friend of the People.]—My father was naturalized in 1916 and we, the children, were told to apply for ours individually. What steps are necessary? J. D.

Under the naturalization law the naturalization of a father naturalized all of his minor children dwelling in the United States at the time of his naturalization. The father's certificate is proof of the citizenship of the children, but if any child desires a certificate of his own he should apply to the naturalization service, room 776 postoffice building, Chicago, for instruction and advice.

INNOCENT CITY FOLK AND THE SMALL TOWN SLICKERS.

The distressing incident in Springfield that came to light yesterday showing big city folk amidst the perils and pitfalls of the small town is most disheartening to metropolitan dwellers. It fills us with dread of what may happen to other Chicago officials who may happen to fall into the unscrupulous hands of the small town slicker. The story of the fifty thousand dollars which was taken from our internal revenue collector by three country cutups who employed the dear old game of faro is very sad, and, of course, it seems a bit late to do anything about it now. But Chicago has many officials, any one of whom is likely to visit a small town or village, and we think it wise to warn them here and now of the dangers that lurk in the apparently innocent communities that nestle so lovingly out on the breast of the proud state of Illinois as well as adjoining states. It will hardly be necessary to warn any one about faro for the present, so we will proceed at once to

THE THREE SHELL GAME. This little game is played with three shells and a pea. The small town slicker will lay three shells on the table. He will then show you a pea, which he places under one of the shells, and bets you two bits you cannot pick it out. You have watched the shell under which the pea was slipped, and so you easily win the two bits. Now he tries again and bets you five bucks. At once you point to the shell under which the pea is hidden, and again you win the money. Now the slicker will place the pea under one of the shells once more and bet you five, ten, or twenty bucks, or, what have you? You gladly bet, as you are certain you saw the shell under which the pea was slipped. The shell is raised and there is no pea there. You lose your money.

THE GOLD BRICK. Be very careful of this trick when you venture into a small town. A smiling stranger will approach you and say he has a nice gold brick for sale. He leads you to a secluded place and takes out a package wrapped in a newspaper. He unwraps the newspaper and there is a solid gold brick. The sharper says the gold brick is worth several thousand dollars, but he needs money and he will let you have it for $3.75. STOP! Do not buy it! The gold brick is nothing but an ORDINARY BRICKBAT covered with gold paint!

TURNING THE COURTHOUSE AROUND. If the small town you are in has a courthouse (in Springfield it would be the statehouse), a slicker will saunter up to you and, finding you are from Chicago, will say: "Pretty big building that courthouse (or statehouse) across the way?" You, of course, will reply: "Yes, indeedy, that's pretty big, that is." Then the slicker will tell you that the courthouse (or statehouse) is turned entirely around at noon so that both sides of the building shall receive an equal amount of sunlight. To which you will probably reply: "What, clean plumb around? Gosh all hemlocks!" Then the stranger will say it's too bad it doesn't happen to be noon right then, but he has a friend who is the engineer of the building, and that for five or ten dollars the warm-hearted engineer will be pleased to start the machinery and have the building turned around. You hand the money to the handsome stranger and then you stand there and wait and wait and wait, but the courthouse doesn't budge. LISTEN. There is no way of turning the courthouse around! The man who said he would have it done and who took your money doesn't know the engineer at all. The Dirty Bum Will Run Off WITH Your DOUGH! And you could wait on the place he left you for two hours, or two weeks, or two years, but you would never see him again!

Tomorrow we will discuss the Fake Pocketbook Trick, the Phoney Gold Ring, and the Old Friend of the Family Game, all being clever and painless methods of the small town slickers in relieving unsuspecting city innocents of their surplus wealth.

CODE.

How quaintly young we were, my dear,
To play at love like that:
Wanting to say, "I love you so,"
To say, "I like your hat,"
Thinking, if others should be near,
To hear us talking low,
With this device they could not tell
The spell that gripped us so.

Like little children we were then,
But oh, those days were sweet:
Each commonplace with splendor glowed
And glamour filled each street,
As going to tea some cozy place,
Young hearts overflowing,
We tried to say "I love you so" . . .
Without others knowing!

THE EGG DEALERS are loud in their complaints that the hens have been so busy this winter and laid so many eggs that the market is simply shot to hellengone. We suggest that Mr. Legge circulate among the Plymouth Rocks, the White Leghorns, the Rhode Island Reds, and the Buff Orpingtons, and lecture them on the evils of overproduction.

DR. JAMES NAISMITH stepped boldly out before a great audience in Kansas City and proudly told how he had come to invent basketball. We'd like now to have the man who invented peewee golf to step front and center. The farmers who but for him would have sold their mortgaged acres to country clubs for real grown-up golf will cheerfully chase him nine miles.

"SNAKES are hard to raise," says the North American Review, "because they are very near-sighted, which is why they bite before glancing to see if you mean harm." And now we don't know whether to go right home and put spectacles or muzzles on our tame rattlesnakes. R. H. L.

HITCHED ON BEHIND

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

JANUARY 23, 1915.

PARIS.—A semi-official note says that a number of German aviators attacked Dunkirk, throwing eighty bombs. The victims numbered twenty, six of whom are dead. French and English aviators who chased the German airplanes brought down one. Its two occupants were made prisoners.

LONDON.—News dispatches on the war situation in Russian Poland set forth that north of the Vistula, in the vicinity of Lipno, the Russian advance guards are within 20 miles of the German frontier, while to the northeast the Germans have evacuated Skempe, about 25 miles from the Prussian border.

CHICAGO.—Mrs. Ella Flagg Young, superintendent of schools, after having the trustees "pass the buck" to her on the question of meeting the prospective deficit of $1,000,000, decided on prayer as the solution. "I am going home," she said, "and I am going to start praying immediately after dinner. If heaven has a million dollars it can't use, it will be gratefully received. I don't know where else the money will come from."

JANUARY 23, 1901.

COWES, Isle of Wight.—Victoria R. I., by the grace of God queen of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, and Empress of India, died at Osborne house at 6:20 p. m. yesterday. The end of this career, never equaled by any woman in the world's history, came in a simply furnished room. Around her were gathered almost all descendants of her line. With bowed heads the imperious ruler of the German empire and the man who is now king of England, the woman who has succeeded to the title of queen, the princes and princesses, and those of less royal designation listened to the prayers of the white haired bishop of Winchester as the queen passed on. Queen Victoria was born in 1819 and was crowned June 28, 1837, after the death of King William IV. She was married to Prince Albert of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha in 1840.

LONDON.—King Edward will arrive in London early tomorrow to hold his accession council at Buckingham palace. It is believed he will take the style of Edward VII., despite the fact that he signed himself Albert Edward in the dispatch to the lord mayor. The coronation will probably be postponed for a year, or until after the close of the war in South Africa. The new ruler was born Nov. 9, 1841.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—News of Queen Victoria's death caused mourning in official Washington. President McKinley sent a message of condolence to King Edward, and both houses of congress adjourned. All flags were hung at half staff.

CHICAGO.—Arrangements are being made by the British consul at Chicago, William Wyndham, and the Rev. James S. Stone, D. D., for a funeral service in St. James' Episcopal church, to be held at the same hour and in the same manner as the actual funeral in England of Queen Victoria.

50 YEARS AGO TODAY

JANUARY 23, 1881.

NEW YORK.—Intense indignation has been aroused by the scheme to consolidate the Western Union, American Union, and Atlantic and Pacific Telegraph companies and plans are afoot to form an independent company in opposition to the monopoly. President Parker of the Produce exchange said that body would coöperate in the move. At the Cotton exchange meeting William Woodward Jr. announced the formation of a new company with ample capital behind it, of which he had consented to act as trustee.

LONDON.—It is estimated that the personal estate of E. A. Sothern, the famous comedian, who died yesterday, will not exceed $40,000. Since his death it was revealed that for a year past he had been a great sufferer from a cancerous affliction.

CHICAGO.—Her Majesty's Opera company will begin a two weeks' engagement at Haverly's tomorrow night, when "Aida" will be given. Tonight the engagement at the Grand Opera House of "Deacon Crankett" will end and tomorrow Sol Smith Russell will come in "Edgewood Folks."

PROF. DODD ON THE LEAGUE.

Chicago, Jan. 15.—Your editorial of Jan. 14 giving hearty indorsement to the plan of Mr. Thomas Chadbourne moves me to make the comment which I am sure a great many of your readers made.

Mr. Chadbourne is a very able and, I think, thoughtful advocate of the league of nations, or certainly he was in 1920 and for some time thereafter. He now represents, I think, the larger banks of the country which have loaned money to sugar planters in Cuba and elsewhere. He and his clients have wisely coaxed sugar producers of the whole world into limiting and regulating production. You take this as a text for another attack upon the league of nations. May I call your attention to some of the facts in the case?

In 1920 the Democratic party espoused the league of nations. The Republican party refused to attack it. Thirty-one of the more eminent Republicans, led by Messrs. Taft, Hughes, and Root, published a statement in which they declared very strongly for the league of nations. It is a fair assumption that about half of the people who voted for Harding expected that he would induce congress to permit the United States to join the league of nations. You had here plainly a majority of the people of the country in favor of this much abused institution. But THE TRIBUNE, supported by such politicians and senators as Johnson, McCormick, and a few recalcitrant Democrats, undertook to convince the country that the league of nations was a contrivance of the representatives of the wicked peoples of Europe, assuming always in your references that the people of one country may be notably inferior to those of another, and, above all, that the British people are the worst people in the world. In repeated editorials and news stories that were not wholly correct you have undoubtedly succeeded in convincing the middle west that the league of nations is one of the worst contrivances ever set up.

Having carried so far your campaign of opposition to the league, on the merits of the case you now condemn the league for being unpopular and give as a reason for the success of Mr. Chadbourne's endeavor the fact that he had nothing to do with the league, which I think is not strictly accurate. It is a curious thing to attack an institution incessantly because it may succeed and later advance as argument against it the fact that it is unpopular. I wonder if the editors of THE TRIBUNE really mean for their readers to think of them as this editorial tempts them to do.

WHY STOP HIM!

Chicago, Jan. 19.—Why does the city permit an individual to roam around our loop district waving a Bible, shouting at the top of his voice and emitting nothing but a lot of noise? C. C. P.

THE TRACTION REORGANIZATION.

Chicago, Jan. 19.—The 1907 franchise under which the present securities of the surface lines were issued provided for terms upon which the city of Chicago could buy the property of the companies. It also provided that if the city did not buy and if the city did not renew the franchises when they expired the city would not give any franchise to any other company unless the other company would buy the property of the old companies on the same terms and at the same price that the city would have been required to pay. The prices and terms which the Insull-Halsey-Stuart people are offering to the first mortgage bondholders of the old companies are not as good as a cash settlement for the face value of the bonds, although a settlement according to the terms of the old franchise would provide more than twice as much money as would be needed to pay off those bonds in full.

Everybody had a lot to say when Germany called a treaty a scrap of paper. Chicago's solemn contract becomes a scrap of paper when the old security holders are obliged to accept a lot of new securities worth, in my estimation, less than 100 cents on the dollar instead of cash.

THE REPORT.

Fort Wayne, Ind., Jan. 20.—It took 18 months and $500,000 to get up the Wickersham report. If I couldn't write a better one in 18 minutes [and I am only a traveling man] I would want to go to hell with my back broke. S. N. KANE.

SLOW MOVING.

Chicago, Jan. 21.—If it takes the master minds of this nation 19 months to manufacture a thing like the Wickersham report, how long is it going to take the government to find a way to care for our hungry and destitute people?

A. S. RICHARDSON.

EXPENSIVE.

Bellwood, Ill., Jan. 21.—It seems to me that the Wicker whatever it is commission should refund the salaries and expenses paid to them and the proceeds be turned over to charity. They only told us what we knew years ago. Don't send your boy to college.

D. J. DANCHA.

THE BONUS.

Chicago, Jan. 16.—That thirty thousand or more world war veterans feel they need the payment of the bonus at once is attested to by the petitions submitted for the consideration of congress. Just what possible excuse the American Legion can offer for its opposition on this matter would be, if it were forthcoming, a statement of much interest. Why the administration should deny succor to thirty thousand or more of its regular citizens is just a little hard to understand in view of some of its other activities.

ATTORNEYS TELL OF THEIR DAYS ON CANAL PAY ROLL

Pay Too Low, 2 Lawyers Testify at Inquiry.

Additional testimony in support of the Chicago Bar association's contention that many lawyers employed by the sanitary district from 1925 to 1928 drew salaries without giving a maximum of service was given yesterday before Circuit Judge Thomas Taylor. Judge Taylor was delegated commissioner by the Illinois Supreme court to review the evidence in the disciplinary action brought by the association against 55 lawyers.

The information of the association, filed with the Supreme court, alleges that 53 of the lawyers received money for little work. Two other respondents are charged with permitting excessive pay rolls.

Four of the defendants were on the witness stand yesterday.

Fails to Stop Hearing.

Attorney Thomas J. Symmes, representing 26 of the respondents, failed in another attempt to stop the hearing on the grounds that the lawyers should not be compelled to testify regarding their services with the district.

The testimony which the Bar association regarded as the most important yesterday was given by Attorney Thomas P. Grant, who served the district from Oct. 15, 1927, to Sept. 5, 1930. He was questioned by Attorney Willard Matheny, representing the association.

"In the fall of 1927 I was playing golf one day with James M. Whalen, as one of the sanitary district trustees," Grant said. "Whalen asked me if I would like to go to work for the district. I replied that I would, provided the compensation was adequate. The next day I went to the district's office and filled out a card. Three weeks later I was called to the office of President Timothy J. Crowe, who gave me a letter addressed to Bailey Hoyne, chief counsel for the district."

Tells About His Service.

In answer to questions put to him by Matheny, Grant said that he did not belong to any political organization.

"Nothing was said about the hours that I was to put in," Grant continued. "The letter to Hoyne said that I was to be paid $416 a month. In the first week I was given various duties to familiarize myself with the work. After that no work was given to me, although I reported daily.

"Along in January I was told to look up the facts and law in four or five valley claim cases. I did that for about five weeks. After that I was not given any work, although I reported at the office several times a week. I was dismissed in September, 1928."

"Do you believe that your salary was adequate compensation for the work that you did?" Matheny inquired.

"No, I don't," Grant replied. "Considering the fees that I gave up when I quit my private practice, I lost money by working for the district."

Ivor L. Smith, another of the defendants, testified that he was on the pay roll at $250 a month for a year and a half.

"During the first half of this period I was underpaid," Smith said, "and during the second half my relative efforts to get work justified my salary. If there was scandal connected with the district I had no idea of it when I was employed. The Bar association hasn't been fair in this matter. If the president had information about the district he should have warned us. I would gladly have resigned."

Attorney Augustus L. Williams, colored, said that he had worked from Aug. 16, 1927, to Nov. 30, 1928, "familiarizing himself with eight claims against the sanitary district." He did not try any cases, he said. He was paid $5,166 for his services.

The fourth witness, Mayer D. Kaufman, who was in the legal department from March 18, 1927, to Nov. 15, 1928, said he reported to the office daily and remained until 3 or 4 o'clock in the afternoon. He made investigations and looked up ordinances, he said, but did not try any cases.

The hearing will be resumed today.

$50,000,000 of Bond Money Will Be Expended in 1931

The governments of Chicago and Cook county are preparing to spend between fifty and eighty millions of dollars from bond issue funds for public improvement projects during 1931.

Reports assembled yesterday from the fiscal officers of the county, city, sanitary district, and larger park boards showed that a total of $50,700,000 has been or is to be appropriated for bond improvements, while another $30,000,000 or more will be available for expenditure during the year if new issues are approved by the voters at this year's elections.

The effect of these expenditures on the prosperity of the community and, in particular, on the employment problem, cannot be definitely calculated but it was agreed that they will stimulate business and provide jobs for thousands of workmen.

Bond Funds to Be Used.

As tabulated by the various financial executives, the bond funds to be used virtually in their entirety during the year are as follows:

Cook county	$ 2,750,000
City of Chicago	29,616,600
Sanitary district	6,500,000
Lincoln park board	6,000,000
South park board	15,525,000

These figures do not include estimated expenditures in Chicago by the federal government, such as that of $21,000,000 for the projected postoffice building, or the expenditures by the state or the smaller park districts.

Most of the county's expenditures will be out of the $2,350,000 bond issue voted last November for the Cook county nurses' home, while another $400,000 will come from the highway fund balance.

Appropriations by the City.

The new city budget appropriates $15,518,000 out of the $16,360,000 bond issues voted last November for street widenings, new bridges, bridge rehabilitation, playgrounds, traffic lights and street lights. It also appropriates close to $5,000,000 from the residues of 23 earlier issues for expenditure this year.

One hitch in the bond program of the city is the apparent failure in several cases to prepare for immediate starts on the projects which the new bond money will pay for. An inquiry at the city hall yesterday disclosed that, although there have been demands for quick release of the money, much of it cannot readily be spent due to the lack of plans and specifications.

Sanitary District's Plans.

The sanitary district has approximately $6,500,000 worth of construction works under contract and to be completed in 1931. These are principally sewage treatment plants.

The district board also has voted to place on the ballot at the February election bond issue proposals totaling $36,000,000 for construction works. If passed by the voters, about $17,000,000 of the money from these issues will be spent in 1931, also chiefly for sewage plants to carry out the mandate of the United States Supreme court.

South Park's Spending Program.

The 1931 program of the south park board includes $3,000,000 for lake front improvements, $3,700,000 for park improvements, $1,300,000 for Grant park, $725,000 for completing the interior of Soldiers' field, $2,200,000 for rehabilitation of the Fine Arts building in Jackson park, and $4,500,000 as its share of the cost of the outer drive bridge.

The board also plans to submit to the voters new bond proposals amounting to approximately $13,000,000 for street and park improvements, a large part of which could be used during the year. These are the Randolph street viaduct and the extension of the outer drive and other bulevards. Other bond issues may be proposed later in the year.

The Lincoln park board has projects costing $3,000,000 under contract, while it expects to spend another $3,000,000 at an early date. The Lincoln park improvements are land extensions, boulevards, and its share of the cost of the new outer drive bridge.

TWO MORE AUTO DEATHS INCREASE 1931 TOLL TO 83

Two deaths yesterday raised the Cook county motor toll for the year to 83. The victims:

Fred Leach, 35 years old, 2120 North 73d avenue, Elmwood Park. Died in the Keystone hospital of injuries received on Dec. 31 when his automobile was struck by a Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific railroad train at the 73d avenue crossing in Elmwood Park.

STRIVE TO TRIM COUNTY BUDGET TO FIT INCOME

With demands for appropriations piling up far beyond estimated revenues, the finance committee of the county board continued wrestling yesterday with its job of making up the 1931 budget. The budget must be adopted by Feb. 5.

Departmental requests for funds amount to more than $27,000,000, while the board expects only $21,000,000 from fees and taxes and is not certain of that because of the muddled tax situation.

"Where are we going to get the money?" President Anton J. Cermak asked the committee. "Does any one here believe we will get more than fifty cents on the dollar from the 1929 taxes to be collected in 1931?"

Appeals for added appropriations came yesterday from officials of the county school for nurses, children's boarding fund, the Oak school for boys and the mothers' pension fund. There was also a plea for $30,000 to establish a new psychiatry clinic at the county jail. The committee expressed doubt as to whether the funds could be provided.

SALLY URGES YOU TO THINK UP JOBS FOR NEEDY FOLK

She Supplies Some Ideas on Starters.

A falling off in the number of jobs offered through Sally Joy Brown of THE TRIBUNE was reported by her yesterday. Again she urged that readers of THE TRIBUNE use ingenuity in creating jobs which would take care of work needed to be done in their homes and provide employment for men and women who need it.

Jobs for electricians, plumbers, carpenters, handy men, painters, upholsterers and others have been created by householders anxious to relieve the present unemployment. Miss Brown suggested that furniture can be mended and upholstered, walls washed, floors waxed, woodwork painted, electric wiring repaired and bookcases made.

Studio Employs Fourth Man.

The B. and S. Photographers' studio on South La Salle street, which already has provided jobs for three men through Sally Joy Brown, yesterday asked her to send some one equally satisfactory to work as a chauffeur for the manager. The job was given to a young man who has been out of work for several months and has two dependents, a wife and baby. The salary is $30 a week.

A. B., in the 6000 block on Addison street, asked for a shoemaker who could manipulate a machine. M. S., on East Chicago avenue, asked for a man to wash walls at 50 cents an hour.

Other Job Offers Received.

J. A., on the south side, asked for a man to put in pipes for his furnace. The P. sanitarium, on the south side, wanted a janitor. The L. S. company, on West Adams street, asked for a saleswoman, at a salary of $20 a week, to sell women's ready to wear clothing.

Sally Joy Brown yesterday interviewed M. K., an elderly man, who has become deaf and has been unable to find work of any sort. A respectable, fairly well educated man, he wants a job in which his deafness will not handicap him. He could fill a job as night watchman or tending a boiler, satisfactorily, he said. At present Mr. K. has no home.

Hoover, Smith, Coolidge Among Speakers.

lated from the outside world. These must be searched out and aided. In all its experience of more than a thousand emergencies the Red Cross has never been confronted by a disaster of larger proportions. It involves twenty-one states—three times the number visited by the great Mississippi flood of 1927. Already the Red Cross is caring for more than half a million people."

Will Rogers Gives $5,000.

Just before Will Rogers started his talk at Little Rock, Ark., it was announced that he had just given a check for $5,000—a half for the Arkansas quota from Mrs. Rogers; the other half for the Oklahoma quota from himself. Mr. Rogers then said:

"I don't know who I'm following. I don't know whether I am following Coolidge, Ben Turpin or Mayor Thompson of Chicago.

"Really, folks, I don't know what I am doing here tonight with these people making appeals for the Red Cross. I suppose tonight I am pinch hitting. Maybe I'm pinch hitting for Peggy Joyce, who can go out and get more money than anybody.

"Congress may help us, but you won't live to see it."

DELAY RED CROSS BILL

Washington, D. C., Jan. 22.—[Special.]—Seeking a way to kill or modify the Robinson amendment to the interior department bill, house administration leaders today decided to send the bill to committee and hold hearings before taking action.

They will invite Red Cross and other officials opposed to the amendment's appropriation of $25,000,000 to the Red Cross for relief to appear before the house appropriations committee and testify concerning the necessity for this relief fund.

House leaders will attempt to keep the bill from the floor of the house and a direct vote for fear that a growing sentiment in favor of relief might result in the amendment's adoption despite the President's known opposition.

When the bill finally goes to conference it probably will have to do so under a special rule, as was the case with the food loan. In conference administration leaders hope that a compromise at least might be reached by which the $25,000,000 would be cut in two and made contingent upon an equal amount being raised by the Red Cross through popular subscription.

Today's report showed that the Red Cross so far has succeeded in raising $1,127,000 of the $10,000,000 drought relief fund for which the drive is being made.

INDIFFERENCE TO NEEDY MUST END, CLARKE ASSERTS

Chicago's campaign for emergency relief funds has reached a wall of indifference that must be broken down if the minimum quota of $5,000,000 is to be raised and the thousands of destitute in the city are to survive the winter, Philip R. Clarke, chairman of the fund raising committee, announced last night.

"Despite the fact that applications for relief are constantly piling up," Mr. Clarke said, "the wall of indifference seems to be becoming constantly more impregnable. Total subscriptions have reached $3,913,726, with yesterday's collections totaling only $9,074. At this rate we would go along indefinitely before reaching the goal. In the meantime suffering is piling up. We are almost helpless."

Pointing out that every cent of the money collected is used for relief purposes, all overhead being carried by individual members of the commission, Mr. Clarke said "people who could give just do not understand the situation or else they refuse to think of it. A spectacular disaster like a flood would raise $5,000,000 overnight, but the continuous silent suffering of Chicago's poor does not appeal to the spectacle loving individual and it is left to the average wage earner to furnish the funds for relief. The wealthy apparently refuse to feel for their fellow men."

RELIEF FOR IDLE AND DROUGHT IN DEFICIENCY BILL

Washington, D. C., Jan. 22.—(AP)—New millions for immediate employment and drought relief were voted by the senate today in passing the deficiency bill, carrying almost $125,000,000, to become available immediately.

Chairman Jones of the senate appropriations committee estimated the funds would provide employment for more than 30,000 workers as soon as the legislation is enacted. The measure goes back to the house for approval of amendments.

Responding to an urgent plea by Senators Barkley of Kentucky and Caraway of Arkansas, both Democrats, Senator Jones accepted an addition of $3,000,000 for medical supplies to be sent into the drought areas.

GOOD FELLOWS! MANY FAMILIES STILL NEED AID

Cold and hungry families await your assistance, Good Fellows. A few dollars from a number of TRIBUNE readers will provide the financial power to feed, clothe and shelter a family made destitute by unemployment.

Many of the 277 families now cared for by TRIBUNE Good Fellows are being supported during the winter months in just that way. The smaller contributions when added together formed a fund large enough to assure a family the necessities of life and relieve it from the strain of worry until the wage earner is employed again.

Every cent contributed by you, Good Fellows, goes to a needy family and is spent for rent, food, clothing, fuel, light, small household necessities and car fare to seek work, based on a budget scientifically worked out by economists and social workers. The cost of administration of the Good Fellow fund is assumed by THE TRIBUNE.

Couzens Donates $10,000 to Red Cross Drought Fund

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 22.—(AP)—Senator and Mrs. James Couzens today contributed $10,000 toward the $350,000 Detroit quota for the $10,000,000 Red Cross drought relief fund.

In a letter to Gustavus D. Pope, chairman of the Detroit Red Cross chapter, Senator Couzens said that while he had voted for a government appropriation for the purpose and favored that method of extending relief to drought sufferers, he wished to be listed among the voluntary contributors.

PUBLIC WORK TO START THIS YEAR NEAR 3 BILLIONS

Washington, D. C., Jan. 22.—[Special.]—The President's emergency committee for unemployment announced today that construction work on public and semi-public projects involving an expenditure of more than three billions has now reached the stage where it is hoped building operations will begin during the current year.

ROBOT OF GLASS USHERS IN NEW ELECTRICAL ERA

Discoverers Have Named It Thyratron Tube.

BY TOM PETTEY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Schenectady, N. Y., Jan. 22.—[Special.]—A fat stomached little glass robot with a powerful digestive system has opened the door to an electrical tomorrow. It was born several years ago in the research laboratory of General Electric company, named thyratron tube, fed on a diet of volts, and permitted to grow. Now it is ready to go to work. The details of its accomplishments were revealed for the first time today. The thyratron tube makes it possible to:

Transmit electrical power over long distances by means of direct current—any one should want to—with a maximum loss of energy of less than 10 per cent. The longest commercial system now in existence is a mere 250 miles in length, is limited to 300,000 volts of alternating current and is considered unstable. The thyratron could bring Niagara Falls to Chicago and run a subway system, lighting the farms along the way.

Can Be Carried in Hand.

The tube has the unique ability of transforming the powerful flow of direct current back to the commercial type of alternating current, a glass bulb that can be carried in one hand containing the equivalent of 10,000 horsepower and doing the job now done by a giant rotary converter that would fill two freight cars. Then when it wishes to return to direct current a switch is pulled and a tube's digestive apparatus transforms the swirling electrical energy into a straight, arrow-like current. It is its transforming and control ability that is now being marketed and which is expected ultimately to result in greatly reduced power costs both to producer and consumer.

Laboratory scientists frankly admitted that the thyratron tube would revolutionize industrial electricity in the next decade. Few of them, however, would attempt to visualize its future. C. W. Stone, consulting engineer in charge of the thyratron, who is to tell the Midwest Power Engineering conference about the tube at a meeting in Chicago on Feb. 11, talked freely of its present accomplishments and future commercial possibilities.

Points to Transmission Costs.

"I do not like the expression, 'revolutionize,' or headlines about 'shooting power around the world,'" said Mr. Stone. "Revolution always means readjustment trouble, and sending power around the world would be prohibitively expensive and unnecessary. Even though we have demonstrated in our laboratory to our satisfaction that such things are possible, there still remains the high cost of transmission cables and right of way when sending power over long distances.

"You ask about moving the undeveloped electrical energy of Niagara Falls to Chicago. We could do it with the thyratron, stably and cheaply, but even then when you figure the cost of transmission and right of way against the cost of coal and oil it still would be economically best for Chicago to manufacture its own power at home. The use of the thyratron for long distance transmission of power depends on congestion of area, value of land and right of ways, and plant cost at point of production. Then it must be further developed in the laboratory.

Efficiency Is Increased.

"I had rather say the thyratron is going to take us into a realm of electrical efficiency hitherto unknown in mechanical arts. It will take time and we must feel our way and give its benefits to the public as fast as we dare. Right now we are pushing thyratron as an instrument to increase efficiency and control of electrical power in congested areas of great cities where huge loads must be carried."

One finds the thyratron in sizes varying from that of an ordinary electric light to a rounded, long necked bulb standing four feet high engaged in odd jobs throughout the laboratory ranging from opening doors to transforming thousands of volts of current. Dr. Irving Langmuir, now in Europe, is largely responsible for its present development. Dr. Langmuir and his brother adventurers in the real of the unknown turn their discoveries over to more commercially minded engineers once they have satisfied their curiosity in pure science. Their aids never say Dr. Langmuir or Dr. W. D. Coolidge "is working" on the thyratron or other inventions. They say he is "playing with" this or that discovery. Once it has reached a certain stage it is developed by cooperative research.

Director, Not Toller.

The tube is a glass bodied device up to an approximately two foot size, where internal heating sometimes makes it advisable to construct its body of metal. Inside is a bit of mercury and immovable metallic "organs." Its work is a director of tollers rather than as toller itself. The cost of construction is small, the present known life of two years upward. It is replaced as easily as tubes are changed in a radio set, and nobody knows exactly the limit of the load it will carry.

One of the present applications of the thyratron is to tie up the numerous power systems of a great city. Mr. Stone gave the reporter a description of this proposed service with the Chicago loop district as an example.

Loop Serves as Example.

"There are many miles of cable underground and a direct current system is in use (alternating current can be carried only for short distances underground) that necessitates huge rotary converters where the direct current zone ends, and numerous substations. The real estate value of the space used is enormous. Then there is the necessity for perfect coördination of the generators. If it becomes necessary to shift a load from one generator to another to supply additional power in a certain direction the power cannot actually be borrowed. Both generators are doing the same amount of work they were before. An extra load may cause a swaying that will result in a temporary shutdown. This is uneconomical and costly.

"With the thyratron from four to six times as much power can be transmitted over the underground cables, a complete tie-up of the entire power system can be effected at a minimum cost and varying amounts of current can be borrowed and lent as easily as pushing a button, with no danger of a breakdown at any point in the system.

Cuts Production Cost.

"The thyratron therefore cuts the cost of production, increases the stability of the system, eliminates shutdowns, and will gradually tend to replace huge, expensive storage batteries."

The first important commercial installation of thyratron as a controlling agent was made in the Chicago Civic Opera house, where it directs a system of operating the stage lighting from in front of the footlights. Lights can be dimmed, raised in intensity, colors switched, etc., on the stage and in the auditorium from one switch. The thyratron is at work in the Holland tunnel aiding the "radio eye."

TEST CASE PLANNED FOR NEW YORK GIRLS REPORTED "FRAMED"

New York, Jan. 22.—[Special.]—After three hours of debating the questions of law and expediency involved, a group of jurists this afternoon decided to reserve one girl for a test case and to send back to the Bedford reformatory tomorrow the remaining forty-seven of the wayward minors shipped down here yesterday to have their commitments legalized.

"We will take one girl before part II. of the Supreme court either tomorrow or on Saturday and get a decision whether she should be released on habeas corpus proceedings, whether her original commitment should be confirmed, or whether her case should be tried all over again with commitment to follow in legal form," Chief Magistrate Joseph E. Corrigan announced after the conference had broken up."

The forty-eight girls returned here yesterday and three others who are in the hospital are all that remain in the reformatory of the seventy-seven alleged at hearings of the vice investigation to have been illegally committed—some of them on "framed" evidence by members of the police vice squad and others on unsupported "confessions."

ALLEGES YEARLY ROADS SURPLUS OF 20 MILLIONS

State Hoards Auto Fees, Courtney Charges.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., Jan. 22.—[Special.]—Senator Thomas J. Courtney of Chicago, minority leader, as author of a bill to cut state automobile license fees in half, declared today that a surplus of approximately $20,000,000 a year for roads was now being piled up in the state treasury in a time of depression. He maintains that money from gas tax, license fees, and federal aid is coming in faster than it can be spent, and that state registration fees for motor cars can be reduced 50 per cent without interference with the road building program.

Senator Courtney, who led the fight against the gas tax in an analysis of road revenue, raises an argument counter to that of Gov. L. L. Emmerson, who recommended in his message that the present sources of highway funds be left undisturbed.

$39,000,000 Surplus Now.

"An astonishing surplus for roads is being piled up in the state treasury," said Senator Courtney. "We now have a Democratic state treasurer and now have access to the books and records, and I've had investigators compiling data on how the highway revenues stand. There is a surplus of $39,000,000 now in the treasury for roads. In two more years at the present rate—by the end of 1932—it will have grown to $75,000,000. Here is a brief table I have prepared from the data, covering the period Aug. 1, 1929, to Dec. 31, 1932:

Receipts—
Gasoline tax	$100,042,609
License fees	68,802,776
Federal aid	12,435,225
Unsold bonds	24,039,276
Miscellaneous	800,000
Total	$206,119,886
Disbursements—
Principal and interest on bonds	31,450,000
Maintenance	15,000,000
2,822 miles of new highways	84,660,000
Total	$131,110,000
Surplus by end of 1932	75,009,886

"If the state auto license fees were cut in half, I estimate there would still be a surplus of $61,779,350.

For Cutting Fees in Half.

"After cutting the fees in half the state would receive annually from all sources after 1932 approximately $44,000,000. Of this sum $8,560,000 will be required for interest and retirement of bonds and $5,000,000 for maintenance. It leaves $30,440,000 annually for the building of roads. At $30,000 a mile it will provide for 760 miles of road a year, leaving $9,440,000 for bridges, grade separations, and widening.

"Downstate autoists need have no apprehension that the promised hard road program would be curtailed or interfered with in any degree, for there would be plenty of money. At this time the object of every legislative body should be to reduce taxes. While I am interested in the proper division of license fees and gas tax moneys after collection I believe the primary interest should be to keep the money in the pockets of the tax payer where possible.

"Why build up a tremendous surplus in the road fund in these times of depression? The present generation has paid for them, but why should it be called upon to pile up a surplus? Cut the fees in half, and it would be welcome to the owners of 1,429,000 passenger cars. The Ford owner would pay $4, instead of $8, and the big car owner $10, instead of $20, or $12.50, instead of $25. Trucks, too, would be cut in half. Besides saving money for the motorists it would also help the automobile industry and be a step towards business revival.

"Just consider this: In Chicago alone the average car owner pays almost $1 a week in taxes on his car—$17.44 in gasoline tax, $11.25 for state fee, $11.13 for city license, $9.25 for personal property tax. These are figures compiled by the Chicago Motor club, based on official reports."

Report 2 Union Officials Indicted in Assault Case

Two officials of the Metal Polishers, Buffers and Platers union, local 6, and a member of the union were named in true bills charging conspiracy reported to have been voted by the grand jury yesterday. A fourth man not affiliated with the union was also named. The three union men are John Werlik, 1426 South Keeler avenue, business agent; Ray Grant, secretary, and Ernest Gage, 2315 Jackson boulevard. The fourth man is Bee Davis, 441 South Irving avenue. Grant, Gage, and Davis are alleged to have been hired for $150 by Werlik to attack Joseph P. Derrig, superintendent of the American Automatic Device company, 500 Throop street, because he had discharged a union member.

Lawyer's Father, 78, Is Held on Woman's Charge

H. F. Prendergast, 78 years old, formerly lockup keeper at the Summerdale police station and the father of Richard P. Prendergast, an attorney, was arrested yesterday by the Evanston police on complaint of Mrs. Rose Miller, 58 years old, 6205 Woodlawn avenue. She charged that when she answered an advertisement for a housekeeper at his home, at 323 Elmwood avenue, Evanston, he had attempted to attack her. She fought him off and fled, she said. The case will be heard this morning before Police Magistrate Harry H. Porter, Evanston.

SEEK STRONGER GUN TOTING LAW TO CURB GANGS

Crime Board Would Kill Search Warrant Rule.

The legislative committee of the Chicago crime commission is drafting a bill for presentation to the legislature which, if passed, will do away with the loopholes in the present gun toting law, Henry Barrett Chamberlin, operating director of the commission, announced yesterday.

"We have tried and tried to get the legislature to pass a concealed weapon law which will cover the present day situation," said Mr. Chamberlin. "When the bills emerged from the various committees there were so many changes, deletions, and additions that they would have been useless. However, we have not given up hope and our committee is at work now on a program.

Proposal for New Law.

"It is our program to have a law passed which will do away with the requirements of a search warrant and the ruling that a revolver must be within reach of a man to be construed as a concealed weapon."

The crime commission official referred to the present law, providing that even though a policeman finds a known gunman with a revolver he cannot charge him with the carrying of concealed weapons unless he first goes to a judge and gets a search warrant. Unless this occurs, a motion to suppress the evidence—the revolver—must be allowed when the case comes to trial.

The other objection to the present law which the commission will try to have amended is that even though criminals have weapons in their automobiles they cannot be construed as violating the present law unless the weapons are within reach.

Swanson Urges Change.

State's Attorney Swanson and his assistants called attention to the need of amending the law as a result of the discharge in court last week of three men, two of them with police records, because they had their guns hidden in a leather case in the hood of their automobile. It was held by the court that the guns were not within reach as specified by the statute.

The Coleman family, as everybody knows, is of Chicago's front page, socially. Young Mrs. Coleman, only son's-wife to Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman, is a "burnished blonde," very much preferred for her beauty, her charming "Bostonese" drawl, her responsive wit, and her brilliant hospitality which centers 'round the friendly Manor House cups. She is also noted for success in raising funds for the Passavant Memorial Hospital, of which she is a Board Member.

THIS young woman would rather give a party than play golf. She would rather hear her spacious old Streeterville home rippling with laughter than be president of the smartest club. Her art is to make a Coleman invitation the week's most important event to the younger society set. And one secret of her success is the technique of creating a companionable spirit with the coffee.

"Nothing can spoil the atmosphere more quickly than a disappointing cup of coffee," says Mrs. Coleman, looking so lovely in her ruby-red velvet hostess gown that you'd think almost any coffee would do: but no—

"I've tried all the blends and I've found that both men and women respond best to this satisfying Manor House flavor. It has a way of drawing everybody into a pleasantly intimate spirit that lets me just relax and enjoy my own parties. That's why I wouldn't chance my success on any other coffee . . . nor the peace of my home, for you know how the breakfast coffee can wreck the day, or start it beaming."

That is also why McLaughlin's Manor House is the only coffee served by 92% of our exclusive lake shore hostesses . . . . since in all their travels, and with all their wealth, they can discover no more richly mellowed bouquet of coffee flavors.

If you, too, would know why more friends linger in fellowship over this savory cup than over any other quality coffee in Chicago, serve McLaughlin's Manor House tonight. It is true economy to insure the perfection of your meals and hospitality with Manor House.

Tune in W·G·N every Sunday night, 7 to 8 o'clock, for the Manor House Dramatizations of the Grand Operas . . . with stars singing the principal arias.

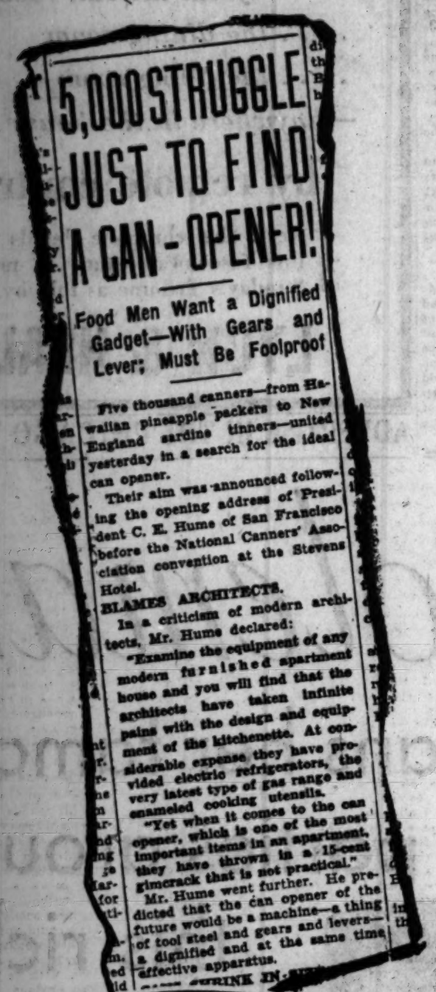
President National Canners' Association



5,000 STRUGGLE JUST TO FIND A CAN-OPENER!

Food Men Want a Dignified Gadget—With Gears and Lever; Must Be Foolproof

Five thousand canners—from Hawaiian pineapple packers to New England sardine tinners—united yesterday in a search for the ideal can opener.

Their aim was announced following the opening address of President C. E. Hume of San Francisco before the National Canners' Association convention at the Stevens Hotel.

BLAMES ARCHITECTS.

In a criticism of modern architects, Mr. Hume declared:

"Examine the equipment of any modern furnished apartment house and you will find that the architects have taken infinite pains with the design and equipment of the kitchenette. At considerable expense they have provided electric refrigerators, the very latest type of gas range and enameled cooking utensils.

"Yet when it comes to the can opener, which is one of the most important items in an apartment, they have thrown in a 15-cent gimcrack that is not practical."

Mr. Hume went further. He predicted that the can opener of the future would be a machine—a thing of tool steel and gears and levers—a dignified and at the same time effective apparatus.

NEW KIND of CAN OPENER

You Are Looking for

Just a Twist of the Wrist Banishes Old Style Can Openers to the Scrap Heap!

THIS is unquestionably a canned-food age. Everything from sweet potatoes and chicken, to ham and asparagus, is now offered to the public safely sealed in tin. The canning industry has done its part to make foods available all-year-round at a real saving in cost to the consumer. And every day in practically every home canned food is eaten . . . and cans are being opened the old, laborious way with the old-style can opener.

Just a twist of your wrist now banishes old-style can openers to the scrap heap. This is the amazing good news that a St. Louis inventor brings to the American public. For here at last is a can opener that doesn't just cut a ragged hole around the edge of the can. It lifts the entire top completely out, clean as a whistle! The invention holds the can—opens it—flips up the lid so you can grab it—and gives you back the can without a drop spilled, without any jagged edges to hack your fingers—all in a few seconds!

A Little Can Opening Machine for the Home

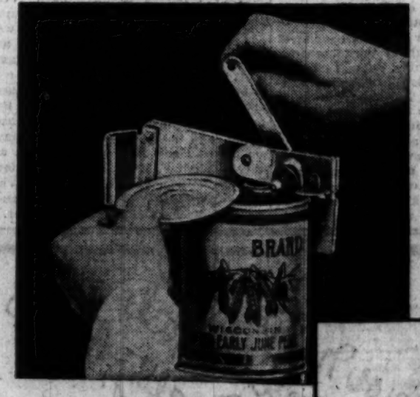
No wonder women dislike the old-style can opener. It's really the last relic of barbarism in the American home. With it, food is spilled. Time is wasted. Every housewife will tell you that it's anything but fun to stab and jab and finally hack off the lid of a can the old-style way. But this new way is so simple that a ten-year old child can do it easily. Yet it is so small a man can slip it in his pocket. So inexpensive, too, that every home can afford it.

Unlike all other devices, this little can opening machine hangs on the wall. You simply put the can, any size or shape, into it and turn the crank. Almost instantly the job is done, slick, smooth and clean. It holds the can for you and is ideal for opening hot cans. Also perfect for opening foods frozen in the can as there is no jagged edge to keep foods from slipping right out.

Inexpensive . . . Guaranteed for Five Years!

Although it works like magic, this new invention is inexpensive. The manufacturer absolutely guarantees it for five full years of perfect service. It is made of solid steel and should last a lifetime if given just ordinary care.

Any one interested in complete details of this invention is invited to write to the distributor whose address is shown below or to the manufacturer, without obligation. Remember, there is only one perfect can opener that meets all requirements and it is called SPEEDO.



SLICK . . . SMOOTH . . . CLEAN . . .

Speedo cuts top not merely OFF but OUT. Juices can't spill. No jagged edges to snag fingers. No fuss or muss. No waste, all food pours right out without scraping.

What Experts Say:

Canners, domestic science teachers, experts everywhere, as well as housewives by the thousands say that Speedo is the perfect can opener. Read below what a few of these experts have to say.

CANNERS

"We employ expert can cutters. Each man averages about 3,500 cans daily or about 100,000 monthly. Speedo can openers are used and last at least one month under this great strain. If the average housewife cuts four cans each day for thirty days in the month, her "Speedo" would still be in operation 70 years after she started using it. We could not possibly expect better service."

Canner Says SPEEDO Is BEST

"In our business we cut a great many cans and have had many kinds of can openers in the past. Speedo, however, is the best we ever had in the place and we are glad to endorse it and heartily recommend it."

Perfection Canning Co., Inc.,
Canners, Newark, N. Y.

"We have in use at the present time a total of 48 of your Speedo Can Openers. We find them a great success and also a saving over the old-style of can openers."

HOME ECONOMICS EXPERTS

Expert Wouldn't Take $50.00 for Her Speedo

"I know the happiness and pleasure one gets from the use of the wonderful Speedo Can Openers. Frankly, I would not take $50 for mine and have to go back to the use of any other one on the market that I know of."

Ida M. Chitwood,
Nationally Known Home Economics Expert.

Speedo Outlasts Dozen Old-Style Can Openers

"It's a marvelous device, this new Speedo Can Opener. It is economical, too, and that is an added attraction to the thrifty family for it outlasts a dozen of the old-style openers. It's a modern time and work saver, and that's the highest praise I could give any kitchen appliance."

Prudence Penny, New York,

ICE CREAM ONE DISH AMERICANS CLAIM AS OWN

Is to Us What Beef's to English.

BY BETTY BROWNING.

What is the national dish of these United States? What food is as peculiarly American as ravioli and spaghetti are Italian, roast beef English, and bortsch Russian? What strictly American delicacy have we been able to devise in our relatively brief national existence, as compared with the long history of man's eating?

In many quarters this question would provoke the answer—pies. Pies have many arguments in their favor, and American pies are, after all, but a variation on the classic English theme of Jack Horner's Christmas pie and its Queen of Heart's tarts.

Don't Forget the Waffle.

Then consider the waffle. Again many votes, but justice compels us, who have eaten and admired, to give credit where credit is due. And undoubtedly the south rather than the country at large is responsible for the waffle. Pork and beans, too, although they have long since been a national food, are Boston's contribution to the art of cookery.

Nor must ham and eggs be overlooked. This succulent combination owes its fame to American cooks, though the two principal ingredients date back to the cuisine of prehistoric man, but it remained for Americans to concoct the dish known as "ham and" the world over.

But which of these dishes compares in favor, popularity, versatility, and purity of American tradition with ice cream? To speak only of its food qualities—smoothness, softness, sweetness, coolness—such words are used by poets in describing the ambrosial nectar of the gods!

A Versatile Dish, Ice Cream.

Ice cream may be served in a pyramid illuminated with shining lights, decorated with rare pastries, and spun sugar to crown a banquet fit for a king, or with true American adaptability it will supply the same delicious flavor in a schoolboy's ice cream cone.

Even the fact that it is approved as healthful cannot spoil ice cream as a treat for children condemned to a ceaseless round of rice puddings, junkets and tapioca. Ice cream is often the first food fed to convalescents, yet suffers no loss of following later through unpleasant associations. To young Americans of high school age it supplies a comparatively harmless means of going on a gastronomic debauch, combined with the sauces and nuts of a Buffalo sundae!

Ice cream, like most things American, has its European background, but in this case the background is so hazy as to emphasize the American development of the dish.

Dates from Columbus' Time.

Frozen desserts of an ambiguous nature were known to Italians about the time that Columbus discovered America, and Catherine de Medici brought an ice cream outfit to Paris with her as part of her dowry when she married the French dauphin. But any one who has eaten spumoni, the Italian ice cream, will hardly give Italy credit for inventing our sort of ice cream.

In the eighteenth century ice cream was served as a rare delicacy to English lords and ladies, but the difficulties experienced by present day English in supplying American ice cream to our tourists should allay any suspicion that they are responsible for the dish as we know it.

The true history of ice cream dates from the days of Dolly Madison, the White House's most famous hostess, who about the year 1810 served ice cream at a presidential reception.

Dolly Madison Put It Over.

Isolated instances of the serving of ice cream in America antedate the dashing Dolly's historic party—there is even a hint that George Washington tasted the delicacy at a fête given by Mrs. Alexander Hamilton—but Dolly first put the official stamp of approval on the dish.

Ice cream conquered the country only gradually. The first ice cream factory was erected in Maryland in 1851, but within memory a custardy substitute was served in New Orleans.

STRAWBERRIES IN JANUARY NOT SO EXPENSIVE NOW

Only a few years ago strawberries in January were somewhat of a luxury and easily recognized as such by the price per quart, or per pint.

"They have been a dollar per quart and I can remember when they were that for a pint," says W. H. Hall, government market news service man at the South Water market, where Chicago's fruits and vegetables are gathered for final distribution to retail outlets.

He reports that in the last two or three years Florida growers have been shipping in carload lots in contrast to former shipments which came in a "pony" refrigerator lots of a few dozen quarts each. The Florida berry crops are in the height of their bearing, he says, and will continue to supply northern markets until the Louisiana crop begin in April.

Those southern strawberries should be selling for 20 to 25 cents per pint, is his opinion. A price of 40 cents per quart, he says, enables the middle class to enjoy what once was a luxury even for those who did not watch household budgets closely.

Yes, Lady, the A. M. Scribes Are Normal

BY FRED PASLEY.

Dear sir: The Woman's Forum of Glen Ellyn had an interesting, though informal discussion last week on the subject of morning newspapermen, and how they live. My understanding is that they go to work when the rest of us are going to sleep, never see a sun rise, and are altogether a different species from the normal human race. Can you enlighten me?
MRS. ESTELLE A. KRUMPACKER.

I think, Mrs. Krumpacker, that the forum has been slightly misinformed. I don't know of a single newspaperman in Chicago who has not seen a sun rise, and while it is true that they reverse the clock, as it were, in the pursuit of their daily bread, I have found them about the same, by and large, as other members of the normal human race with whom I have had contact. I can enlighten you best, perhaps, as to the private life of a newspaperman by turning to my own diary. Quoting:

TUESDAY, JAN. 20, 1931.
Arose at 11:30 a. m.
11:35: Put the dogs out.
11:40: Stoked the furnace; emptied ashes.
11:50: Unstopped phone and front doorbell.
11:55: Shoveled snow from sidewalks. Emmet, the mailman, arrived with bills from gas and electric light company, telephone company, Hartman's, the Hub, and Field's, and a letter from Milgrim's inviting us to open an account there, and another from a motor car company explaining their new 1931 eight cylinder, custom bodied model.

Those entries, I am sure, Mrs. Krumpacker, indicate that a newspaperman's existence differs not a whit from that of his fellow man who commutes and labors in the daylight hours. I could quote further from my diary and show you where, on Tuesday, I even had two soft boiled eggs, bacon, and toast for breakfast. The date is fresh in my memory for after breakfast I was reading Mrs. Anna Steese Richardson's 'Standard Etiquette'; to be specific, chapter XX., or 'Good Manners in the Home,' in which I encountered several paragraphs with illustrations on correct and incorrect ways of eating food.

"Eating corn on the cob," I read, for example, "is never a graceful proceeding, but it is the one satisfactory way to extract the real flavor of the corn when it is served in this fashion."

Turning to page 240, under the heading, 'Watermelon,' I read, "Eaten with a fork, cutting one small piece at a time and leaving the seeds on the plate. Seeds must never be taken into the mouth."

This was a blow to me, Mrs. Krumpacker, for [1] I was not aware that watermelon was eaten with a fork, cutting one small piece at a time, and [2] that seeds must never be taken into the mouth. As long as I remember, I have imbibed the seeds with the flesh of the watermelon, being an expert, if I do say it myself, at pitting the seeds onto the plate, quietly and unostentatiously.

I am reluctantly led to conclude, after careful study of Mrs. Richardson's dictum regarding the fork and the seeds, that she is without American background in the matter of watermelon. If I was unchivalrous I would ascribe this to the inequality of the sexes. In other words, I never heard of a woman who was able to shin a fence and steal a watermelon. Only in those circumstances, as all men know, is a watermelon really to be understood and enjoyed.

This naturally leads us to the correct way, dictated by common usage, of eating it. The melon is removed a safe distance from any stray birdshot at the hands of a careless farmer, and one of the diners produces a jackknife, cutting the melon or melons longitudinally, in quarter slices.

The individual diner grasps his slice at either end, inclining the head until the ears are on a level with the ends. A little practice will prevent the wilder seeds from spurting into his ears. He then eats his way to the rind, pitting, as I have previously said, the seeds, here and there, about him.

For the city bred, contemplating a life of crime in watermelons, I wish to issue a warning. Never try to steal a melon in the daytime. My choicest melons were obtained by the light of the moon. Take your time, size up your patch, get the lay of the land.

I have mentioned stray birdshot. It is just as well, also, to determine whether they are any stray watch dogs. Those sometimes cause embarrassment unless one happens to have a two pant suit.

Pork Is Practical Buy for Your Week-End Meals

In its regular weekly report, issued for the guidance of consumers, the committee on marketing information of the National Meat council states: "The housewife who wishes to buy her food economically will find that cuts of fresh pork offer exceptional opportunities over the coming week-end. Declines in the prices of practically all pork cuts make this meat available at especially attractive figures at the present time."

TRIO OF FICTION LEAD SOFTIES TO OUTDOOR MEAL

And City Chaps Meet Difficulties.

BY FRANK CIPRIANI.

Roughing it is the dream of many city fellows who live a sequestered existence and who discern in their mental meanderings romantic expressions of their true selves. They picture themselves laughing at physical hardships, doing things calculated to dismay other mortals, tough, sturdy exemplars of outdoor life—regular hemen, and not city softies.

Which leads us to our subject—city softies who would be he-men; the great outdoors, and, quite naturally, food, for this page and its contents are dedicated to gastronomic favor. Therefore, meet three acquaintances whose adventures to be recounted were inspired by Messrs. Tom Sawyer, Huckleberry Finn, and Joe Harper. Know them, then, as Alias Tom, Alias Huck, and Alias Joe.

Alias Tom laid down his book. By the way, forget calendars, for this epic took place in midsummer. He turned to his pals, Alias Huck and Alias Joe.

Book Inspired Appetite.

"Those kids must have enjoyed life," mused Alias Tom. He referred to Mark Twain's immortal adventurers. "I was reading of their trip to the river island to play pirate, and how they slept outdoors and cooked outdoors. It was the cooking part that appealed to me most, though. It would be great, sitting by a roaring log fire, away from people, and eating meats, potatoes, and such stuff prepared in the outdoors. That would be a real man's banquet, to my notion."

Alias Tom's notion was contagious. The next day Alias Joe, Alias Huck and Alias Tom were grinding over rural highways, their shiny vehicle laden with raw provender, bound for the "great outdoors," for a real man's banquet alongside a blazing log fire—the inspiration of Messrs. Tom Sawyer, Huckleberry Finn, and Joe Harper.

Arrived at their destination, a picturesque hollow deep in a verdant stretch of undulating timberland, the trio halted, breathed long draughts of undefiled air, and abandoned all thought of people, streets, buildings, and restaurants. It was the great outdoors!

True to Fictional Hero.

Alias Huck stretched himself lazily on a mat of green grass, true to his fictional hero. Alias Joe gathered stray bits of tree limbs, dry leaves, and piled them in a ramshackle heap while Alias Tom, the leader, looked on. Over the summit of a faraway hill appeared a harmless cloud. In a few minutes the fire was roaring. Alias Tom suddenly recollected the food was still in their car.

He made his way doggedly through thick brush, stumbled once or twice, and after fifteen minutes of brave footwork reached the machine. The return trip was even more arduous and dangerous. Alias Tom disturbed a swarm of bees, but except for fright was untroubled. A new enemy appeared—mosquitoes. They nipped his hands, his arms, his neck, and cheeks.

Troubles of Outdoor Chef.

"About time to cook the chow," suggested Alias Huck. He was still recumbent. The hint was taken. Alias Joe unpacked the baskets. A rueful look screwed his face. He brushed the several packages energetically with his hands.

"Ants and bugs," he moaned dismally. "They're running over everything."

The menace of the insect kingdom hadn't been considered. Alias Tom uncorked a brilliant idea. Smoke them ount. He held a package of pork chops over the wood fire, and lost one chop which dropped into the flames, sizzling angrily and spiritedly. The process was repeated with the other articles. Alias Joe was nominated to make the coffee while Alias Tom and Alias Huck held a dozen chops on spits over the fire.

Finally the grand banquet was spread on newspapers covering the ground. At this point the pot overturned, spilling half the coffee. Worse yet, it was discovered the cream had turned sour. By this time the banquet had lost a bit of its adventurous aroma. The chops were burned too crisp, and had a charred taste. The cake crumbled in dryness as the trio lifted it to their mouths. The coffee was like bad chicory. Ants and other visitors were already creeping toward the spread. In addition, some one—it was Alias Huck—had forgotten to bring drinking water.

And Then the Rain.

It was hot, uncomfortable, not a wisp of wind. The fire was dying, and several defiant mosquitoes—like knights of the air armed with pointed lances—hovered threateningly near by. And struck! Somehow, nothing tasted as it should.

Above the skies had darkened, very dark, and the lone cloud, swelled by a lowering battalion of deeper clouds, hung low. Suddenly there was a rush, a sweep, and like an unseen hand a blast of damp wind hurtled the banquet settings here, there, topsy-turvy, mixing them with smouldering embers and ashes and burning bits of wood. In that wink everything transformed. A drop, and it was a big one—of rain fell. Then the deluge came.

Alias Tom, Alias Huck, and Alias Joe after an hour's grumpy driving paused at a village store, shook in it paused at a village store, shook in it paused at a village store, shook in it

HERE'S A QUICK WAY TO SCALLOP RAW POTATOES

Brings Out Fine Flavor of the Vegetable.

BY META GIVEN.

Escalloping is one of the best ways of cooking potatoes. By "escalloping" I mean arranging the potatoes in layers with salt, pepper, bits of butter, perhaps a little flour and maybe some grated cheese between, covering the whole with milk and baking in a slow oven until potatoes are tender and have developed a delicate brown, crisp, appetizing crust on top.

The best escalloped potatoes are prepared from sliced raw potatoes. Some housewives, however, use the cooked ones for escalloping because not so much time is required for preparing them. But the flavor is not so good as when raw potatoes are employed. The slight loss of liquid in which potatoes are first boiled or the mere transfer of the potatoes from one vessel to another may be responsible for this loss of flavor. The inexperienced cook may feel that this difference is not worth the trouble, but it is enough to be perceptible to the connoisseur.

Cook in a Slow Oven.

Whether raw or cooked potatoes are used the escalloped dish containing milk is always cooked in a slow oven. This prevents the scorching of the milk but it does not prevent the milk from curdling when raw potatoes are used. Cooked potatoes do not affect milk in this way. There is evidently an enzyme in the raw vegetable which causes this reaction.

Which brings up the question: Is it impossible to prepare a perfect escalloped potato from raw potatoes? We have found one method which gives us the desired result. It is this: We arrange sliced raw potatoes in the casserole in the usual way with flour, salt and pepper between the layers. And be sure to use a few grains of freshly ground pepper, an unusually good seasoning, but never stale pepper which is worth nothing. Then add water to come about half way up to the top of the potatoes.

Quick Procedure.

Cover the dish and place in a hot oven [400 to 425° F.] and cook rapidly for about 18 to 20 minutes, in which time the water on the potatoes should just evaporate and potatoes become tender. The cooking must be watched to see that the potatoes do not get dry and burn before they are done. At the end of this time remove the casserole and add either thin cream or evaporated milk that has been heated to the scalding point. About ¾ cup to each four potatoes is sufficient. The potatoes should quickly absorb the milk or cream. Leave uncovered and keep in the oven just long enough to toast the top. Serve immediately.

This method is a much quicker one than the old one of cooking the potatoes slowly in the milk and if carefully done will produce potatoes without a trace of curdling and with an exceptionally fine flavor.

PINEAPPLE BAVARIAN CREAM.

2 egg yolks.
Grated rind 1 lemon.
Juice 1 lemon.
¼ cup pineapple sirup.
½ cup sugar.
Few grains salt.
1 tablespoon granulated gelatin soaked in 1-3 cup cold water.
2-3 cup canned sliced pineapple.
¼ cup cream.
2 egg whites.

Beat the egg yolks slightly and add the grated rind, lemon juice, pineapple sirup, sugar, and salt. Cook over hot water, stirring constantly until mixture thickens. Remove from range and add soaked gelatin and pineapple. Chill until mixture begins to thicken; add cream, beaten until stiff, and the egg whites also beaten until stiff. Turn into a mold garnished with pieces of canned sliced pineapple and candied cherries and chill thoroughly. Remove from mold to chilled serving dish and garnish with half slices of canned pineapple and candied cherries. They may be omitted if a simple dessert is desired.

BUFFET SUPPERS SOLVE LIMITED SPACE PROBLEM

BY SALLY LUNN.

Cold, snappy days are here again. With them new life surges into the party giving spirit. Hot, enervating summer days made it rather irksome to bother with entertaining even the most interesting of our friends. Now, however, the winter round of gatherings is beginning and each one of us is beginning to think of the service at our own party.

A buffet supper is one of the nicest ways to serve a crowd in the evening, especially in the little kitchenette apartments, where every bit of room is at a premium. A regular supper served at the table would be impossible with a large gathering of guests. Receptions and parties are both more easily and quickly served when the guests are allowed to help themselves. The hostess can have everything but the hot dishes arranged beforehand. They are placed on the table and then her sole duty is to see that all of the guests are being cared for.

The table, of course, must be attractive. It is the best plan to have a definite color scheme in mind and to decorate in harmony with it. At this time of the year reds, oranges, and browns are appropriate colors. The loveliest of tables always has a set of candles burning gayly. Ripe, highly colored fruits in a bowl make a beautiful centerpiece. Of course, it is essential to have plenty of china, silver, and napkins. These may be placed on a small table.

The menu itself may be simple or elaborate, but in either case the details are the same. It is essential not to have anything to eat that must be cut with a knife. Only a superman could balance a plate on his knee while he uses his hands to cut some food. A hot and a cold dish, rolls or sandwiches, an appetizer, such as olives, pickles, or celery, dessert, and a beverage are the important components.

CO-EDS ACCLAIM THEIR COOK AS BEST ON CAMPUS

Meals So Alluring They Forget Diet Vows.

BY FLORA MARTIN.

Down in a little college town in northeastern Kansas, Mrs. Scott, familiarly known as Scotty, reigned as queen of the kitchen in the Chi Omega sorority house. A little plump colored woman, she was, with a smiling, rotund face, speaking in her slow drawly way, a typical southern mammy. "The best cook on the campus," was the title she earned and which she held without trouble.

Breakfast was a delight to every occupant of the house, from senior down to freshman, when chocolate muffins flanked by raspberry jam and served with piping hot coffee headed the menu. As soon as the tantalizing odor of the baking goodies had penetrated the place, every one would make a dash to the dining room and the warm muffins of which Scotty always seemed to have an unending supply.

Delicious Shirred Eggs.

Another of her masterpieces was a variety of shirred eggs, encircled by a crisp strip of bacon. That, served with thin slices of toast, was indeed a delicacy.

The dinner hour on Sundays always was a rather formal affair, for it was then that the dignitaries of the campus, the deans and professors, were invited to partake of the board. Then Scotty would use all of her cooking tricks.

There would be fricasseed chicken, biscuits browned to a turn, sweet potatoes baked in true southern fashion, and a buttercup salad. This had a crisp lettuce leaf as a base for a slice of pineapple with a small ball of cream cheese coated with chopped nuts placed in its center, and a generous portion of mayonnaise dressing covering it.

And Then Temporary Dieting.

The end of each college year always found a group of co-eds vowing to forego every food, save barely enough to sustain life, during the three months of vacation in order to undo the weighty harm caused by the tempting victuals prepared by Scotty. Of course, all effect of their dieting of the summer months would be obliterated when a new year started in the fall. Scotty liked to see her girls looking well fed.

It's Simple Enough to Make Informal Meal a Success

BY HELEN BARTLETT.

We wouldn't go so far as to claim that fashion's latest whim, the Sunday night frock, owes its existence to the increasing popularity of Sunday night suppers, but you must admit that the one does supplement the other beautifully.

At any rate, there must be such a frock in every woman's wardrobe these days, just as the art of Sunday night supper giving must be in every hostess' repertoire. The frock, like the supper, is informal. In fact, informality is the very excuse for the being of both.

For the frock we direct you to the nearest department store. For the supper we suggest, first, guests picked for their qualities AS guests, second, food that is tasteful and easily dispensed, third, the old reliable method of taking care of a crowd, buffet service.

Pick Your Friends.

As to guests, do you remember the flippant remark of a cynic, "We can't choose our relatives, but we can pick our friends"? Do that, picking the most amusing of them, and that end of the party is assured of success. Sunday is a dull day and dull people on Sunday seem even more so than usual.

Wit being at a low level in these much talked of hard times, good food will probably be easier to assemble than gay people for your party, but don't forget that good food goes a long way toward promoting gayety. Hors d'oeuvres are a distinct asset, we've noticed, and they can play an important part at a Sunday night supper.

They can be simple or elaborate. Resorting to a caterer will bring you a tray of fancy ones, but this is rather expensive. With a fertile imagination the hostess can make most attractive ones at much less expense.

Here Are Suggestions.

From the grocer she can get cheese, pimentos, anchovies, olives, caviar, perhaps a little jelly, the necessary bread and then turn her fancy loose, playing with the colorful, tasty stuffs like a little girl making cookies. Bread takes all shapes for canapes.

Then there are the simple things, like crisp celery stuffed with Roquefort; the pimento cups (bought in cans) filled with a mixture of cheese and chopped chives; bread rounds or squares covered with jam and ornamented with cream cheese; the popular olives wrapped in bacon and skewered. All these and many others, ranging from slices of hard boiled egg with seasoned mayonnaise to elaborate creations in aspic.

A woman with a can opener, imagination and a flair for decorative garnishing can produce a dazzling tray of hors d'oeuvres in half an hour.

These things are always successful, but they don't satisfy a good healthy appetite. They are followed by something more substantial. In the winter time this is a hot dish—perhaps a special spaghetti dish, cheese souffle, deviled crab meat or lobster Newburg. Or, on a cold winter night, a rich, steaming oyster stew. Who doesn't love it?

Finally comes the great American beverage, coffee, in good quantity and quality.

This meal might be planned quite differently. The start could be cups of steaming bouillon or broth, then a tray of cold ham and chicken with a jellied vegetable salad molded in the center, the entire platter garnished with slices of deviled egg and tomato. This of course, would be accompanied by the inevitable coffee.

Buffet Style Best.

The service of these Sunday night suppers should be made as simple as possible. For a crowd, as we have said, buffet style is best.

The table can be covered with a lace cloth, not too elaborate, or a set of runners. In the center there is some decorative touch, usually flowers and on either end of the table the hostess should try to have candles. Twilight meals don't seem to be complete without them.

Food in its trays, with the necessary silver beside it, is placed at intervals along the table. At one end the requisite silver is laid in neat rows, with napkins and plates stacked beside it.

A la Cafeteria.

At the other end is the coffee urn, at which the hostess or some helper she delegates, presides. Before her are cream and sugar, cups and saucers (sometimes just cups, which are placed right on the plates) and spoons. Each guest procures his plate, silver and napkin, selects what food he wishes from the trays and serving dishes and either then or later, as he prefers, goes to the end of the table for coffee.

Filled plate in hand, he seeks out a comfortable eating place anywhere in the dining room or an adjoining room—or if he has perfected the knack (usually the he's haven't; the she's are adept at it) may eat standing up.

The hostess or some helpful guest flits about seeing that everybody is comfortable, that there is enough food and that at the right moment, a tray of filled water appears in an accessible place.

The successful Sunday night party is well under way.

Here's Appetizing Menu for Bridge Luncheons

Mrs. A. W. writes: "I would appreciate receiving any recipes and menus which you may have for bridge luncheons. Having belonged to this club for about three years, it seems as though we have had almost everything."

No doubt there are others who would be interested in club luncheons. Here is one menu which probably will havve some new features for Mrs. A. W.'s club:

MENU.

Veronique Salad. Lorenzo Dressing.
Chicken Marguerite.
Beets Harvard.
Blueberry Muffins.
Strawberry Ice Cream. Cocoanut Fancies.
Coffee.

Veronique Salad.

Select eight nice pears. Peel and slice, not too thin. Take white Malaga grapes, and if not in season use big cherries. Remove seeds and fill centers with cream cheese. Have lettuce cold and crisp. Arrange fruit attractively. Serve with Lorenzo dressing.

Chicken Marguerite.

To 2 cups of cold diced chicken add 2 cups cream sauce. Add ½ cup sliced ripe olives, 1 sliced pimiento and one tablespoon sherry. Pour over boiled noodles. Cover with Parmesan cheese and bake until brown.

Blueberry Muffins.

2 cups bread flour. 2 tablespoons melted butter.
4 teaspoons baking powder. 1 egg.
½ teaspoon salt. 1 cup stemmed and washed blueberries.
1 cup milk.

Sift flour, then measure. Resift with other dry ingredients into mixing bowl. Add milk and butter to beaten egg. Make a depression in the dry ingredients, pour in the liquid, and mix quickly as possible. Too much stirring results in compact, ill shaped muffins. Add blueberries with last few stirs. Pour batter at once into oiled muffin tins. Bake in a hot oven (425 degrees F.) 20 or 25 minutes. Yield: 12 medium sized muffins.

MANY of the world's leading scientific authorities state that the vital elements most likely to be missing from ordinary diet are Calcium and Phosphates. It is said to be especially true of average American diet.

The most dangerous thing about lack of Calcium and Phosphates is that growing children need these minerals to assure sound teeth and strong bones.

Mothers who know are following the advice of authorities and are serving plenty of fresh milk and green vegetables, foods naturally rich in these elements. They know, too, that Rumford-cooked foods are an excellent source of Calcium and Phosphates because Rumford Baking Powder itself is so rich in these minerals that an average Rumford biscuit contains four times the Phosphate and half the Calcium of a large glass of milk.

Make certain that your family has the advantages of this added food value. Get Rumford today from your grocer.

HERE ARE SOME DIFFERENT WAYS TO SERVE MEAT

Give Wives a Chance to Change Menus.

Men may be creatures of habit regarding their food, but women are not. Most wives and daughters know that if their husbands and fathers are used to having boiled ham on Tuesdays and roast beef on Wednesdays and steak on Thursdays, they prefer to go on having just these things on just these days the rest of their lives. But that does not mean a woman likes it; she wants variety in her cooking.

Therefore, many a woman is faced, with this problem of whether to have codfish balls every Sunday morning for breakfast as her husband did as a boy, or whether to yield to her desire and slip in a few varieties occasionally.

It is to encourage women in this rebellious departure from the settled habit that the following recipes for "different" ways to prepare meat dishes are given.

Here's One to Fool Him.

Vegetable grill with bacon, for instance, if ever she can catch her husband in an absent-minded mood and add it to the menu without his realizing it's new, will please him so that before long he will want it every Monday for lunch.

Remove some of the pulp from the stem end of as many tomatoes as there are persons to serve. Fill with a stuffing made of bread crumbs seasoned with salt, pepper, and finely minced onion. Bake until tender. Serve with two large slices of sweet potato, two broiled mushrooms, and two slices of broiled bacon for each helping.

"Hidden sausage" is another delightful dish which wives should muster up the courage to try:

Select large potatoes of uniform size. Wash thoroughly. Remove the center portion with an apple corer. Fill each cavity with a small pork sausage. Place the potatoes in a shallow baking pan and bake in a hot oven until done. The potatoes may be pared, but then should be rubbed with butter or bacon fat and basted once or twice during baking.

Recipe for Creole Sausage.

Creole sausages are, like so much Creole cooking, economical and unusually savory:

Prick one pound of sausages and put into a saucepan with one-half can of tomatoes, a pounded clove of garlic, and salt and pepper to taste. Cover and simmer gently for 30 minutes. If desired, the sausages may be browned first in their own fat. Thicken the liquid with a little flour rubbed smooth in butter and blended with a little cold water. Serve with a garnish of toast points.

1 cup finely chopped cooked bacon.
2 cups cooked potatoes, diced.
3 tablespoons bacon drippings.
3 tablespoons flour.
½ tablespoon minced celery.
2 cup milk.
1 tablespoon minced parsley.
1 tablespoon minced green pepper.
Salt.
Pepper and paprika.

Add the chopped pepper, celery, and parsley to the bacon drippings and cook slowly for a few minutes. Stir in the flour and then add the milk. Cook until thick and smooth. Add bacon and seasoning and then add the potatoes. Reheat over a low fire. Sprinkle with minced parsley and paprika. Serve very hot.

Still Another Recipe.

Clean kidneys and cut into halves. If they are to be served for breakfast, marinate them over night in a French dressing. Wrap each kidney in a slice of bacon and bake in a hot oven, or broil until bacon is crisp and kidneys are tender—about 20 minutes in the oven, or 12 to 15 minutes on the broiler. Lay kidneys on triangles of toasted bread and serve them at once.

Baked sweetbreads:

Clean and blanch the required number of sweetbreads. Cut them as evenly as possible in slices 1½ inch thick. Butter a shallow baking pan well. Salt sweetbreads lightly and lay them into the pan, adding one-quarter onion, one-eighth clove of garlic, and one-half teaspoon parsley, all finely minced.

Sprinkle a little fine cracker crumbs over the sweetbreads, add two tablespoons of tomatoes and one-quarter lump of sugar. Dot with butter. Bake them in a hot oven for 20 minutes, basting frequently. Serve with asparagus tips.

Facts You Should Know About Food

SALT.

"Bread and salt" go hand in hand in the languages of the world as the two great food necessities of civilized races, but the story of salt is older than the story of civilization and is one of the foundation stones on which both ancient commerce and religions developed.

Probably the very earliest ancestors of the human race managed to exist without salt by living exclusively on raw meat and milk, which contain sufficient natural salt to sustain life, but as soon as primitive man began to make fires and boil his meat, removing the salt, and to eat vegetables and cereals, he faced the necessity of adding salt.

Unquestionably thousands of our early ancestors, unable to satisfy the body's natural craving for sodium chloride, which is common salt, suffered arrested development or, if he succeeded in attaining full stature, experienced gradual loss of strength and agility and so became easy prey of wild beasts.

Although water of the oceans averages about 3 per cent salt and it has been estimated that if all the salt could be extracted from sea water and placed in a pile it would make a heap 14 times greater in volume than the dry land area of the continent of Europe, the mineral must have been quite unattainable by primitive man in many parts of the world.

Even today there are portions of the earth, notably in central Africa, where the use of salt is a luxury in which only the very rich may indulge.

The first salt was obtained by collecting salty crusts from the surface deposits found in many parts of the world. Later man learned how to evaporate salt water from the ocean and still later to purify the crude deposits obtained. Discovery of a salt spring was regarded by inland peoples as a special gift of the gods and early Germans waged wars for the possession of saline streams.

These early people assumed that so precious a substance must have a divine origin and believed salt bearing soil possessed a peculiar sanctity and that its presence made the land a place where prayers were more readily heard.

Cakes of salt have been used as money in many parts of the world and for a long time salt was used to pay wages of workmen. The salarium, or salt money, of the Roman army is the equivalent of the modern word salary.

Because many of the early nations were compelled to send abroad for salt some of the earliest trade routes, which were salt roads, came into being. A notable example is the Via Salaria, one of the oldest of the ancient highways of Italy. It was used to carry salt from the pans of Ostia to the Sabine country. The caravan trade of the Sahara desert is today largely a trade in salt.

The fact that all men must have salt naturally resulted in the almost universal imposition of salt taxes or the operation of government monopolies as means of raising revenues.

In many countries the oppressive methods of collecting salt taxes resulted in situations resembling the modern practice of bootlegging inferior liquor. The Bible reference [Matt. v. 13] to the "salt which has lost its savour" is believed to refer to the earthy residue which was sold as salt after the sodium chloride had been washed out by running water through it.

TRY BREAKFAST AS NOVEL WAY TO ENTERTAIN

When you tire of bridge parties, teas, dinners, suppers, and luncheons, and rack your brain for a different way to entertain, think of the possibilities of the Sunday morning breakfast.

The Sunday morning breakfast has features that should delight the heart of the hostess. For instance, the hostess who works six days a week will welcome the occasion when she need not hustle around preparing an elaborate meal or think of novel entertainment to go along with it. What could be more enjoyable than a leisurely Sunday morning breakfast?

Some menus and recipes to aid you follow:

I.
Grapefruit
Waffles Sirup Sausages
Coffee Cream

WAFFLES.

1½ cups pastry flour.
¼ teaspoon salt.
3 teaspoons baking powder.
1 tablespoon sugar.
1 cup milk.
2 eggs.
1 tablespoon butter, melted.

Sift flour with salt, baking powder and sugar. Beat eggs thoroughly and add milk and melted fat. Stir liquid quickly into dry ingredients. Stir until the flour just disappears. Pour only enough batter into hot, well greased waffle iron, to fill, then bake to a golden brown. Just enough batter should be used to obtain a thin, crisp waffle. Serve hot. Yield: 6 waffles.

II.
Grape Juice
Whole Wheat Cereal
Bacon Omelet Broiled Tomatoes
Toast
Coffee Cream

BACON OMELET.

6 eggs.
Dash pepper.
Salt.
1-3 cup milk.
3 tablespoons butter.
⅔ cup cooked, crisp bacon.
Parsley.

Beat eggs slightly. Add pepper, salt and milk. Put butter into a hot pan, and as soon as it bubbles, add egg mixture. Cook over a low flame until set. Brown top in a medium oven [375 degrees F.]. Sprinkle surface with chopped bacon, fold and turn on to hot platter. Garnish with parsley. Yield: 6 servings.

III.
Tomato Juice
Cereal with Dates
Caramel Fried Apples Bacon
Toast Butter
Coffee Cream

CARAMEL FRIED APPLES.

3 cups apples.
2 tablespoons butter.
¼ cup sugar.
½ cup water.

Use any good flavored apples. Jonathans are excellent. Pare and cut in good sized pieces. Let butter become hot. Put in apples, sugar and lastly water. Let cook without stirring until apples are soft and sugar and butter become a golden brown in the bottom of the pan. Serve with meat.

IV.
Honey Dew or Casaba
Poached Eggs on Toast
Biscuit Butter Homemade Jam
Coffee Cream

BISCUITS.

2 cups family flour.
3 teaspoons baking powder.
½ teaspoon salt.
2 teaspoons sugar.
3 tablespoons fat.
¾ cup milk.

Sift flour, then measure. Then sift with other dry ingredients into mixing bowl. Rub fat into the flour with fingers until appearance is like coarse corn meal. Add milk and mix quickly with a fork. Stir until flour disappears and then add four or five extra stirs to smooth and slightly stiffen the dough. Turn immediately on to a thoroughly floured board. Pat dough out with hand or roll to ¾ inch thickness. Cut and place on oiled tin. Bake in a hot oven [425 to 450 degrees F.]. About 12 minutes are required for baking. Yield: 12 biscuits, 2¼ inches in diameter.

This coffee alone brings to your taste goodness no other coffee has, because Hills Bros Coffee is roasted...evenly...continuously...

RARE GOODNESS EXPRESSED IN APPETIZING AROMA AND EVER-SATISFYING FLAVOR... QUALITIES PRODUCED EXCLUSIVELY BY CONTROLLED ROASTING... HILLS BROS' PATENTED, CONTINUOUS PROCESS THAT ROASTS A FEW POUNDS AT A TIME... NEVER IN BULK

DRINK a cup of Hills Bros. Coffee and you will know why it is so tremendously popular wherever it is sold. That delicious, full-bodied flavor, such as no other coffee has, not only captures tastes but holds them forever.

Bulk-roasting methods can never develop the flavor that Controlled Roasting develops in Hills Bros. Coffee. Here is the reason—by roasting only a few pounds at a time by their patented, continuous process, Hills Bros. are able to roast every berry evenly—to just the degree that insures matchless flavor.

Hills Bros. Coffee is always fresh because the vacuum can keeps it that way. Air, which destroys the flavor of coffee, is completely removed and kept out by Hills Bros.' vacuum pack. Coffee packed in ordinary cans, even if air-tight, will not stay fresh.

Grocers everywhere sell Hills Bros. Coffee. Ask for this coffee by name and look for the Arab—the trade-mark—on the can.

No can of Hills Bros. Coffee will ever "go stale." The vacuum can keeps it FRESH ALWAYS!

VISIT TO COLD STORAGE PLANT CHANGES VIEWS

New Methods Break Down Egg Prejudice.

BY META GIVEN.

Those who visited the food exhibit at the Central Cold Storage, Chicago's largest community refrigerator, this last week learned that cold storage foods at the present time are not second or third rate products, but are the finest.

Each year a contest, sponsored by the United States Egg society, the National Poultry, Butter, and Egg association, and the Poultry Research Societies of America assembles the finest eggs, poultry, and butter that can be produced. This year frozen fruits and vegetables were included in the display.

How the application of cold and the control of humidity and temperature works such magic with foods is a fascinating, yet a complicated scientific story. I was especially interested in the storage of eggs. I have for some years had a prejudice against the cold storage product. But improved methods now produce results that break down my prejudice.

Fine Qualities Retained.

Years of scientific research have shown how to control storage conditions so as to retain the original fresh qualities in the egg over a period of several months. It is true that cold storage does not improve any food, but it does retain the fine qualities of the fresh food longer than any other method of preservation.

The study of atmospheric conditions alone has brought to light many interesting facts. Researchers have found that a temperature of 30 degrees Fahrenheit with a humidity of 85 is best for preserving eggs in the case. But the proper temperature and humidity alone are not enough to prevent staling. It is necessary that just the right amount of carbon dioxide be present in the air. And the optimum amount has been shown to be a little less than ⅛ of 1 per cent.

The explanation of the need of carbon dioxide, of course, is a scientific one. The quantity of carbon dioxide must be sufficient to prevent the diffusion of the carbon dioxide out of the egg into the air. The retention of the carbon dioxide within the egg is essential to keep the hydrogen ion concentration. And so long as the hydrogen iron concentration remains constant the egg remains fresh.

Frozen Eggs, Too.

Eggs that are kept under such cold storage conditions for as long as ten months have the appearance and flavor of fresh laid ones. When such eggs are cooked and compared to cooked fresh eggs there is no difference so far as flavor and appearance go, even to the most critical.

In addition to the case eggs in cold storage there are the frozen ones. And these come in three forms—frozen whites, frozen yolks, and frozen whole eggs. So far frozen eggs have not been made available to the housewife. In quality they too are the best of eggs. They are collected in the spring when the finest are produced, and are carefully inspected for freshness. The eggs used are broken then salted and some have sugar added, depending upon the use to which they are put. Immediately they are frozen solid and kept several degrees below zero until ready for use.

WINTER NOT SO BAD, AFTER ALL

Frozen Canned Eggs are Largely Used by Bakers
Canned EGG Yolks
Canned EGG Whites
Canned Whole Eggs

What matter that it's winter and fresh fruits of every variety cannot be served? These frozen cherries, blueberries and strawberries will produce desserts as delicious as those made from freshly picked fruit. And these frozen eggs will contribute the same flavor and nutritive value as those taken from a nest the day before.

PROOF OF BATTER IS IN BEATING—WITH POPOVERS

And, of Course, They Must Be Hot.

BY VIRGINIA SCHMITZ.

Buns, biscuits, rolls, muffins, cornbread, johnny cake—name them all—but when you come to popovers you've found the topper of the bread family.

Not that there's anything high hat but its figure about a popover. It's the pride of the Gedunk family. Not in coffee or in soup; it craves richer company and is dipped most generally in gravy or jam unless you have simple tastes and prefer to spill it full of butter.

The saddest thing about the genus is that it's so seldom seen. A popover is a delicate proposition and demands the full attention and greatest skill of its sponsor. That's why you'll encounter it most generally when there's little else to speak of on the menu.

There doesn't need to be much else because once the first relay is set on the table it's a question of who has asbestos fingers and who can eat most rapidly.

It's Just a Knack.

Turkey, pate de fois gras, what you will, goes by the board in the attempt to keep up with the oven and eat popovers while they're hot. And after all, capacities are limited. When the last popover is gone, the meal is ended.

You see they must be eaten hot or they're not popovers but just rubbery deflated lumps of questionably cooked dough. The maker seldom gets a look-in on eating them. She must vacillate between kitchen and table carrying them in as soon as they're ready and not a moment later.

It sounds simple to make them. Butter and eggs, flour, milk, and salt. That's all. But not quite. The proof of this batter is in the beating of it. Twenty minutes say some recipes. Others say 30. Some cooks can do it on 15, but all the recipes in the world wouldn't help others to make them. Your experienced popover cook will tell you it's all in the knack—and will not explain how to get the knack.

But you can only try. Around and around you twist the gears of your beater and call in assistance while you shake your arm up and down to take out the kinks. Then if you follow instructions you'll have your pans hot and buttered and your oven at white heat.

Prayer Part of Recipe.

A half inch of weak looking yellowish liquid goes into the pans and then you pop them into the oven. Now you sit down and pray. Pray that no one treads heavily in your kitchen and that all is going well inside the oven. You don't dare to look.

If fortune has been kind to you, bulging hillocks will have reared up over your muffin tins at the exact moment when the family is sitting down at table. Whisking them out of the pans, carefully not to prick them, flushed and proud of your achievement, you carry them in to the table.

It is best to have started on these delicious nothings in childhood. Then your fingers will have become accustomed to the heat and steam. For a gourmet of popovers would not deign to eat them unless steam came out when they were broken.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

If you have a household hint or unique discovery you are willing to pass on to other housewives, send it to Sally Lunn, Chicago Tribune. Recipes are excluded.

If your paint brush has dried with paint on it, heat some vinegar to the boiling point, place the brush in it and allow it to simmer a few minutes. Remove and wash in soap suds and it will be as good as new again.

CANDY ANALYZED, WITH HINTS ON HOW TO MAKE IT

These Recipes Will Tempt Any Sweet Tooth.

MEXICAN ORANGE CANDY.

1 cup sugar caramelized.
¼ cup boiling water.
2 cups sugar.
1 cup evaporated milk or cream.
Pinch salt.
Grated rind of 2 oranges.
1 cup nut meats.

Add boiling water to caramelized sugar and boil until sugar is dissolved. Add 2 cups sugar, milk, or cream, and salt and boil to the soft ball stage. Just before candy is done add orange rind. Remove from fire, add nuts, cool and beat. Drop from a teaspoon to oiled paper. Yield, 1¾ pounds.

PRALINES.

1 cup brown sugar.
2 cups white sugar.
3 tbsp. corn sirup.
⅓ cup water.
2 tsp. mapleine.
1½ cups nuts.

Cook all ingredients except nuts to soft ball stage (236 degrees F.). Cool. Add nuts. Beat until stiff, drop rapidly from a spoon to a buttered sheet in patties about 4 inches in diameter. Press several pecan halves on top surface of each praline. Candy should stiffen immediately. Wrap in oiled paper. Yield, 1¾ pounds.

DIVINITY.

First part—
1 cup sugar.
1 cup boiling water.
3 egg whites.
Second part—
2 cups sugar.
1 cup corn sirup.

Without stirring boil ingredients of the first part until sirup will spin a thread (215 degrees F.). Pour slowly over the stiffly beaten whites of three eggs, beating constantly. Start the second mixture to cook just as the first is done. Continue beating first mixture until the second reaches the crack stage (270 degrees F.), or until small drops will form a brittle mass in cold water. As soon as bubbles disappear in sirup pour over the egg mixture and beat continuously until the mass stiffens. Add ½ cup chopped walnut meats and 1 teaspoon of vanilla. Pour on a buttered platter. When stiff cut into squares and wrap in oiled paper. Yield, 2¼ pounds.

THE LONG LOOP

BY B. M. BOWER

SYNOPSIS.

Dix Larrabee, head of Whistling Creek ranch, was swindled in an oil well frame-up by Owen White, neighboring rancher and banker. Everything he owned was mortgaged except the home ranch, which Gram refused to sign. Chuck, Dix's young brother, upon being sent to medical college, at great expense to Dix. Dix kept from Gram and Chuck the true state of affairs.

Dix rejects the idea given him by Mort McGuire, ranch helper, of changing the brand of his cattle from White's O T ranch to a coffeepot, symbol of Dix's own.

Chuck writes Dix a letter telling him he has bought an expensive car and asking for more, and Dix borrows money from the bank to send him.

INSTALLMENT V.

THE INDIAN'S TRAIL.

Beyond the Antelope creek bridge the road ran for two miles or more in a dry wash cut through the prairie. The cattle liked this wash because the steep banks sheltered them on cold, windy days and because it had been a natural cow trail before men drove the first wagon along it. Before them buffalo had marched by thousands through that sunken channel. Buffalo wash, men called it.

Today, when Dix rattled across Antelope bridge and down hill into the wash, he came upon eleven white face steers and four yearlings ambling up the road directly in front of his car. He slapped the horn button impatiently. The hindmost steer switched his tail and showed a languid impulse to break into a shambling trot, but those in front held to their leisurely pace and he refused to excite himself further.

Eleven hundred dollars' worth of O T beef obstructing the road for him at this day of all others! Dix swore under his breath. He went on honking for a few minutes and found that they paid not the slightest attention, so he settled down to their gait and trailed along behind.

In a savage mood he forged on past when at last the wash widened and the cattle deigned to leave the road and let him by, and it seemed to him that they looked after him with a heavy, bovine contempt. One big, impudent critter thrust his head straight forward and bawled after him, and Dix was so mad he stopped the car and got out and threw rocks the size of his fist until the bunch turned tail and went galloping back down the road out of sight.

That eased his temper somewhat, but later his interview with the bank's vice president left him sullenly discouraged. There was nothing tangible, but he caught a look on the banker's face when he was off guard and filling in a note blank for five hundred dollars. As a matter of fact, the vice president had quarreled with his wife that morning, and as it was near closing time when Dix walked into the office, the the banker was dreading to go home. Lending five hundred dollars to Dixon A. Larrabee was all in the day's work. But, since he was no mind reader, Dix could not know that the disagreeable twist of the man's lips was brought there by a certain sarcastic greeting which he had just composed for his wife.

Dix walked out of the office and up to the teller's window with a maddening resentment against Mr. Perkins, who had just favored him with a loan. He cashed a check and went out feeling as if he had been forced by circumstances to accept charity from the O T outfit. But he wired Chuck a hundred dollars nevertheless, and he remembered to match the sample of yarn Gram had tucked into his pocket when he left the house and bought all the things she had written down in her prim, tremulous handwriting.

"You jump on horse I show you something."

When he started home the wind was blowing across the flat prairie in boisterous gusts that threatened to take the top of his car off. He was still thinking resentfully of that look on John Perkins' face when Owen Gray came slipping along at a smooth thirty-five, the westering sun striking dazzling reflections from the windshield and nickeled trim of his big blue roadster. They met just on the edge of town where warped old shoes lay forlorn and empty tin cans went rolling before the wind. A battered gasoline can had bounced up to the edge of the road and Owen evidently thought of his tires, for he gave way grudgingly and Dix was forced to swing out into the rough, littered gravel alongside the road. Owen Gray grinned, lifting a hand from the steering wheel to wave a casual greeting, but Dix gave back a hostile glare.

A hundred yards farther along he brought his bouncing vehicle to a stop, got out, and yanked a piece of shingle with a bent nail in it from a flattened front tire. He turned and gazed back toward the town and the whipped dust cloud that held Owen Gray and his splendid car, but he did not say a word. What was the use? This was only another example of what he had to take from the O T outfit—if he did choose to take it and not fight back.

In Buffalo wash there was that bunch of O T steers blocking the trail as they loitered in a narrow, high banked place out of the wind. A sullen calm more deadly than any blaze of anger settled like a blanket of fog on Dix. He slowed down, waited until the cattle turned lumberingly in the road and started off down the wash, tails swinging, the tassel of long hair flipping their shambling hocks as they walked. Eleven hundred dollars walking leisurely down the wash—more, if he counted the unmatured beef of the youngsters. More than half enough to pay Chuck's note. A few more miles added to the O T flaunted on their ribs as they turned now and then to stare back at him—a few months to let the new lines heal and grow hair to cover—eleven hundred dollars right there in a bunch, and more walking around on the range.

Owen never would miss them, either. A careless outfit, Owen always chasing around over the country somewhere on some scheme or other (like Grayback Oil) and letting his foreman run things. Foreman was crooked, too, point Dix knew, according to range gossip. Cowpunchers talked, especially after they had been fired from the O T. They hinted that Owen's foreman was knocking down right along—rustling beef or holding out on the shipping money. Owen never paid any attention to the ranch except as a place to throw house parties and hell around with a bunch of dudes every summer. Eleven hundred dollars, his for the taking. Or they would be if he knew of a place to run the cattle till their brands haired over. If he had it in him to rustle cattle he sure could do some collecting off Owen Gray.

That night he dreamed again of rustling O T stock, but he didn't dream of getting caught at it and being sent to the penitentiary. He dreamed that public opinion was enthusiastically in favor of the crime, and that some of his neighbors got after Owen Gray and forced him to tend the branding fire for Mart and Dix, and there was a big laugh at the joke on Owen. But for all that the dream was not a pleasant one, and it stuck in Dix's memory with the details as clear in his mind as if they had really happened. And that puzzled Dix and worried him a little, even though he kept telling himself it was a dream and that it was caused by those steers he had trailed out of Buffalo wash. With his fingers playing him tricks and his sleeping mind falling into the same channel of thought, Dix had an uneasy feeling that he didn't know himself as well as he had always thought he did, and that something was pushing him along in a direction he did not want to travel.

Old Tom came padding up to the house, his moccasins toeing in a little more than usual, which was a sure sign that the brain six feet above them was stirred out of its phlegmatic calm. At the corner of the bunkhouse Mart stood with his hands in his pockets, staring after Tom and sending an occasional glance past him to the house.

All this Dix saw from the window of his room, and he slammed down the roll top of his desk and reached for his hat, bracing himself for bad news and wondering what it could be. It took a good deal of a jolt to jar old Tom into that pigeontoed walk of his or Mart into attentive interest in his movements. Tom opened the door and came in, a peculiar gleam in his eye, though his face was a stony calm.

"You jump on hoss. I show you something."

"What thing?" Dix drew a match along the under side of the desk top. "You turn them horses in the upper pasture like I told you?"

"Yeah. I shootum wolf up by spring. No killum—breakum hine leg. Sun some."

Dix led the way outside, waiting to hear what old Tom really had on his mind; not the hind leg of a wolf, that was certain. But Tom, following at his heels, said no more until they neared the bunkhouse.

Presently the three rode away together, the Indian tapping his pony's flanks with his moccasin heels, as was his habit, but vouchsafing no word of explanation for the trip.

Anna Pavlowa, World Famous Dancer, Dead

Chicago's Favorite, Leader in Russian Ballet.

THE HAGUE, Jan. 23.—[Friday.]—Anna Pavlowa, the greatest dancer of her time, died of pleurisy at the Hotel des Indes here at 12:30 this morning.

The end came despite every effort of two Dutch physicians and her own Russian doctor, Prof. Valerski, to save her. During the day an operation was performed to withdraw water from one of her lungs. At 10 o'clock last night her condition became extremely serious and as a last resort it was decided to administer Pasteur vaccine. It came too late, however, for she was already sinking.

CHICAGO'S FAVORITE

BY CHARLES COLLINS.

Anna Pavlowa was, I think, the greatest personality in the realm of the theater arts that this generation has seen. She was, more than any of the other international footlight favorites, a world artist. She came out of Russia in 1910 and proceeded to inherit the earth. Her sense of beauty was expressed in a universal language—rhythm; and wherever she went, in her far flung, persistent tours, she was at home.

For example, Chicago audiences of the last fifteen years have felt that she belonged to them. Her frequent appearances here—at the Auditorium, the Blackstone, the Medinah temple, even the extinct Midway gardens—have given us a certain possessive attitude toward the Pavlowa tradition. She seemed to belong here. Her influence touched our lives in various ways, and many a matron of today remembers her war time flapperhood, when she patronized Russian dancing masters and endeavored to be a baby Pavlowa.

But this is true of most of the capital cities in the world. London, Paris, New York, and the major cities of America, Australia, and South Africa, and back again to Europe—this was the orbit traveled by the star called Pavlowa. She was always on the wing, and wherever she went she was adored and adopted. Only to her home land of Russia she remained, after her escape into cosmopolitan fame, a comparative stranger.

The world became for her a point of support for the toe of her dancing slipper. The other figures of theatrical fame whose careers might be cited as rivaling Pavlowa's in internationalism—Sarah Bernhardt in acting, for example—always remained in their national frames. They belonged to their own people, and occasionally made conquering expeditions abroad. But Pavlowa was definitely Mme. Universe. Her countless admirers could never give, off hand, the exact address where she could be found "at home." It was a country estate not far from London, but she did not spend much time there.

She lived in her dressing room, wherever that might be; on the stage, constantly rehearsing when she was not giving a public performance; in hotels, sleeping cars and steamship cabins. For her, to live was to dance, and to keep eternally traveling in quest of new audiences.

Anna Pavlowa was a slight, lithe woman who never lost the slender figure of the true dancing girl. Her face was somewhat wistful in repose, with the fine modeling of a poetic nature, and dark vivid Russian eyes. She was not a "beauty" in the conventional use of the word. Her face and body were instruments, rather, for the evocation of beauty in dancing. To see her was to become immediately aware of a personality and spirit of high distinction.

A vast amount of writing has been printed on the subject of her contribution to the art of the modern ballet. She was, up to the moment of her death, its first Muse. German expressionistic dancing is now coming into vogue as the latest development of this world-old art; but as yet it seems unimportant when compared to the Russian school for which Pavlowa stood.

She represented the final flowering of a technique of the dance which began with the classic French ballet. Transplanted to Russia, under imperial patronage, it acquired a Muscovite freedom of physical movement and imaginative treatment. It became the Russian ballet, favorite plaything of the Russian composers and grand dukes. Then it felt and responded to the influence of Isadora Duncan, who gave it the Grecian touch of bare legs and simple draperies; and it became an eclectic, international art, with Anna Pavlowa as its greatest practitioner.

Mme. Pavlowa died eight days before her forty-sixth birthday. She was born in the city now called Leningrad [it was St. Petersburg then] in 1885, was trained for the imperial ballet from early childhood, and became the first ballerina of the Marianski theater before she was 20 years old.

She left Russia for an engagement in London at the Palace theater in 1910. She then went to Paris for appearances with Serge Diaghileff's Russian ballet, and made her New York debut March 10, 1910, in "Coppelia," a ballet to music by Delibes. Her success was immediate; she floated gracefully into fame to the rhythms of such numbers as "Les Sylphides," "Chopiniana," and "Le Cygne"—to name three titles at haphazard from her amazingly large repertory—and began her globe circling tours, which halted only three days before her death. The touch of influenza which ended in pneumonia caused her to cancel an engagement at The Hague, in Holland, and this was the first time in twenty years that Pavlowa's company had missed fulfillment of a contract.

Her private life contained no material for the gossip and anecdotage that usually accompanies stage renown. In 1924 she announced her marriage to her accompanist, Victor Dandré, to the surprise of her friends and professional associates.

To Sing Feb. 7

SENORA MILLA DOMINGUEZ.

Educate All; Few Will Lead, Professor Says

Another Asks Ten Million for Colleges Survey.

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 22.—[Special.]—Higher education in the United States was put under the microscope by 600 educators at the seventeenth annual meeting of the Association of American Colleges here today.

"We are on the threshold of an era when not only the necessities and comforts of life will be made accessible to all but also those higher treasures of the race, intellectual, esthetic and spiritual, which formerly have been the possession of the very few," said Dr. Kerr D. MacMillan, president of Wells college, an institution for women at Aurora, N. Y.

"It is the task of colleges and universities to accept the challenge of providing the higher treasures for Americans and not only to admit all who seek admittance but even to go in the highways and byways and compel universal education," MacMillan said.

Dr. MacMillan favored mass education of all average individuals and the provision of the highest educational facilities for that 5 or 10 per cent from whom the leadership in science, art, religion, politics, and social problems may be expected. Individualastic education for the future leaders, the acquisition not only of information and skill but the attainment of self-development should be provided, he declared.

Dr. Melvin E. Haggerty, dean of the University of Minnesota, declared:

"Until more knowledge is available concerning what happens in the lives of students during their stay in colleges, and until educators discern more clearly the casual incidence of institutional practices upon the changing characters of students, college administration and teaching will proceed more haltingly than it should.

"Ten million dollars expended in educational research at the college level would do more to promote the cause of higher education in America than would the use of that amount of money to expand and repair existing institutions or to establish new ones."

R. T. Rees, assistant vice president of the American Telegraph and Telephone company, asserted that:

"In our conscious selection of the graduates of colleges, we of the business world continually look for the students' objectives as indicated in the courses pursued through his undergraduate year."

Old Orphan Asylum Will Divide Children Into Smaller Groups

Chicago's oldest child caring institution, the Chicago Orphan asylum, soon will adopt one of the newest methods for caring for dependent needy children. The orphanage at 5120 South Park way has served Chicago's homeless children since 1849, when a cholera epidemic swept the city, leaving many children homeless.

The board of trustees and managers, at the annual meeting yesterday presided over by Edward F. Swift, president, made plans to establish small groups of children in cottages or to board them in private homes, rather than maintain them in a large central building as in the past. The plan is based on a four year survey made by the University of Chicago social service administration school, the Institute for Juvenile Research, and the Elizabeth McCormick Memorial fund.

In discussing the three cottages of twelve children now in operation headed by housemothers, Mrs. H. H. Howells, president of the board of managers, declared those experiments had been so successful that the work of the orphanage can be improved by increasing the plan to care for 200 children in private homes and cottages.

"In this manner we can give a child the normal home life which has been denied him," Mrs. Howells said. "We shall have a central receiving home, many private boarding homes for children with problems needing immediate attention, and cottages for groups of children."

Added to the annual report of the board was the statement that although the Chicago Orphan asylum is free from debt, the income from its endowments is not sufficient to meet operating expenses. Each year, the statement said, it is necessary to raise from $10,000 to $15,000 by volunteer subscription.

[Copyright: 1931: By the New York Times.]

ROME, Jan. 22.—[Special.]—What is believed to be one of the oldest portraits of Dante, author of "The Inferno," "Purgatory," and "Paradise," in existence has been discovered in the Church of St. Dominic at Pistoia. There behind seventeenth century altars, frescos which by their style are easily recognizable as work of thirteenth and fourteenth centuries were found.

One of these frescoes, which authorities unanimously attribute to the middle of the fourteenth century, represents three half figures, under one of which there is written "Dante" and under another "Petrarch." There is nothing written under the third figure, whose identity is uncertain.

Even without the names the figures representing Dante and Petrarch would have been easily recognizable as similar to other portraits handed down to the present day.

CONCORD, N. H., NOW CLAIMS FIRST FIGHT OF THE REVOLUTION

Concord, N. H., Jan. 22.—(AP)—

Here once the embattled farmers stood
And fired the shot heard round the world.

It was not at Concord, Mass., but at Concord, N. H., a historian asserted tonight that a fighting Irishman waged the first real battle of the revolution four months before the nineteenth of April in '75.

He was Gen. John Sullivan, so declared Maj. Otis G. Hammond, director of the New Hampshire Historical society, in his annual report. He said Gen. Sullivan stormed Fort William and Mary near Porthmouth in December, '74, braved the fire of British soldiery, hauled down the British flag, and seized 100 barrels of gunpowder.

Hammond turns to the erstwhile enemy for support of his contention that Gen. Sullivan deserved recognition for waging the first fight for independence in the colonies.

Maj. Hammond quoted a letter from the deposed royal governor to Sullivan:

"You were the first man in active rebellion and drew with you the province you live in. You will be one of the first sacrifices to the resentment and justice of government. Your family will be ruined and you must die in ignominy."

The angry prediction of the royal governor chased by the patriots did not come true, but Maj. Hammond contended in the first volume of a three volume work on Gen. Sullivan, which he announced in his report today, that his hero had been slighted by such historians as Henry Cabot Lodge and George Bancroft.

Such authorities as Washington and Lafayette are quoted in contradiction to slighting references by Lodge and Bancroft, and Maj. Hammond contends that Gen. Sullivan not only "led the first military action of the war of the American revolution," but also:

Crossed the Delaware with Washington and earned his share of glory in the subsequent victory; made New York state habitable by attacking and defeating the Iriquois Indians; and, as a lawyer and statesman, was chiefly responsible for New Hampshire's entry into the United States by acceptance of the federal constitution.

Movies Gauged for 13 Year Old Minds, Electrical Expert Says

New York, Jan. 22.—(AP)—Mass production of motion pictures for a "composite" individual with the mind of a 13 year old child, was condemned today by Arthur E. Krows, director of the electrical research products of the Western Electric company.

He spoke before the annual meeting of the National Board of Review of motion pictures.

"There is a lot of worthy thinking at this level," said Mr. Krows, "but it seems unfair to oblige all of us to see and hear surrounding life through the eyes and ears of adolescence.

"Because there is no discrimination we find the representative individual at whom the product distributed is aimed to be one of those impossible persons who is tall and short, fat and thin, grave and jovial, stupid and smart."

U. of C. Officials Lay Corner Stone of New School of Education

The corner stone of the new $850,000 graduate school of education of the University of Chicago was laid yesterday before officials and members of the faculty.

Dr. Charles H. Judd, director and dean of the school of education, and Emery T. Filbery, assistant to the president, officiated.

The building, located in Kimbark avenue near 59th street, will be four stories in height and T shaped. On the first floor will be administration offices and a lecture hall. On the second floor will be a large library. The third and fourth floors will be divided into offices and laboratories. The structure is being financed out of a grant of $1,500,000 which was given by the general education board of New York.

Nearly 100,000 Kiwanians Busy in Welfare Work

Nearly 100,000 members of the Kiwanis clubs of 1,873 towns and cities of the United States and Canada are at work on community betterment and social welfare programs. That was the statement of Raymond M. Crossman of Omaha, president of Rotary International, yesterday, in telling the Chicago club the accomplishments of the organization since its founding 16 years ago. The meeting was held at the Sherman hotel to commemorate the founding of the club.

'Train Children, Advise Senators, to Avoid Wars'

Women Adopt Policy to Promote Peace.

BY GENEVIEVE FORBES HERRICK.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 22.—[Special.]—Children and senators, peace seeking women today agreed, must be persuaded against war, if the sixth conference on the cause and cure of war, which closes tonight, is to be a success.

"Talk to your child, and write to your senator."

That was the message which Mrs. L. V. Hubbard of Montclair, N. J., chairman of the committee to find out "what every woman can do for peace," brought to the 600 delegates.

The children's program includes the following six mandates: Work with him, don't give him toy soldiers, encourage him to read the proper books, teach him the Kellogg-Briand pact, have a weekly discussion at the dinner table about some international event, get him to join the junior Red Cross.

Work on the senators was outlined in these words:

"After having obtained your facts and formed an opinion on any definite question, do not hesitate to write to your senators and express your convictions. Enclose a news clipping, perhaps, or otherwise individualize your letters."

Among the other peace promoting suggestions made to the average women were these:

Understand economics.

Study the Kellogg-Briand pact which outlaws war as an instrument of national policy and present a copy of it to your public school.

Encourage the local commemoration of Armistice day, "in such a way as to keep alive" its true spirit—the cessation of all hostility.

"Entertain foreign students.

"Protest against national and racial prejudice when portrayed by the wrong type of movies, or by the theater itself."

After considerable debate the women adopted a resolution asking President Hoover to call a special session of congress to consider the world court protocols, in case this present session refuses.

A resolution was drawn up congratulating the government of Great Britain and the representatives of India "on the auspicious outcome of their momentous conference, so significant to the whole world." A copy of it was to be sent to Premier Ramsay MacDonald.

Mrs. E. C. Carter, New York City, wasn't so sure, however, that it was wise. "There is some question of wisdom in adopting this," she said. "Resolutions should go out with real understanding of the subject, and we don't know enough about the attitude of minds in Great Britain and India."

So that resolution failed of adoption. Ones which were adopted included an indorsement of the Kellogg-Briand pact; a plea for disarmament, and a denunciation of compulsory military training in all schools, except military academies.

Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, who has been chairman of these conferences ever since the first was held six years ago, again was elected.

Car Manufacturer Also Revealed as Composer

New York, Jan. 22.—[Special.]—William H. Woodin, president of the American Car and Foundry company, was introduced to an audience as a musical composer tonight, when three of his works, played by the Domenico Savino Symphony orchestra, were broadcast. The compositions, which were recently published, were "Tartar Dance," "In Seville," and "Chinese Magic." The program included a four minute address by Mr. Woodin, who related how he came to take an active interest in music. Mr. Woodin plays the cello, violin, piano, banjo, and zither. Also he is a collector of rare books.

HOW TO KEEP FROM GROWING OLD

Flapper Gone, Dean Reveals After Inquiries

Syracuse, N. Y., Jan. 22.—(AP)—A "clinic for co-eds" at Syracuse university has discovered that the flapper is no more.

The clinic is the office of the dean of women, and the acting dean, Eugenie Andrus Leonard, spent nearly a year studying the thoughts and reactions of freshman girls to academic pursuits, friendships, recreation, clothes, religious ideas, vocational aspirations, use of money, contacts with home, and health habits.

Some of the clinic's findings:

That 33.5 per cent of the girls smoked in high school, while 41 per cent have the habit in college—a gain of 7.5 per cent in the change from home restrictions to campus freedom.

Eighty-five per cent of the first year girls already have decided what their work is to be after graduation.

Twenty-eight per cent of the co-eds avowed they had been in love many times; eight per cent said they had had occasional "crushes" on boys; 21 per cent said they had been in love twice; 10 per cent said they had loved once; 31 per cent said they never had been in love.

Sixty-two per cent said their mothers agreed with their opinions about "necking" and "petting."

Sixty-six per cent of the co-eds talk over their love affairs with their mothers. Sixty-seven per cent thought their mothers understood present day sex problems of young people; 25 per cent thought not.

Here are a couple of co-eds' suggestions:

"I would have been glad to have known more. I think my younger brother and sister will be better fitted for college when their turn comes because of the hints I have given mother."

"A girl should know how to take care of herself under all conditions. She should know how to dress, how to smoke, how to drink a little, how to pet, so she won't be surprised into anything, how to keep her heart and not to fall easily, and how to get along with other girls."

Bishop Stewart Holds the First of Diocesan Conventions Feb. 3-4

Chicago Episcopalians look to the dates Feb. 3 and 4, when the first diocesan convention under the presidency of Bishop George Craig Stewart, will convene. Many changes in the administrative organization of the diocese are expected to be made under the new bishop's leadership. Among these changes is Bishop Stewart's program for the institution of three archdeacons, who will carry administrative duties in the form of superintendencies of three diocesan areas.

The archdeacon plan of diocesan administration follows the set up of all English and many American dioceses and the title means bishop's deacon or helper. Interest in the convention also will center in the constitutional changes begun last year, which will permit the laity to vote with greater equality for future bishops.

The constitution now provides that the clergy elect the bishop and the laity confirm or reject. The constitutional change, requiring two readings, was begun last year. The resolution, providing for greater equality, was proposed by Charles R. Field of Evanston, and was passed almost unanimously by the convention. It is predicted that the proposed constitutional change will be decisively defeated this year, in spite of its overwhelming victory last year.

Bishop Stewart and Edward L. Ryerson will be the principal speakers at the annual diocesan dinner, sponsored by the Chicago Church club, held on Feb. 1 at the Sherman hotel. A reception to the bishop will precede the dinner tendered by the clerical and lay delegates from the 150 parishes and missions of the diocese. Delegates to the triennial general convention of the Episcopal church, which will be held in Denver this fall, will be elected by the convention. J. E.

Noted Spanish Playwright to Supervise Own Talkies

A small, gray haired man from Spain, who is known to his own country as one of its foremost playwrights, was a Chicago visitor yesterday. He is G. Martinez-Sierra, and was on his way to Hollywood to direct and supervise the production of some of his own plays in the talkies. The dramatist was accompanied by his wife, who is an actress. Mr. Martinez-Sierra is the author of "The Cradle Song," now playing in New York, and "A Romantic Young Lady," produced some time ago at the Goodman theater.

KNOCK THAT COLD IN A JIFFY

Here's Relief Almost Before You Know It

If you want quick relief from a cold, go back to first principles and use something you know does the business—don't start "trying" a lot of fancy ideas or remedies. Even a "little" cold is too dangerous to take chances on.

Get Hill's Cascara Quinine. A scientific formula made to do ONE THING WELL: to knock a cold in a jiffy, not to cure a hundred different things.

Take two tablets now. Then follow directions on box. Drink lots of water, too—that's all. Soon those mean, aching pains in head and body begin to go; the cold breaks up; poisons leave your system. Almost before you know it, you feel like a new person.

If it doesn't do that, your money back. Get a box now. You'll be surprised at the speed with which it works. Costs only a few cents.

Rev. Albert B. Coe Becomes Pastor of Church in Oak Park

The Rev. Dr. Albert Buckner Coe formally was inducted into the pastorate of the First Congregational church, Oak Park, yesterday. Dr. Coe was called to that church recently from the Second Congregational church, Waterbury, Conn. The Rev. Dr. Walter A. Morgan, pastor of the New First Congregational church and moderator of the Chicago Ministers' association, presided at the afternoon services when the new pastor presented his formal introductory paper.

Over 1,500 people attended last night's installation services. The first of the two required letters of recommendation for the new pastor was from Dr. Coe's father, the Rev. S. W. Coe, a retired Methodist Protestant minister. The second was from Dr. Albert Buckner, former president of King college and an uncle of the west side pastor.

The Rev. Robert W. Coe, pastor of the South Congregational church, Brockton, Mass., and Samuel E. Coe, a Chicago business man, both brothers of the new pastor, took part in the services. Dr. J. T. Stockton of St. Louis preached the installation sermon, and Dr. Albert W. Palmer, former pastor of the Oak Park church and now president of the Chicago Theological seminary, gave the charge to the people.

Reducing Diet Includes Milk for Needed Calcium

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

A correspondent reports that she has been put on a reducing diet by a physician and is worried about the quantity of milk he prescribes for her. Milk, she always understood, is fattening. You give it to people who want to gain weight, not to those who want to lose it.

"You," she flatters me wrongly, "know more about it than this physician does, I think."

First, you're wrong about my knowledge superceding that of a physician, if he is reputable and of good standing among his fellow men. No one bows more humbly than I to a doctor's superior talents in everything pertaining to bodily fitness. And on milk in a reducing diet, I agree perfectly with him, no doubt because it was from a medical source I learned the value of milk in a reducing diet, and from that same source I have gained whatever worthwhile knowledge I may have.

Milk, truly, is usually given in a weight gaining diet. But it is also true that it may be taken advantageously in a weigh reducing one. It is not taken as an extra food item in a reducing diet. Its calories are counted in along with the other foods. Its importance lies in the fact that it is an almost indispensible food. It is the only practical way of getting the calcium necessary for teeth, bone and other tissue. At least one and a half to two cups a day should be taken by every adult to furnish the calcium supply.

Skim milk, buttermilk, fermented milk, and cheese are sometimes suggested in place of whole milk. But if the fat is removed the vitamin value is diminished. Where the fatted milkstuffs are used in a diet an egg a day and an abundance of leafy vegetables should be taken to supply the vitamin A and D loss.

However, if the physician says so—let it be milk. He has figured out the needed number of calories for the indfvidual case and the milk is included in the total.

Rumors of New Club; Jobs on New Bon Mot!

Word is going 'round . . . that plans are afoot for a novel sort of men's club—very swank—to be housed in the La Salle-Wacker building, and for which Andy Rebori will architect the clubrooms . . . that lots of backgammon fans are going in for the new version of the game, "multi-gammon," that 2, 3, or 4 people can play instead of just 2 . . . that "lousy" which has held a favorite place along with "swell" in the vocabulary of young fashionables is now being supplanted by "snousy."

After you'd had a whole season of "seasons" in various cities, being introduced, visiting, and being partied, would you want to go to work? Neither would I, but Princess Elizabeth Cantacuzene does. I'm told it's her firm intention to get a job after she completes the round of visiting that began when she came to this country last November.

She is to go—with the Potter Palmers—to Sarasota next week, and in March, her aunt, the senior Princess Cantacuzene, is to take her to New York, where more people will entertain for her. Then the two of them are going to London for a visit with the John Hanbury-Williamses (Princess Ida Cantacuzene) about May, and after that, if she hasn't changed her mind, Princess Elizabeth will go into trade.

Prince Michel Cantacuzene is leaving this week-end for a fortnight's visit in Sarasota with his mother and the Potter Palmers, and the William R. Odells are going down there the end of next week to occupy a guest house on the Palmer estate. Miss Eleanor McCormick will probably be a visitor of Miss Bertha Palmer's during the winter, too.

Cold Weather Attracts Many to Winter Club Sports.

All of the social piece—Hempstead Washburne tells me that there is a good crowd out every Thursday night for the supper parties at the Winter club with skating afterwards (those who want to can skate to the strains of the radio coming out of the open window) and that there'll be a carnival for the youngsters in February. . . . Ben Marshall and his peppy young daughter, Dorothy, are down at Edgewater Park. . . . The Marquise d'Ivanrey and her daughter, Inez de Soriano, are to be here for two and maybe three weeks more—they're staying longer than they intended to attend to some business. . . . the Arts club is having a Sunday night supper for Andres Segovia, the Spanish guitarist, who is just about peerless as such, on Feb. 1 (Mr. Segovia played at a party the Brewsters gave a winter or so ago, and everybody thought he was grand).

And . . . the Howard Peabodys are going down to Natchez, Mizz'ippi this week-end for the wedding on the 31st of Mrs. Peabody's cousin, Miss Louise Metcalfe, to "Chick" Williams of Evanston. From there Mrs. Peabody is going to Palm Beach. She has an apartment there, and will have the littlest baby, Andrew, with her for her whole stay until April, while Mr. Peabody will take Howard Jr., Joan, and Betty down at Easter vacation time. The children will all come back by train, while their parents motor home by way of North Carolina and Virginia, a trip they've always wanted to take. . . . Mrs. Harold Foreman, Mrs. Edwin Rosenbaum, and Mrs. Samuel Weis are going to Pasadena next Monday for a month's stay. . . . Mrs. Francis T. A. Junkin had a dinner party at the Sevilla-Biltmore when she and her party of guests on the West Indies cruise landed in Havana. . . . at Miami Beach, the Cocolobo Cay club has invited the Committee of One Hundred on an outing to Cocolobo Cay on the 30th, and the various yachts making the trip—I. C. Elston Jr.'s Iderim and the Fred A. Poors' Granada IV. among them—will have a chance race going down. John Hertz is to take some guests in his plane.

Mary Garden Gives Renewed Display of Skill

BY HAZEL MOORE.

"Pelleas and Melisande" has always been one of the rare treasures of the Chicago Civic Opera company's trove. Its first and last performance last night but enhanced that value. It well may be that a superlative cast lent an imaginary worth to the nebulous meanderings of Maeterlinck's unreal stage people, and that Maestro Cooper's deft handling of Debussy's equally elusive orchestral score gave an added effect to the music.

Of last night's cast much might be said. Melisande always has displayed the art of Mary Garden in its most unique attributes. And now as Melisande she reverts to the lack of gesture, the elusive quality of poised flight that characterized her art at its best.

Last night she added another talent, that of trainer for the Pelleas. Barre Hill venturing from her tutelage in the rôle, bravely joined his youth and inexperience to the ripe maturity of the rest of the cast, and emerged triumphant, a Pelleas whose grace was in being natural, who had learned something of Garden's own static quality, and whose style in the semi parlando singing was excellent. His costumes and general makeup also betokened a Garden touch in their excellence. He made a genuine success with the audience.

The Golaud of Vanni-Marcoux remains the dominating character of the production. His genius for characterization combines happily in this rôle with his style of singing. His superlative enunciation was a joy as always.

Maria Claessens and Edouard Cotreuil were dignified as the king and queen and Helen Freund was bright and childlike as Little Yniold. With one or two minor exceptions the lighting and staging were excellent, and Emil Cooper at the baton wrought magic.

SOCIETY AT THE OPERA

"Pelleas et Melisande," Debussy's lyric drama of Maeterlinck's story, attracted the usual society that attends a Mary Garden performance last night at the Civic Opera house.

Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus McCormick Jr. had as their guests Mr. and Mrs. John T. McCutcheon, the Countess Cardelli, and Jacques Cartier. Mrs. Arthur A. Small was hostess in the Robert Rutherford McCormick box to Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Bissell and Chester Johnson.

Mrs. Waller Borden's party included the Marquise D'Invaray, Mr. and Mrs. Hayden Harris, William B. McClure, and John Miller. Mr. and Mrs. Frederick T. Haskell and Mr. and Mrs. Edward F. Swift were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Morse.

Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick had with her Mr. and Mrs. Walter S. Brewster, Mrs. Marshall Blair, Augustus Peabody, and Edwin D. Krenn. The Potter Palmer box was occupied by a party including Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. Bennett, Mr. and Mrs. Clay Judson, Miss Peggy Hambleton, and George Voevodsky.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Sherman occupied the Rufus C. Dawes box and had as their guests Mr. and Mrs. Edward Meyer of Paris and Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Vogel.

Rear Admiral and Mrs. Walter Crosley, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Folsom, and Count Ferry de Fontnouvelle, French consul general, were guests of Mrs. J. Hamilton Lewis.

Visiting Nurse Chief Tells Great Need of Cancer Hospital

The urgent need for a cancer hospital and cancer clinics in Chicago was brought to the attention of the Visiting Nurse association yesterday when Miss Edna L. Foley, superintendent, told how during 1930 visiting nurses had made 11,000 calls to nearly 500 cancer patients. Mis Foley gave a report of the year's work at the association's 41st annual meeting at the Blackstone hotel.

"Chicago has no cancer clinics, no cancer hospital for either the curable or the incurable patient," Miss Foley declared in her report. "New York, Toronto, Boston, Baltimore, and other places are forging ahead with far-seeing programs of cancer prevention, cancer cure and cancer research. We can learn much from them, but we should have our own institutions.

Spring Styles Will Feature Gayer Dresses

New York, Jan. 22.—(AP)—The style warnings of late January indicate that women will change their present black frame of mind for a brown one when springtime essentials.

There will be blue days, too, and pastel hours and multicolored nights.

Simplicity and individualism by day and glamour with elegance by night are spring time essentials.

We have heard almost the last of ensemble costumes for the street.

There you have the gist of spring styles as New York is turning them out.

Coats are to be dark, frequently seven-eighths or a little shorter. Long ones will be of the general utility type. They will be cut on present semi-flared lines and belted.

Scarves play a big part in the spring scheme. On coats they may be detachable flat fur affairs. Or the coat may be furnished with a scarf collar which belongs to the dress underneath. In that case the dress will show a little beneath the coat hem, carrying out the two color scheme, which is an important phase of the new smartness. Browns and greens and browns and wood tones are well sponsored combinations.

Dresses will be more or less independent of wraps. New York costumers are resigned to a breaking up of the ensemble system. The two color scheme is smarter.

Brown with green or some shade of yellow or ecru, navy blue with white, and pastel shades in combination with dark colors all will be good for daytime wear in town or country.

FARM AND GARDEN BY PAUL POTTER

Wheat grown at a cost of 17.4 cents per bushel, corn at 10.7 cents, potatoes for 40.7, and cotton produced for five cents a pound are among records which have been announced recently. They are cited as proof that the best methods and reasonable equipment in farming and gardening will pay profits in spite of the low market prices.

The corn economy champions live near Lyons, Neb. The Christensen brothers grew 72 acres on which they kept track of all costs, including daily charges against machinery with fair depreciation, 7 per cent on initial investment, labor costs for preparation, planting, cultivation and picking, an amount for seed and general farm overhead. All of this totaled $387 for the 72 acres, which averaged 50 bushels to the acre.

The potato efficiency champion last year was located in New York. James M. Doran, Monroe county, grew spuds for 40.7 cents per bushel and harvested them at a time when the New York price was $1.15 a bushel, giving him and eight other premier growers at least $129 profit per acre.

W. G. Whitten of Panola county, Mississippi, is credited with growing cotton for five cents a pound, or a per acre cost basis of $16. He produced 50 bales on 80 acres, keeping account of all major and incidental materials and labor expense.

Wheat production efficiency is announced by George Ruth of Onawa, Ia. He harvested 55 acres last year and then computed his total production cost at 17.4 cents per bushel, exclusive, however, of land investment charges, land taxes and marketing cost. His acre cost was $6.12, after including $82.50 spent for seed and $27.50 for crop insurance.

Vivid Green and Dark Brown Hint at Spring

DOROTHY DULIN' PARIS

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—Light, vivid yellow, green, and dark brown are a favorite combination with the Paris couturiers. Almost all of them have been beguiled by this fresh and charming color scheme. Lucien Lelong often uses it in bright green lingerie collar and cuffs on a rich, dark brown afternoon frock. Hermes is featuring it for sports in low-necked and sleeveless frocks of brown, hand knit wool to be worn with green blouses, caps and scarves of transparent wool, also hand-knit.

Patou, who was responsible for the bright moss-green, occasionally combines it with brown himself, and, all in all, it looks as though this color team will be quite prominent in costumes for Palm Beach and the Riviera as well as early spring wear.

Maggy Rouff makes the early spring suit, sketched above, of vivid green crêpe de laine, trimmed with dark brown astrakan. The line of its jacket widening toward the hips is new. In back, the tucked panel widening toward the hem, gives it an almost Empire effect—intensified by the double fur collar, notched at the nape of the neck. The sleeves are cut in one with the front and they form a shoulder yoke in back. Curved, tucked pockets intensify the jacket's flare.

The skirt is flared by two inverted plaits, stitched in tucks almost to the knees. It has an unusual hip peplum cut into tucked-edged triangles in the front, slightly flaring and drooping toward the back.

The blouse is made of white handkerchief linen. The right side of its front is made of diagonal tucks cut into tabs that button on to the plain left side with lingerie buttons. The plain, linen band collar follows the same movement.

Request for Sewing Machine.

"I wonder if you can get me a sewing machine through your column. I have been out of work for some time and am the sole support of my family, which consists of my mother, who is old and ill, and myself. I could make our clothing if I had the machine. A. W."

If you no longer use your sewing machine, or are planning to invest in a new one and will be discarding the old one, here is a place for it where it will be put to good use. It will mean a great saving for this young woman, who is having such a difficult time trying to support herself and her mother.

BY DORIS BLAKE.

When you're hopping a taxi, yellow, green, white, gray, or tramp, do you ever stop to think that the fellow at the wheel may be in the throes of a romance more thrilling [to him] than any movie ever seen?

Perhaps you just dismiss him with your ten, fifteen cent, or quarter tip and say, "So much more for the family budget," if your tipping is anything but a purely perfunctory habit. Or, perhaps, you just give that photo and name on the inside of the cab one look and dismiss the name as an incredible acquisition to take on with marriage. Anyway, the true confession of "Jack," a taxi driver, set us to wondering what place in the scheme of the public mind these men to whom we entrust our highly valued persons occupy, if any, romantically speaking.

Personally, our luck seem to have been to hear the married life stories of a number of them. Nice stories, too. Matrimonially cheerful ones, though on one outstanding occasion an "El" post was "skinned" while we listened, resetting the hat's proper angle, to the howl the "old woman" set up the night before when her lord told her he bought her the orchids he found in his car and took home.

But "Jack's" is a Cinderella story, partly. Cruising the streets one day, he espied three women, an elderly one and two young ones, standing at an apartment house door, with three heavy satchels. He called: "Cab?" The GIRL, the only one of the three that matters now, said they were waiting for her father in his cab.

"I thought it strange that any cab driver could live in such an apartment house, even if he hooked $150 weekly all the year around, which is impossible. Well, after a wait, father came—in a swell car."

Meanwhile, the girl talked to Jack. He was no slow talker, himself. In that interim he managed to ask her if he could call for her some evening and take her out. The girl said she was going away on her vacation and couldn't set a time then.

A month went by. Then one day he called, "Cab, Baby?" to a girl turned sidewise at the curb. It was the girl. Again she was waiting for her dad's taxi." But Jack talked fast and the girl said "mebbe" she'd see him.

From the doorman he learned her father owned the building; that he was a millionaire. That put a crimp in Jack's dating. But not in his cruising about the building for the last three months, hoping for a glimpse of the girl who won't let him sleep, eat, or 'tend to business.

And that, we conclude, just goes to show that romance may sit out front as well as inside the vehicle you call when you're in a hurry.

DORIS BLAKE ANSWERS

It Can Be Arranged.

"Dear Miss Blake: I like a boy and want to introduce him to my mother. She has told me never to be afraid to bring my friends to my home. Now she is always too busy to meet him or makes some excuse. "BROWN EYES."

Have him come to your home some evening when you know your mother won't be busy and I'm sure she'll find it possible to spend some time with you both.

Judge by His Actions.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 19. My fellow tells me he cares for me. But he tells his friends he doesn't. "JEALOUS PAL."

Can't you tell from the boy's own actions whether he likes you or not? It usually can be told.

Muscular-Rheumatic Aches and Pains

DRAW them out with a "counter-irritant." Distressing muscular lumbago, soreness and stiffness—generally respond pleasantly to good old Musterole. Doctors call it a "counter-irritant," because it gets action and is not just a salve. Musterole helps bring soreness and pain to the surface, and thus gives natural relief. You can feel how its warming action penetrates and stimulates blood circulation. But do not stop with one application. Apply this soothing, cooling, healing ointment generously to the affected area once every hour for five hours. Used by millions for over 20 years. Recommended by many doctors and nurses.

Keep Musterole handy; jars and tubes.

To Mothers—Musterole is also made in milder form for babies and small children. Ask for Children's Musterole.

WOMAN'S OR MISS' DRESS.

The jumper effect of the bodice of this pretty dress gives a jaunty air that will be becoming to girls as well as to the youthful type of woman. Dark brown wool crêpe with cuffs, vestee, and collar of a turquoise blue—the tie brown with blue dots—is delightfully gay and smart. So also would be a dark green wool crêpe with lighter green. Any of the heavier silk crêpes would make up beautifully.

The pattern, 2921, comes in sizes 14, 16, 18 and 20 years and 36, 38 and 40 inches bust measure. Size 16 requires 3¼ yards of 39 inch material with ⅝ yard of 39 inch contrasting.

Dry Failure Cited Against Federal Bill to Prevent Lynching

Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 22.—(AP)—A proposal to indorse an anti-lynching bill now pending in congress was voted down after discussion by the Union of American Hebrew Congregations in the last day of their 32d biennial convention today.

Speakers opposing the measure argued that no federal law could be enforced in states not in sympathy with the law, citing prohibition as a case in point.

The proposal to indorse the federal anti-lynching bill was made by Milton Alexander of Detroit. He said individual states had made no progress in curbing lynching.

Violinist, Here for His Concert, Soon to Be 14

The chief thing on Yehudi Menuhin's mind when he arrived yesterday on the Pennsylvania railroad was the celebration of his birthday, and whether his father, Moshe Menuhin, had fourteen candles in readiness. Chicagoans, however, who met the boy violinist were more interested in his appearance in concert at the Chicago Civic Opera house on Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Illinois Boy is Healthiest

"MY little son, Bud, suffered from constipation," says Mrs. M. Keillor, 5078 Eighth Ave., Maywood, Chicago. "He was having a hard time until our doctor recommended California Fig Syrup and I got some for Bud. The first few doses regulated his bowels, brightened him up marvelously; seemed to give him new strength.

"I have since used Fig Syrup with my boy during colds or upsets. It has been a wonderful help to him; has assisted in making him the strong boy you see—perhaps the healthiest one in our neighborhood."

For more than fifty years, mothers have praised California Fig Syrup. Leading physicians advise its use with bilious, headachy, constipated children, or to keep the bowels open during colds or children's diseases. Children love its rich, fruity flavor. It tones and strengthens weakened bowels; helps make children robust.

Large Family, Small Income Create a Problem

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS

A mother's and father's litany signed by Mrs. Bevans will be sent by her on receipt of a 2 cent stamp.

The mother with a small family, plenty of money, and a nurse or a maid or two, could scarcely have imagination enough to put herself in the place of this young mother:

"My dear Mrs. Bevans: Could you tell me of any books, pamphlets, etc., which would assist me in arranging my household tasks more conveniently? I want my children to be neat and our home systematic, but this seems almost impossible to attain.

"I have thought perhaps some of the plans used in public nurseries, 'homes,' etc., might be applied to good advantage in our home, at least until my children are a little older and can help me with a few tasks. You see, I have five—the oldest is 7, the youngest 8 months, and I have everything, laundry and all, to do alone. My husband's salary is less than $100 a month, so it does not allow much waste, and I have no recreation whatever, not even a magazine, and we have no music or other diversion in our home.

"You cannot realize what a little leisure time would mean to me. Surely, if some mothers can care for more children and larger homes than mine, there is some way that I, too, could find time to be healthy and happy. I enjoy your daily articles so much. You have a real understanding of child psychology, one which, I fancy, was gained through experience rather than books."

In replying I made several general suggestions. One of these was to advise the mother to look into the matter of good nursery schools for the younger children. The other was to suggest that she talk with mothers of her acquaintance placed as she is and combine forces with them—taking turns caring for the children so each will get a little rest or diversion, time to be a human being.

But my main object in printing this letter was the hope that it might call forth some practical suggestions from other mothers who have solved the problem of the large family and the small income, so that they can enjoy life and a little leisure.

Rare Air Mail Stamp Sells for $2,360 to Fan

Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 22.—[Special.]—A United States air mail stamp, issued in 1918 for a face value of twenty-four cents, was sold for $2,360 to an anonymous bidder at an auction sale of rare stamps held here last night at the office of Eugene Klein.

Now See How Konjola Works

Any Wonder That Seven Million Bottles of This Medicine Were Used in Two Years?

No medicine ever became famous by accident. A medicine must make good to make and hold more than a million friends, and that is exactly what Konjola, the new and different medicine, has done.

Here is a medicine of deeds, not words; of performances, not promises. Konjola is recommended and sold solely on its amazing record in the relief of stomach, liver, kidney and bowel troubles, and of rheumatism, neuritis and nervousness. See what this new and different compound of 32 ingredients—actually 32 medicines in one—did for Mrs. Florence Nelson, 939 Ainslie street, Chicago, and remember that this is just one of tens of thousands of voluntary endorsements Konjola has received. Any druggist will tell you all about Konjola and what it is doing for thousands right here in Chicago.

But read the words of Mrs. Nelson:

"I was run down, weak, nervous, and could not get a good night's rest. I had heard so much about Konjola that I made inquiry, and every report was an encouraging one. So I started on Konjola. With the second bottle came splendid results, and as the days passed I became better and stronger. Today my appetite is fine; I rest as I should at night, and I am feeling better generally than for a long time. It is a pleasure to recommend the medicine that did so much for me."

Konjola contains no alcohol, no nerve-deadening drugs, no heart-depressing chemicals. It needs no such ingredients to win its remarkable victories, even after all else tried has failed.

A THREE DAYS' COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs and colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist.—(Adv.)

BANK DIRECTORS BORROW MORE THAN THEY PUT IN

Tishman Admits It in N.Y. Investigation.

New York, Jan. 22.—[Special.]—Max A. Steuer, investigating the closing of the Bank of United States, obtained the admission from David Tishman, director of that bank today, that the directors of the bank stood to lose nothing by its failure because they had borrowed more money than they had on deposit.

Mr. Tishman vehemently objected to an implication he seemed to see in Mr. Steuer's remark that the directors had borrowed these large sums with the possible failure of the bank in mind.

The loans to directors, according to the banking department's records, exceed $4,000,000. Mr. Tishman's real estate firm borrowed $750,000 and had on deposit something more than $100,000. He was not sure how much the deposit was, the witness admitted.

The financial safety of the directors was brought out after Mr. Tishman had admitted that he was one of nine officers and directors of the bank who put up $2,500 each and agreed to put up as much more if necessary, as a retainer for lawyers to guard their interests in the several investigations of the bank's closing.

Questioned by Steuer.

Mr. Tishman made his statement while being questioned by Mr. Steuer and avoided a direct answer to Mr. Steuer's question whether this money was not actually advanced to be used by lawyers who were trying to have Mr. Steuer removed as special assistant district attorney and special deputy attorney general in charge of the bank investigation.

The money, said Mr. Tishman, was to be paid as a retaining fee to Emory R. Buckner and John W. Davis. Other lawyers, however, have acted with them.

During Mr. Tishman's examination Mr. Steuer gave his own explanation of the manner in which Bankus corporation, the bank's principal affiliate, was formed without capital and without assets, and by a series of financial maneuvers gained control of City Financial corporation, which had book assets of $30,000,000.

Mr. Steuer's version of the story was that Bankus corporation obtained in exchange for its stock of $5 par value warrants from stockholders for the purchase of 360,000 shares of the bank's stock; that it borrowed $9,000,000 from City Financial to buy the bank stock; that it then borrowed sufficient money on the stock to buy all but 224 of City Financial's 720 shares of stock; and that it never repaid the loan nor paid interest on it.

Loses on Stock Market.

Part of the deficit of the bank was lost by a director, Joseph C. Brownstone, in a hectic effort to cover his stock market margin accounts in the market crash of late October, 1929, he admitted when called to the stand later in the day.

Mr. Brownstone, questioned by Mr. Steuer, gave his indebtedness to the bank as $625,000 on four accounts, and his balances on those accounts he estimated at a maximum of $30,000.

The day after the bank closed he placed his affairs in the hands of an equity receiver and he is unable to pay his debts, for, he added, if an assessment is made on the Bank of United States stock to make good the loss of depositors, he cannot meet the assessment.

LITTLE ORPHAN ANNIE: Outward Bound

RUGGLES HEIRS LOSE WILL SUIT AND 50 MILLION

Lumberman's Fortune Goes to Charity.

Manistee, Mich., Jan. 22.—[Special.]—The will of Charles F. Ruggles, eccentric multimillionaire lumberman, leaving his fortune to educational and charitable institutions, was upheld against attacks by Ruggles' relatives when Judge Hal L. Cutler directed a Circuit court jury today to bring in a verdict against the objectors.

Harry Ruggles of Benton Harbor was the plaintiff in the action, although he represents several other heirs who were given comparatively small amounts under the will or cut off entirely. He, with Reginald Ruggles, both nephews, and Addie Brundage, a niece, are to share a $220,000 trust fund. The remainder of the estate, estimated at fifty million dollars, was placed in the hands of the trustees, who are to select such educational and charitable institutions as they see fit, to share it.

Made Fortune in Lumber.

Ruggles made his fortune in lumber, and one of his many eccentricities was to cling to the garb of a woodsman similar to that he wore when first he came to Michigan at the age of 22. He wore a butternut shirt and moccasins, corduroy trousers, and a mackinaw. Though clean and fastidiously neat, his queer garb often caused him to be denied accommodations by fashionable hotels until he persuaded the management to call a local banker and ask whether his check for an amount sufficient to buy the hotel was good.

He preferred his own cooking, his home was filled with fruits and vegetables he had preserved, and each Christmas he would give away several hundred pounds of candy he had made at home.

He had a queer mathematical bent which expressed itself in the invention of complicated games, and in the agreements he made with those who invested money in his enterprises.

Interested in Court Reform.

He was involved in many legal disputes during his lifetime and as a result became interested in court reform.

At one time, it is stated, Ruggles considered leaving the bulk of his estate to Northwestern university at Evanston, Ill., but negotiations did not proceed to his satisfaction. A second attempt to found a laboratory of psychology, biology, and psychoanalysis at the University of Chicago also fell through, as did a similar proposal to the California Institute of Technology.

WALTER DICKEY, PIPE MAKER AND PUBLISHER, DEAD

Kansas City, Jan. 22.—(AP)—Walter S. Dickey, Kansas City clay pipe manufacturer and former publisher of the Kansas City Journal-Post, died at his home here today.

Mr. Dickey had been suffering from a severe cold. His death was attributed to a heart attack. He was 68 years old.

He was presiden of the W. S. Dickey Clay Manufacturing company and principal stockholder in the newspaper, of which his son, W. Laurence Dickey, is the present publisher.

It was as a manufacturer of clay products that he became a national figure and a multimillionaire. He established plants in Missouri, Illinois, Texas, Kansas, Utah, Alabama, Tennessee, Georgia, Arkansas, California and Mexico City.

Miss Frances Andrews, 90, Noted Scientist, Dead

Rome, Ga., Jan. 22.—(AP)—Miss Frances Andrews, 90, noted scientist, who with Theodore Roosevelt and Woodrow Wilson was elected to the International Academy of Science by the Italian government a number of years ago, died early today of a heart attack.

Miss Andrews was the author of a number of scientific articles and a textbook on botany endorsed by the French government for use by the schools of France. During her early womanhood she wrote many works of fiction, among them "The Wartime Journal of a Georgia Girl."

FUNERAL RITES FOR ALMA RUBENS WILL BE HELD TOMORROW

Hollywood, Cal., Jan. 22.—[Special.]—Ricardo Cortez, estranged husband of Alma Rubens, was among the first at the undertaking parlor on North Highland avenue, Hollywood, this morning, when the body of the dead actress was removed following her death of pneumonia at the home of friends last night.

Cortez was not permitted to view the body of his wife, who recently had talked of divorcing him, until the casket had been prepared. He left a basket of American Beauty roses. Baskets, blankets and bouquets of flowers followed Cortez's offering in profusion.

Arrangements for the funeral were announced by Mrs. Hazel Large of Madera, Cal., sister of Miss Rubens.

Miss Rubens' body is to lie in state from 8 o'clock Friday morning until 11 o'clock Saturday in Hollywood.

Funeral services by a Christian Science reader are to be held in the Little Church of the Flowers, in the suburb of Glendale, at 1 o'clock Saturday afternoon. The church holds only 250 persons, so arrangements were made today to have loud speakers installed outside. The casket will then be taken to Fresno, Cal., where it will be placed in a mausoleum Monday.

Miss Rubens' sister stated today that some reports of the actress' parentage were incorrect. Her mother was Irish and her father Alsatian, Mrs. Large said.

C. A. Weyerhaeuser Left Estate of $6,812,856

Little Falls, Minn., Jan. 22.—(AP)—Charles A. Weyerhaeuser, lumber magnate who died last February while on a world cruise, left an estate of $6,812,856, his will revealed here today. Little Falls was his legal residence. The widow will receive a life income of $100,000 a year. The remainder of the estate goes to a son, Carl A., and a daughter, Mrs. Sarah Maude Rosenberry, Yankton, S. D. The inventory summary of the estate listed more than $6,000,000 in stocks, mostly in a family holding company.

HERE'S the Pie that is making women realize how useless and expensive it is to bake at home. Its short bottom crust has the flaky texture of perfect pastry. And it is filled with creamy custard topped with a stiffly beaten, frothy white meringue sprinkled generously with the sweet, tender meat of shredded, toasted cocoanut. Delivered to your grocery or delicatessen the day it is baked, Mrs. Wagner's Cocoanut Cream Pie is wrapped to retain its oven freshness. Try one at lunch or supper.

HAWKS TROUNCE TRAILING QUAKERS, 5 TO 2

BERG TOSSES HIS CROWN IN RING AGAINST HESS

Battalino to Play Safe with Shea.

Tonight's Card

Jack Kid Berg vs. Goldie Hess, 10 rounds.
Bat Battalino vs. Eddie Shea, 10 rounds.
Ralph Lenny vs. Marty Stone, 6 rounds.
Johnny Peters vs. Ernie Peters, 6 rounds.
Willie Oster vs. Buck Easterling, 6 rounds.

Jack Kid Berg will hold open house tonight at the Stadium when he defends his junior welterweight championship against Goldie Hess of Los Angeles. His activities will be supported by the featherweight title holder, Chris Battalino, and Eddie Shea of Chicago in another ten round engagement.

Battalino, however, is taking no chance on losing his crown. Financial arrangements could not be made for a defense with another champion on the same program, so Shea must weigh more than the featherweight limit of 126 pounds.

Eddie thus will reverse the customary procedure and instead of sweating off a few ounces to make weight, probably will have a meal just before his appearance at the commission offices. Shea normally would not weigh 127 pounds, and the meal was prescribed. By this means Battalino will not be deprived of his title, even if he is knocked out.

A King's a King, for a' That.

While the junior welterweight title is not as important commercially as the lightweight title or the heavyweight crown, which tops all in value at the box office, still it entitles one to a degree of respect from the more common gentry of the profession. Berg has slid up and down the arbitrary weight notches in the fight business, meeting lightweights and welterweights whenever the job promised sufficient remuneration.

Goldie Hess, who also aspires to other honors, is not averse to relieving Berg of his title, even if it is one of those in-between affairs. And from reports, Hess, if he gets by the early rounds tonight, will offer the visiting Englishman plenty of competition.

Hess Is German-Irish Now.

Race and nationality seem as important to a fighter as religion is to a political candidate in some southern states. Max Schmeling, it is said, would like to fight in Chicago because of proximity to Milwaukee, Cincinnati, and St. Louis with large German populations, not forgetting cosmopolitan Chicago. An Irish appellation once was essential to the fight business, even if it was a nom de ring adopted by a spindling lad with a mixed racial inheritage which defied experts and well could be classed as mongrel.

Goldie Hess took occasion yesterday to announce he is three-fourths Irish and one-fourth German, although he has assumed other nationalities for profit. Recently, when he fought Canzoneri in the east, he posed as a German Jew because it seemed the thing to do for the box office, and on the Pacific coast he once passed for a Scotchman. This versatility is considered ethical and may be praiseworthy compared to exploitations of a third rate fighter as a top notch performer, which is a very common occurrence.

Move to Foil Scalpers.

Stadium officials, admitting that scalpers at recent shows have secured tickets to the cheaper priced seats which generally are sold out, announced yesterday they had held back a block of $1 seats which would be placed on sale at 7 o'clock tonight. The theory is that scalpers cannot sell their wares if the public still can buy seats at the box offices.

Eddie Anderson Loses to Cupid, but Defeats Ring Foe

Omaha, Neb., Jan. 22.—(AP)—Kid Cupid stalked into the prize fight ring tonight and kayoed Eddie Anderson, Chicago lightweight, in quick order.

Anderson, the "cowboy of the ring," married Miss Babe Matthews, Omaha, in the ring as movie cameras clicked and the words of the marriage ceremony were broadcast by loud speakers to far corners of the City auditorium. Municipal Judge John Battin read the marriage lines, and as he finished reached out and held Anderson's hand high in the air—the official signal of victory in the ring.

As he reached out for Anderson's hand, the crowd came to life with ringing cheers and cries of "Kiss the bride, Eddie!" Eddie obliged. The judge obliged. The best man obliged and Anderson retired to his corner to cast aside his dress clothes. As he was bandaging his hands, his opponent, Billy Vaughan, Omaha, entered the ring. A fan cried out for him to kiss the bride. His face reddened. Vaughan stood in his corner as the bride crossed the ring to his side. Vaughan quickly kissed her.

After a slow start Anderson settled down and won the decision over Vaughan after eight rounds of fast fighting. In the first round Anderson almost fell through the ropes after missing a hard swing, saving himself by grasping the lower strand. In the later rounds his experience enabled him to pile up a winning margin by clever boxing.

JACK DEMPSEY IN HOSPITAL WITH INFECTED HAND

The infection developed after Dempsey engaged in a gymnasium workout last Monday. He thought little of it at the time, since it appeared to be merely a small cut. Complications set in, however, and the entire hand was swollen twice its normal size today. The infection had spread to the arm.

Resignation of Page Is Before Indiana Board

Bloomington, Ind., Jan. 22.—[Special.]—The University of Indiana athletic board of control will meet here Saturday night to take formal action on the resignation of H. O. [Pat] Page as football coach. Announcement of the meeting was made today by Dr. W. J. Moenkhaus, chairman.

Many applications for the vacated coaching post have been received by Athletic Director Z. G. Clevenger, but it is believed none will be definitely selected at the meeting Saturday. Clevenger declined to name the applicants, but rumor has it that among them are Fred Dawson, formerly of Nebraska, and Ray Morrison, Southern Methodist coach.

The man whose name has been mentioned most frequently as Indiana's future football coach still maintains he will not apply for the job. He is E. C. Hayes, varsity track and freshman football coach at Indiana.

An offer to return to his alma mater and assist his former football teacher, Alonzo Stagg at the University of Chicago, awaits Page. He also is considering two or three offers from eastern universities.

The athletic committee is composed of Athletic Director Clevenger, five faculty members, two Chicago business men, one Indianapolis resident, and a Bloomington banker. They are Fred E. (Kinky) Bryan and J. Clair Scott of Chicago; Willis Coval of Indianapolis; Roy O. Pike of Bloomington, and Dr. W. J. Moenkhaus, Prof. W. W. Patty, Prof. C. J. Sembower, Prof. W. E. Treanor, and Prof. U. H. Smith.

TODAY'S SCHEDULE.

8:15—Reiselt vs. Denton.

BY FRENCH LANE.

Youth kicked and rapped on the door of an old man's private sanctum yesterday when Allen Hall of Chicago played his way into the lead of the world's championship three cushion billiard tournament.

Hall, who flits around the billiard table with the emotions of a chorus girl dancing and singing her first number, but who clicks off billiards as old Jake Schnefer did way back when, is the youngest man playing at the Congress Recreation rooms for billiards' most coveted honors.

Hall is just 30. No player of that age ever won a world's championship. Yet he literally tied Frank Scoville of Buffalo, the 52 year old player who has just turned pro, into a knot in their encounter yesterday afternoon. The score was 50 to 27. The game went 38 innings.

Champion Needs Breaks.

Hall executes his billiard shots with great skill and also has some luck now and then. Any man who can charge on to championship must get the breaks occasionally. If you don't believe it, ask Max Schmeling, Connie Mack or Gallant Fox.

Hall got his break in the 15th inning when Scoville was playing him to a standstill, the score being 14 to 12. Then Hall missed his shot but "scratched" a billiard. He kept going right along and rolled up a run of six.

It took the heart out of Scoville. It would have crushed the spirit of most any player. With that break in his favor, Hall kept right on playing championship billiards. He followed it a little later with a run of three, then got another cluster of six, scored four more in another inning and was far out in front during the late innings.

How They Clicked.

HALL — 1 0 0 2 2 1 1 5 0 0 0 1

Last night Johnny Layton, the world's champion, who was beaten in the first match of the tournament, demonstrated that he will not give up the crown without a stiff argument. He beat Charles Jordan from the Pacific coast, 50 to 25, in 36 innings.

Layton was in great form, so was his opponent. In seven innings Layton got 21 billiards. Jordan could not keep step at such a pace and after that spurt Layton was always safely out in front. This is the way he conquered the Pacific coast champion:

0 0 2 0 2 1 2 2 3 1—50

JORDAN — 0 0 1 2 0 0 0 0 3 0 3
1 0 1 1 0 0 1 0 1—25

Otto Reiselt, the 40 year old player from Philadelphia, also flashed fine billiards during the afternoon and got a 50 to 36 decision over Dave Jacobs of St. Louis in 52 innings. It was the third straight defeat Jacobs has suffered. It was Reiselt's second victory in as many games. He was cool and made his shots with deliberation. If he continues at this clip, he's going to be a hard man for Hall, Layton, or any of the others to conquer.

Decides to Control Self.

It will be remembered that Reiselt some years ago displayed the most unmanageable temper of any player who got into top notch competition. When he missed a close shot he all but turned black in the face.

He toned the old temper into the discard," Reiselt told his friends before this tournament started. His play so far indicates that he was speaking the truth. The Reiselt-Jacobs match was decided as follows:

0 0 0 0 0 0 0 3 0 3 0 0 0 1 0
0 0 0 0 3 0 0 0 0 0 1—50

JACOBS — 0 0 1 2 1 0 0 4 1 0 1 1
0 0 0 0 2 0 0 1 0 0 0 0 0 1 0
0 0 1 2 3 0 1 3 0 0 0 0 0 2 0

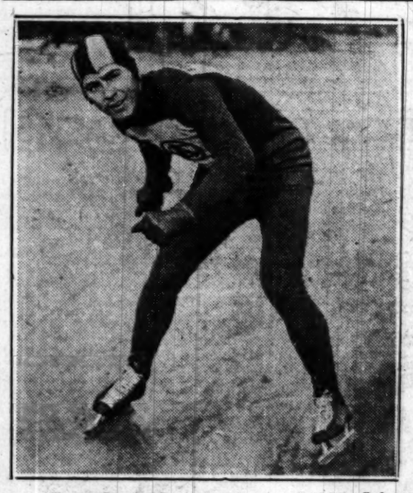
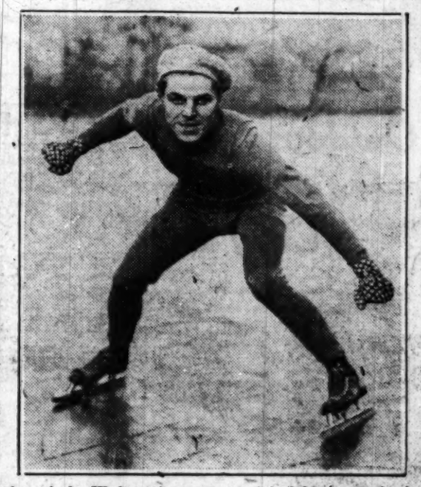
RACE FOR SILVER SKATES





Frank Stack of the Amphions and Eddie Schroeder of the Walton Arrows are picked by ice enthusiasts to win the Men's Senior Derby in the Silver Skates Derbies Sunday. However, a number of outsiders well may dispute title aspirations of the pair.

In the WAKE of the NEWS

WRESTLING.

WRESTLING, which had fallen pretty thoroughly into disrepute both from a sporting and attendance viewpoint, is enjoying a budding renaissance. The revival may go farther, with new factors, including several collegians, in the title quest.

Back in the days when nearly all grapplers were working under contract to one or the other of the so-called "trusts," you did not know whether you were seeing a rehearsed "exhibition" or a real match when you saw leading performers on the mat, but you felt reasonably sure there was a "caucus" nominee. These "ring" around a rosy" contests between the same subjects finally alienated their following.

The Wake never has been a warm defender of wrestling, because of its sinister possibilities and sponsorship. We enjoy a bout well enough as a spectacle when we are a spectator, but as a reporter we do not claim enough insight to determine whether it is merely "one of those things" or a real match.

In fact, a promoter once told us that the best matches from the crowd's viewpoint were the "blarneys." He would not admit that the bouts were predetermined, but did say that the grapplers put on a show for the crowd before letting the "best man" win. Further, he stated the crowd would walk out on most affairs conducted strictly on their merits.

Wrestling is coming back, we think, largely because of dissatisfaction with boxing's frequent fouls and unsatisfactory decisions. That's all right for us, but we do not propose to be a party to it. Curiosity might take us to an affair between leading contenders. That's a far distance from taking the sport seriously.

Hack Wilson's Forty Grand.

Hack Wilson of our Cubs no doubt would like forty grand for his services this season. His denial of such demand indicates tact. Except for publicity purposes, baseball magnates do not relish salary discussions in the newspapers. High payment to one player stimulates other requests from teammates. Forty thousand dollars is a pretty good salary these days. On the other hand, a ball player's position in the top flight is brief, compared with most other professions. We foresee no ultimate dispute between Cubs and Wilson over salary, whatever the figure may be.

Maizie Meets a Bozo.

A bozo (odd looking man) followed me,
And while they played "Oh, Dry Those Tears,"
He wept abundantly.
"I have no work," he said to me,
"I have a sickly wife
And many chilcs" . . . somebody sang
"The Little Things in Life."
"Come up tomorrow morn," I said
And thus it was we parted;
I dropped some money in his hand,
A drum played "Broken Hearted,"
Next day I told my boss the tale,
He started in to sob,
And told me he would do his best
To get the chap a job.
'Til half past five I hung around
To dry the bozo's eyes,
He didn't come, so I went down
And bought "Those Lil' White Lies."

Dear Wake: On Jan. 2, Helper E. G. Green referred to a number of towns named after Charley Comiskey and his old time baseball players, and suggested some fan must have so named them. I plead guilty on both counts of being a fan and naming those stations at the time I was chief rate clerk in the passenger department of the Missouri Pacific.

MAROONS OPEN TRACK SEASON AGAINST LOYOLA

University of Chicago's track team will open its indoor campaign tonight at Bartlett gymnasium in a dual meet with Loyola university. The first event starts at 7:30 p. m.

Coach Ned Merriam, of the Maroons, will utilize the meet to try out some of his new men under competition, holding his two stars, Capt. East and Dale Letts out of their pet events. East will run a special 50 yard dash against Brooks, former Hyde Park High school sprint man, and Letts will attempt to break the gymnasium record in the mile run in a special race.

Francisco, one time Moosehart prep star, is the best Loyola entry, competing in both the 50 yard low and high hurdles and in the dash.

Question—Who Will Capture Men's Senior?

BY WILFRID SMITH.

Who will win the fifteenth men's senior derby in THE TRIBUNE'S Silver Skates carnival Sunday?

Skating fans, all season, have been divided in support, but the majority has determined apparently that the race lies between Frank Stack and Eddie Schroeder. The series of 1 mile qualifying races, preceding the thrilling 2 mile battle for the Silver Skates, demands stamina. From 1917, when Art Staff led home a field of 200, until last year, when Bill Minster surprised 60,000 spectators by sprinting to a long advantage and holding the pace, the winners have been stars, later to earn national reputations.

Are Popular Choices.

Stack and Schroeder are popular choices because they are leading the season point standings in the winter skating campaign. Stack, star of the Amphion Athletic club, has scored 245 points. Schroeder represents the Walton Arrow A. C. His point score is 225. Stack is 25 years of age and weighs about 180 pounds. His power, best adapted to combat strong winds over hard ice, carried him to the individual championship last year. He also is champion of western Canada and twice champion of Illinois.

The Walton ace, 19 years old, is of slighter build. If the course is soft Sunday fans believe he will defeat Stack. Eddie is the Illinois indoor champion and last Sunday won the northwest championship at Minneapolis.

Don't Overlook Wondra.

The field of skaters for the senior derby, numbering 949, an all time record, has a host of others who may win. Ray Wondra of the Amphions, who finished third in the 1929 derby, is a logical candidate. He was the Wisconsin-Illinois titleholder last year and in 1929 won tri-state honors.

Cornie Ewert and Art Peters, representing the Northwest Skate club, are expected to be in at the finish. In fact Ewert defeated Stack this year in the Henry A. A. 2 mile derby. Peters finished second in the 1929 TRIBUNE race. Stack, Schroeder, and Peters, with Wally Mitchell, Majestic Skating club, represented this area in the 1930 North American championships at Lake Placid and Saranac lake. Mitchell is the city champion.

Kucera Is Strong Contender.

Al Kucera of the Henry A. A., winner of the 10,000 meter race in the Olympic tryouts this year and 1930 tristate champion, is a strong contender. So is his teammate, Elmer Young, and Dick McCarter of the Majestics. Ted Kechane, Barrett A. C., who recently entered the class A ranks, and Charles Serro, Opal A. A., will support these two. McCarter won the juvenile Silver Skates race in 1925.

Notwithstanding this imposing list of stars, the winner of the fifteenth senior Derby may be an unknown. William Minster surprised the field last year and recognized stars may

OUTDOOR SPORTS TOO HAZARDOUS TO BE HEALTHFUL

Wide Open Spaces Are Full of Pitfalls.

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 22.—The old theory that the wide open spaces are open to one and all and that healthful recreation in God's great outdoors is free does not stand up very well any more. It seems much cheaper to spend ten nights in a barroom than ten days in the open, and not only that but in the larger cities, where they very thought of wooded hills and gurgling brooks arouses a pathetic wistfulness, there is much less danger of molestation. The caretakers and game wardens in the territory beyond the city line are much more active and officious than the prohibition agents are in town.

Moreover, the idea that recreation in the great out-of-doors is altogether healthful is not supported by the realities. I saw, not long ago, in some insurance statistics, evidence that various forms of outdoor play were exacting a large toll of life and limb. The game of golf is, strangely enough, one of the most hazardous, due to the unnatural stress imposed on the spine by the pivoting movement. Hunters shoot one another unintentionally, but often seriously, and, in many cases, conclusively, and there is a large mortality from pneumonia in the duck season.

Where Shooting Is Frowned Upon.

Shooting in the speakeasies is forbidden by law, however, and infractions are punished with the utmost severity by the officers. And, unlike the duck blinds, the speakeasies are all comfortably heated.

Skaters fall through the ice, but it is practically impossible to fall through the dance floor of a night club. Equestrians, too, in pursuit of the elusive and often purely hypothetical fox, sometimes fall off their horses, but the danger of falling out of a taxicab is negligible.

I am not insensible to the thrill of a two pound bass on a line, but the law imposes a good deal of bother. If I am in the country I must look up a town clerk who is generally away somewhere hauling sand for a contractor, and wait a long time for him to come back and sell me a license without which I am not permitted to fish for the bass. But the license does not guarantee that I will catch a bass.

Thrills by the Bottle.

On the other hand, I am not insensible to the quiet exhilaration which comes of drinking ale. In fact, as between the two sensations, I would much rather have relations with Bass than with bass. But I do not need a license to buy ale, and I always know I can get it. To be sure, it is sometimes inferior ale, but I have seen times, out bass fishing, when I would have compromised on a two ounce squidge or dingbat or whatever the local name might be for those little apprentice fish that nibble the bait away, sending tiny impulses up the line, and serve as cappers to keep the fishermen out in boats costing a dollar an hour. I take what I can get.

Admittedly, the recreations of the speakeasy are not without some perils, being dangerous to the arteries and liver, but they have been grossly exaggerated. And nobody can tell me that it doesn't do something just as bad to the brain to go walking around in the sun for hours chasing a golf ball.

But feasibility and convenience are entirely on the side of the barroom. Living in New York, for instance, if one wishes to go fishing, the first step is to write to some department of the state government inquiring where to apply for a fishing license. One week later there comes a reply referring one to the wrong department, but after a day or two the correct department is found and the license is obtained.

Watchmen Spoil Party.

Under the rules the department, once discovered, must sell the license; in the meantime one will have bought a steel rod, a jeweled reel, some silk line, some hooks with feathers on them like the hocks of a Clydesdale stallion, a creel, a pair of rubber boots, a fore-and-aft or gorblimey cap, a pipe which

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

Chicago's Blackhawks stretched their string of National league victories to six straight last night before 6,800 spectators at the Stadium. The addition to their winning streak was recorded by a 5 to 2 triumph over the lowly but boisterous Philadelphia Quakers. The decision also served to place the Hawks only one point behind the league leading Boston Bruins.

Probably with the idea of atoning for the 10 to 3 plastering received on their last appearance here, the Quakers cut loose right at the start and produced a one point lead for themselves. This slim margin loomed large in view of the dismal style in which the Blackhawk defense functioned.

Hawks Try 18 Times.

Although 15 minutes of the inaugural period elapsed before the Quakers jumped into a 1 to 0 lead, there was no dearth of action. Much of the period involved labor on the part of Cude, Quaker goalie. Before the session closed he had been forced to exert himself 18 times to avoid embarrassment.

In one of his defensive efforts, Cude was under the bulky form of Abel, who tried to dive into the net ahead of the rubber missile. Lowery and Shields also were involved in the pileup. When the men were disentangled the puck was a matter of inches from a score.

Up to the moment of their point achievement the Quakers had been somewhat backward about approaching the Blackhawk net. One of these efforts was by Barton, just after he had returned from the penalty box for tripping Graham.

Kilrea Opens Scoring.

The score was on Lowery's pass to Kilrea, the puck taking an unexpected hop over Goalie Gardiner.

The Hawks started the second session at high speed. Three times in the first two minutes of play they had Goalie Cude stretched on the ice in front of the scoring house, but a moment later Gardiner had to leave the Chicago goal unprotected while he went to the left to slap away a puck that had come his way rather unexpectedly.

At the middle of the period the Blackhawks made another mass attack and three times in as many seconds Ingram, Couture, and Somers made short jabs toward the net. On each the puck bounced off the perspiring Cude.

Gottselig Scores from 20 Feet.

Shields was banished from the arena for hooking Gottselig an instant before the Hawks recorded their tying point in 16:30. Ripley snaked the puck from a Philadelphian and slid it over in front of Gottselig. He took aim and sailed it into the net 20 feet distant.

An unusual happening let the Blackhawks move into a 2 to 1 advantage at 1:20 in the third period. In a stampede toward the Quaker net, Desjardins passed to Adams, whose shot rebounded and stopped in front of Ingram. The latter, stretched on the ice, flicked the disc backhanded for a score.

The next Hawk score, at 2:30, was a deft bit of attack by Couture and Gottselig. Couture took a long shot at the net and Gottselig slapped it past Goalie Cude.

March Scores in 5:25.

The Hawks raised their advantage to 4 to 1 in 5:25. March rushed the puck down the ice, lost it momentarily and then drove it into the goal with a short thrust after Cook had passed to him.

The Quakers notched their second point at 15:40 when Milks took a pass from Lowery and nudged it into the net far enough to count.

Wentworth, Hawks' defense man, dashed down the ice in the last minute of play to score the last point in 19:10.

Americans	9	8	7	25	40	34
Ottawa	5	18	2	12	45	75

New York, Jan. 22.—(AP)—For the second time in three meetings of the current National Hockey league season the New York Americans turned back the Boston Bruins tonight by a 2 to 1 score. New York's great defense again was the big factor in the triumph with a mistake by Tiny Thompson, Boston goalie, giving the Americans the winning goal.

With the score tied, 1 to 1, in the middle of the third period and the Americans a man short on a penalty, Billy Burch made a shot from the blue line and Thompson misjudged it. The puck slid past his hand into the net for the deciding tally of the game. The lineups:

AMERICANS [2].		BOSTON [1].
Worters	G	Thompson
Dutton	R. D.	Shore
Ayres	L. D.	Owen
Burch	C	Weiland

TORONTO BEATS MAROONS.

MONTREAL, Que., Jan. 22.—(AP)—The Toronto Maple Leafs moved into undisputed possession of second place in the Canadian division of the National Hockey league by whipping the Montreal Maroons, 4 to 2, tonight. The Leafs piled up a 2-0 lead in the first two periods and then held the Maroons even in a wildly exciting third period, which saw four goals scored.

CANADIENS BLANK OTTAWA.

OTTAWA, Ont., Jan. 22.—(AP)—The Montreal Canadiens, leaders in the Canadian division of the National Hockey league, scored a cleancut victory over the Ottawa Senators tonight, 3 to 0. George Hainsworth's great work at goal for the Canadiens was the outstanding feature of the battle.

Question—Who Will Capture Men's Senior?

Here Are the Orders.

All contestants and their numbers will be listed in THE TRIBUNE tomorrow or Sunday. The boys' midget, boys' juvenile and boys' junior classes will be published tomorrow. They will report tomorrow for numbers at the Garfield park boathouse between 11 and 1:30 o'clock. The first heat will start at 2 o'clock.

All other competitors will report Sunday at the same place between 10 and 12:30 o'clock. Racing starts Sunday at 1 o'clock.

THE TRIBUNE will distribute programs to the crowd on Sunday without charge. The 4,829 names require a program of 40 pages. It also contains a list of officials and previous winners of Silver Skates.

14 WORLD SKI RIDERS TO FACE DUNES JUMP

Fourteen of the best ski jumpers in the world will compete on the biggest artificial ski hill in the world when the Ogden Dunes Ski club holds its fourth annual tournament Sunday at the Dunes slide just east of Gary. In addition to the fourteen A class riders, 30 class B skiers will compete for trophies, a total field of 44 jumpers.

All American skiers will be watching one man, Ludwig Boeck, German national champion. Boeck made his first jumps from a steel ski slide last Sunday in the blinding snowstorm at Cary. Though he failed to make long distances in his jumps, he was steady as a rock in flight and landing. In ski jumping, form counts as much as distance and with the experience at Cary and practice tomorrow and Sunday morning on the Ogden Dunes slide, the American jumpers expect to meet keen competition from the German.

Norge Ski club will be represented by three of their best. Guttorm Paulsen holds the American record with a leap of 214 feet, made at Steamboat Springs, Colo. Alf Bakken is a veteran, winner of many tournaments, while Roy Mikkelsen is a daring long distance rider.

PACKERS PLAY FLORALS.

The south side independent basketball championship will be decided tonight at White City when the Wilson Packers, formerly the Briggs Realtors, Central A. A. U. champions last year, meet the Duffy Florals.

SMITTY—IT'S THE MAN WHO PAYS

BOWEN BOY SETS CITY PREP MARK; CAGES 38 POINTS

Bill Haarlow, who recently returned to the Bowen heavyweight quintet after an injury received in a practice game, yesterday set a new City league record as Bowen overwhelmed Parker, 59 to 7, on the latter's floor. Haarlow scored 38 points.

In establishing the new mark, Haarlow collected 17 baskets and four free throws. Paradis contributed three of the losers' points, while Munn added a basket and Norris and Galbraith each garnered a free throw.

Parker Lights Win.

Taking the lead in the last quarter, the Parker lightweights hung up their fourth victory of the season, defeating Bowen, 24 to 22.

Harrison heavies scored their fifth league triumph by defeating Tuley on the home floor, 22 to 15. Jimmy Sisulak and Ernst starred for Harrison. Sisulak scored four points, while Ernst made three baskets.

With Silverman scoring 11 points, the Tuley lights triumph over Harrison, 31 to 16. Tuley led at half time, 12 to 11.

Austin Wins Two Games.

Austin scored a double victory over McKinley on the Austin court. Leading, 11 to 6, at the half, the Austin heavies won, 21 to 12. The lights triumphed, 26 to 13.

CHICAGOANS FAIL IN SEMI-FINALS OF CURTISS GOLF

Miami, Fla., Jan. 22.—(AP)—New York state golfers repulsed the bid of Chicagoans today and went into the finals of the Glenn Curtiss amateur trophy tournament with Lee Chase, Buffalo, and Jack Ryerson, Cooperstown, to meet over the 36 hole route tomorrow.

Pheasant Flock Shows Taste in Picking Roosts

BY BOB BECKER.

Occupying a protected tract of high ground beween two deep ravines, a flock of pheasants up our way near the shore of Lake Michigan have settled down to their winter's roost. Jack, our springer spaniel, located this roost for us a few days ago when we were taking a hike in the snowstorm which has blanketed northern Illinois.

We would have missed seeing this winter home of the ringnecks if the dog had not been ranging ahead of us as the hiking route did not call for our walking over the rise between the ravines where the birds were.

The ringnecks used their heads when they selected this sheltered location in the timber. A fine stand of oak, hickory, birch and other trees surrounds them. A few feet west of their quarters is a patch of tall weeds which also offers shelter as well as food supplies.

With a wet, clinging snow on the ground and big flakes decorating shrub and tree with beautiful cotton like frosting, the ringnecks sat close and not until Jack smashed into their circle did they take to wing. Five went up with a roar of wings and dodged through the timber like ruffed grouse of the north woods.

One cock bird, sitting in the low branches of a tree, evidently felt he didn't have to hurry, because of his strategic position. With the dog crashing through the weeds beneath him, this last bird did not take to wing until the rest of the flock had almost disappeared from sight. Then he sailed across the snow covered ravine and dropped to the ground just below the crest of the slope. We watched him for a few seconds as he legged it up hill, a striking black silhouette against the fresh snow.

Later Jack, having the time of his life with so much fresh game scent around, flushed another pheasant from a weed patch at the edge of town, which seems to be a regular winter haven for both rabbits and pheasants.

The ringnecks are quite bold about stalking through the back yards not far from our home as they hunt for food. The other day we saw two birds, a cock and a hen, not a hundred feet from the house.

Outdoor Sport Has Rival in a Cozy Bar will bite the tongue like cyanide, and a tweed jacket. And, arriving at last at the lake, forty miles from Times square, and threading the line and twizzling the rod in happy anticipation, one will hear a threshing and be crashing in the bushes nearby and be confronted by a watchman with a badge. "No fishing here," the watchman will state. "This is a state reservoir."

At the next lake another watchman will appear and state: "This is a private lake; no fishing here."

"But who owns the lakes?" one asks.

"Mr. Harrison Tomlinson-Tomlinson Jr., the exclusive society millionaire, owns the lake," says the watchman.

"Well, where is he? I will ask his permission to fish."

"O, he lives in Europe," says the watchman. "Anyway, he never comes up here. He just owns the lake so that nobody else can fish."

Hiking Is Great, Too.

Similarly, though one hears hiking extolled as good for the nerves, the body, and the soul, when one does go hiking, everywhere along both sides of all the roads, save at the dumps where the old automobiles are abandoned, are signs reading, "Keep Off the Grass," or "Private Grounds; Trespassers Will Be Arrested."

There is no activity short of a Vanderbilt wedding which is quite as exacting in the matter of proper and expensive costume and equipment as informal out-of-door life. I called up one of the winter resorts lately to inquire whether a common overcoat and tarpot or derby hat, suitable for barroom wear, would be approved there.

"Well, not exactly," I was told. "The best things to wear here are a suede or leather jacket, riding breeches, fur gloves, field boots or ski boots, a beret or stocking cap, and, of course, a polo coat."

This came to about $250, aside from the skates and skis, but need I point out that the utmost requirements for barroom wear are a ready made dinner jacket and, for swank, a plop hat.

So I know where I am going for my vacation. I am going to Duffy's.

POJELLO TO SUB FOR KWARIANI AT MAT SHOW

Carl Pojello, Lithuanian wrestler, has been substituted for Kola Kwariani against George Zaharias, Colorado Greek, in the headline match of Promoter Doc Krone's show at the Broadway armory, Broadway and Thorndale, next Monday night. Kwariani was injured while wrestling Indian Jim Clinstock at St. Louis Wednesday night when Clinstock's foot struck Kwariani in the eye.

Pojello formerly was undisputed light heavyweight champion of the world and since joining the bigger fellows has been more than holding his own with the best in the east, being undefeated for the season in that sector.

Another newcomer on the card will be Billy [Barefoot] Evans, Cherokee Indian from Drumright, Okla., and former grid star at Northeastern State Teachers' college of Tahlequah, Okla. Evans will go against Wild Bill Nelson of St. Louis.

ST. ROSE QUINTET FACES VISITATION

St. Rose of Lima, lightweight leader in the south division of the Catholic Youths' Basketball league, will be able to cinch first place honors for the first round by winning over Visitation in the most important of the three games to be played tonight. St. Rose has not lost a league contest this season and a victory this evening will make it mathematically impossible for it to be overtaken. The schedule:

[At Visitation gym., 55th and Peoria streets]
Visitation vs. St. Rose of Lima [lights].
St. Cecelia vs. St. Rose [heavies].
Visitation vs. St. Clara [heavies].

$2 on Surface Brings $304 to Backers

New Orleans, La., Jan. 22.—(AP)—Five days ago they said he was through for the remainder of the winter season, but Eugene James, the former Louisville newsboy, was back in the saddle today, booting home winners at the Fair Grounds track.

When the little apprentice was injured last Saturday, it was said he might not be able to ride any more this season, and at least not for two or three weeks. Today, however, he scored with the Valley Lake stable's Herendeen, and placed second on Joseph Leiter's Count Palatine.

The comeback of James vied with F. S. Brown's Surface for the spotlight of the day at the New Orleans track. Surface, a 5 year old son of Trap Rock, won the third race and paid $304.10 for a $2 mutuel ticket to win, $174.50 to place, and $84.20 to show.

Mrs. O. Curtis' 4 year old colt Titus was extended to his limit to win by a nose in the Walter Scott claiming handicap, the feature of a good mid-week card.

U. S. POLO GROUP RATES GUEST AND PEDLEY 9 GOALS

Tommy Hitchcock Is Still Alone with 10.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 22.—Announcement of the new handicap ratings was made at the annual convention of the United States Polo association today at the Racquet and Tennis club.

Hopping Rating Surprise.

The new listings were the most important development of the meeting and though there were not so many changes among important players as some seasons have seen, most were made that had been expected. The failure to advance Hopping was the only surprising development, for it had been believed that all three of the members of the team who were rated below Hitchcock would be raised.

The handicap changes included some interesting revisions as well as those of the international players. Cecil Smith has been raised to eight goals from seven and Rube Williams from six to seven. They are the two Texans whose play in the east last summer was among the sensational features of the international season.

Four New 7 Goal Men.

Four new seven goal players were made, the three in addition to Williams being Robert E. Strawbridge Jr., Stephen Sanford of the Hurricanes, open champions, and Stewart B. Iglehart, the Yale and Old Allen player.

This gives the country a total of seventeen players rated at seven goals or more, which is the top of the polo rating and the list from which international squads are made. Three of those on the American list are

BIERD SUGGESTS RAIL OWNERSHIP OF TRUCK LINES

Urges Regulated Monopoly.

Two transportation systems in the United States, each representing an investment of more than twenty-five billion dollars, are warring upon each other and destroying a large part of their usefulness.

These systems, the railroads that were here first, and the motorized vehicles on the highways, must be coordinated to allow them to survive and to give the public the most economical transportation.

No practical reasons exist why such coordination cannot be accomplished.

Such are the conclusions reached after many years of study and experience, with both steam railroads and motor vehicles by W. G. Bierd, receiver of the Chicago and Alton railroad, which is soon to move into the Baltimore and Ohio consolidated system.

Holds Restrictions Are Silly.

At present, according to Mr. Bierd, the tendency of the public is to support both transportation systems. But rail officials, so far as they have formed any policy toward the motor highway system, have frequently sought to have it so regulated that it will be able to perform only a limited part of the carrying service and the dividend earning of which it is capable.

To hope that restrictions on the sizes of buses and trucks or heavy taxation of such property will restore railroad business is silly, in the phrase of this gray haired veteran of the rail service.

Moreover, it is unjust to the travelers and shippers of the country. They have an investment of nine billion two million dollars in state and federal aid highways alone. Instead of hampering the second, or highway system of transportation, it should be made better. Trucks may be larger, buses faster and more luxurious, and highways more adapted to their use; and public benefits still accrue if the proper attitude toward the whole transportation system is taken by legislators and those engaged in the business of transportation.

Railroads Face Real Crisis.

All these are among Mr. Bierd's opinions. He recognizes that highway vehicles have created a real crisis in the financial affairs of the railroads, which have added five and a half billion dollars to their capital investment since federal wartime control was abandoned. He cited, in an interview yesterday, the greatly increasing cost of operation and maintenance of railroads and loss of revenues through lowered rates as additional factors.

"Thus far," he said, "the passenger carrying automobile has been most prominent in competition, but equally menacing is the growing influence of motor vehicles carrying a large and most important short haul, less than carload merchandise traffic, and during the more recent period the growth of carload tonnage taken from the rails and handled by highway vehicles.

"Most striking, perhaps, is the movement of live stock to the seven primary markets by truck, although the movement of cotton in the gulf of cotton producing states, which was railroad carload business, is almost as important."

Cites Loss of Cattle Traffic.

Mr. Bierd cited figures to show that the cattle traffic lost by the railroads to the trucks had jumped from 26,000 cars a few years ago to 69,000 cars, approximately, in 1930, while more than a third of the cotton crop seemed to be taken over by trucking interests.

"So far the motor services have been rather spasmodic, irregular, and uncertain," Mr. Bierd continued. "Because of these facts the railroads took no action against them. The importance of the permanent losses in traffic were uncertain.

"However, in the last three to five years the progress of the highway motor system has been so pronounced that action is necessary to preserve the earning power of the steam railroads. Both their interests and those of the public at large are seriously concerned. The congress, the many state legislatures, and the public now realize that definite policies of public interest must be formulated to prevent an economic waste.

"These facts now being well understood, there is a general demand for federal and state regulation of this second transportation system. What should the proposed new laws and regulations embrace?

Urges Uniform Regulation.

"My judgment is that first we must have federal and uniform state regulation of the motor truck and motor bus in the same manner and degree that our railroads are regulated. My further judgment is that the kind of regulation that will drive motor vehicles out of business or make them non-profitable is not the kind of regulation we should seek for. Nor do I believe it is the kind of regulation that can be obtained. Efforts in that direction will fail.

"Every person will readily admit that the steam railroads have been and still are one of the prime necessities, and that for some years to come the railroads must be maintained. But can we believe that the users and owners of the second transportation system, the motor vehicles, are willing to be so regulated that any considerable part of their very large investment may be destroyed. To my mind, this will not and cannot be done.

"There is a proper solution to this important question. We admit that the first system should not be destroyed or weakened because the people must have it. For the same rea-

Loans Indicate Absorption of Securities by Investors

BY O. A. MATHER.

Despite quietude in the securities market, it would appear that a considerable volume of both old and new securties is being steadily absorbed by investors and institutions.

This is suggested by the fact that brokers' loans have shown another sizable decline in the last week, although prices of stocks and bonds have advanced somewhat and a large volume of new issues has been marketed.

Brokers' loans dropped to a new low level at $1,757,000,000 this week, according to the weekly report of the federal reserve board. This marked a decline of $63,000,000 from the previous week and also a decrease of $1,584,000,000 from a year ago. The current total is little more than a quarter of such loans when they reached their peak early in October, 1929.

The detail of the statement is particularly interesting in view of a plea made yesterday by George L. Harrison, governor of the New York Federal Reserve bank, for restriction of "bootleg loans," as the loans of corporations and individuals in the New York call money market have come to be termed. He appeared before the senate banking investigation committee.

Banking Control of Credit.

Corporations and individuals now are lending only $326,000,000 to brokers, or only about one-tenth of their lendings just before the stock market collapse. Moreover, their present lendings constitute less than a fifth of the total brokers' loans, whereas in October, 1929, they were more than half of the total. So it may be said that the banks now control the amount of credit used in speculation, whereas they did not in 1929.

Gov. Harrison asserted before the senate committee that means must be devised to control "bootleg loans" if the federal reserve banks are to have any real influence in controlling credit for speculation by means of their rediscount rates. However, he suggested that a remedy could be brought about by agreement between the New York banks and the New York Stock exchange rather than by new federal legislation. The bulk of loans to brokers by corporations and individuals is placed through the agency of the New York banks in the call loan market maintained by the New York Stock exchange.

J. Herbert Case, chairman of the New York Reserve bank, explained that the vast increase in "bootleg loans" in 1929 made it difficult for banking agencies to control the speculative movement. At the same time the suddenness with which such funds were withdrawn from the stock market when it collapsed imposed a great burden on the banks, which were forced to throw vast funds into the call loan market in order to prevent a worse panic.

Now in Strong Position.

Just at present, with little demand for credit either for speculative or commercial purposes, the federal reserve banks are in control of the credit situation. They also are in unusually strong position to meet any future demands as business improves. The weekly report for the system, issued last night, shows that the ratio of reserves to liabilities rose to 81.2 per cent, compared with 79.3 per cent a week ago.

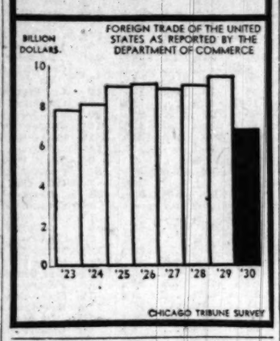
Borrowings of the member banks declined $13,455,000 to a total of $229,885,000 and this shrinkage in credit was augmented by the reserve banks disposing of $44,555,000 of bankers' acceptances and $19,726,000 of government securities. Deposits declined $22,866,000 and note circulation fell $34,859,000. Gold and total reserves increased $15,571,000 and $22,829,000, respectively.

Rise in Borrowings.

The New York Reserve bank made no change in its 2 per cent rediscount rate. Its statement showed an increase of $10,506,000 in member bank borrowings, which now total $61,667,000. Bankers' acceptances and government securities declined $12,334,000 and $19,963,000 respectively. Deposits fell $29,784,000. Reserves increased $2,274,000 and the reserve ratio rose to 85 per cent, compared with 82 per cent last week.

The Chicago Reserve bank reported a decline of $3,301,000 in member bank borrowings, which now stand at $22,727,000. Bankers' acceptances receded $8,169,000, but government securities showed no change. Deposits expanded $4,809,000. Reserves increased $16,966,000, and the reserve ratio rose to 79.9 per cent, compared with 77.1 per cent last week.

U. S. FOREIGN TRADE IN 1930 WAS SMALLEST IN RECENT YEARS



U.S. HAS 16 INDUSTRIES PRODUCING AN OUTPUT VALUED OVER BILLION

New York, Jan. 22.—(AP)—There are 16 industries in the United States, each one of which produces an output valued at more than one billion dollars a year, a compilation from preliminary reports of the 1930 census of manufacturers shows, the Manufacturers Record says.

Heading the list is the automotive industry, with production valued at $3,717,997,000 in 1929. Wholesale meat packing was second with $3,394,673,000, and iron and steel third with $3,356,894,000.

Others in the list are foundry and machine shop products, petroleum refining, electrical machinery, newspaper and periodical printing, women's clothing, motor vehicle bodies and parts, bread and bakery products, cotton goods, lumber, railroads and steam car repair shops, cigars and cigarets, flour and grain mill products, book printing and publishing.

Find Demand Grows for Color in 1931 Advertising

BY SCRUTATOR.

The newspaper of the future is not likely to have the same physical appearance it has had in the past. To all the evolutionary steps through which it has gone, from better typography and paper to swifter editorial methods and the near perfection of black and white illustration, the beauties of color printing are being added.

Perhaps the growth of this feature is not spectacular, but it is distinctly marked out. For four years THE TRIBUNE, pioneering among the large newspapers of the country, has been working toward the ideal of color in advertising. Its success is attested by figures.

Until 1929 the advertiser had not been sold on color. In that year eleven pages were sold. In 1930, a year of lesser general activity, thirty-one pages were taken by advertisers. So far in 1931, according to W. E. Donahue, advertising manager, firms already have signed for as many pages as were taken in all of last year and a great many more are for the first time pondering seriously the advantages.

Sees Marked Advantages.

"These advantages are marked," he said. "The housewife looks for goods in colored packages and buys most of them in that form. We are now offering the seller a medium in which he can represent his package in the daily newspaper, alongside the freshest of news matter, just as that package appears on the store shelf. The advertisers who have tried it know it's good; many of them have repeated. The added merit of novelty still exists, also."

Other newspapers, widely scattered over the United States and Canada, are offering similar service. A tentative list recently compiled shows some twenty-five or more. Most of them are in cities of less than 200,000 population. Continued growth in the number of plants and a greater perfection of method are expected to come near to revolutionizing advertising just as the neon light gave the electric sign a new value.

The technical problem has been to get color reproduced properly on newsprint paper and high speed presses. From the experiments that have been made so far, THE TRIBUNE has found it practicable to print one mail edition of next Sunday's paper with three pages of editorial matter in two colors. Illustrations are reproduced in a natural shade, and the management is satisfied with them both as present accomplishments and forerunners of the future. This section is not a magazine part—it was run on the black presses, especially adjusted for the work.

Brings in More Labor.

As a matter of economics, color printing promises to bring more labor into the newspaper business. On days when color printing is required; men employed in the pressroom must be increased by 10 per cent. More plates must be made. A day crew must make the pressroom ready for the added work. Improvements in printing methods have always brought more men into publishing. The employed nearly doubled in the printing and allied paper trades from 1899 to 1927 as effective labor saving devices were brought into service. Color in the more leisurely printed magazines and newspaper sections tripled in money value from 1919 to 1929, with at least a tripling in the man power needed to turn out the publications.

The ultimate aim, of course, includes a newspaper printed in three or even four colors—a product as colorful in actual fact as the contents are now figuratively colorful. The advertiser, though something more must be paid, has gained and will gain in added effectiveness of the medium.

More than all else, the union of artistry with the swift movement of information to the reader will make for additional employment which may take up some of the slack created by machinery in industries that cannot expand their markets. Such improvements are the best assurances we have of the impermanence of depression.

New York, Jan. 22.—Further improvement of the railroad shares provided the stock market with a buffer against selling sentiment in the early trading today and encouraged the bull element to extend their advantages all along the line.

Gains of 1 to 3 points were the rule for the list at large with a cluster of specialties hitting it up in more spectacular fashion.

Merchandising and theater issues were singled out for a special demonstration of strength in the last hour and most issues of both groups benefited materially from the undertaking.

Reason for Strength.

The renewed strength of the rails was interpreted as indicating that the interstate commerce commission decision in the case of the Fredericksburg, Richmond & Potomac, bearing on the recapture of excess earnings is probably near at hand.

The findings of the commission in this case, it is expected, will have a far reaching effect in modifying the situation which railroads enjoying

HEAR RICHFIELD OIL MAY BE REORGANIZED; FORM COMMITTEES

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 22.—With at least six oil corporations bidding for the property before the recent receivership, and with several still showing a keen interest, Richfield Oil company of California probably will be reorganized by merger, it was indicated today in well informed quarters.

Protective committees have been formed by holders of the mortgage bonds, preferred stock and common stock, and depositaries appointed both here and on the Pacific coast. Western banking interests, including the firm of Tucker, Hunter, Dulin & Co., and eastern bankers, including Hemphill, Noyes & Co., are represented on committees whose personnel will be announced shortly.

Formation of a common stockholders committee was announced by Philip De Ronde, president of the Hibernia Trust company, as chairman. The depositary is Chatham Phenix National Bank and Trust company and agents for the depositary are the Atlantic National bank of Boston, Foreman-State Bank and Trust company of Chicago and National City bank of Cleveland.

The Irving Trust company and William C. McDuffie of Los Angeles today were appointed ancilliary receivers in equity for the company, which has assets of more than $1,000,000 in this district. The million represents, in the main, sums due to the California corporation from the Richfield Oil Corporation of New York, a subsidiary.

Offer 85,000 Shares of Miniature Golf Stock

New York, Jan. 22.— (AP) —With offering of 85,000 shares of no par capital stock of Tom Thumb corporation, the miniature golf industry forges its first direct link with Wall street. Through Tom Thumb Securities corporation the shares are being offered to finance extensive expansions, officers of the firm announce. The new shares will participate on an equal basis with those owned by the management. The new shares will make 125,000 outstanding. Earnings of approximately $5.20 were reported for 1930. The new stock will be sold for $16.25 a share.

Australia Bank to Advance 56c a Bushel on Wheat

MELBOURNE, Australia, Jan. 22,—(AP)—The Commonwealth bank has decided to make available immediately to wheat pools advances equaling 56 cents a bushel on wheat, it was announced today. The government had requested an advance of 72 cents, but this the bank declined to authorize. Plans for state aid for wheat growers and farmers generally are being worked out in Queensland, Victoria, and New South Wales.

EXPECT G. M. C. TO VOTE REGULAR 75 CTS. DIVIDEND

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 22.—Directors of the General Motors corporation will meet on Feb. 5 to act on the dividend due March 12 and it is expected that the regular quarterly of 75 cents a share will be voted despite the fact that the net earnings for 1930 are expected to exceed by a very small margin the annual dividend requirements of $3 a share.

The company's policy in previous years has been to distribute to stockholders about 60 per cent of earnings. Belief that the regular quarterly dividend will be maintained for this quarter is based on the recent statement of Alfred P. Sloan, president, to the effect that in times of depression a higher percentage of dividends was justified provided financial strength of the corporation was not jeopardized.

Net earnings equal to about $3 a share plus 17 cents a share nonrecurring profit are estimated for 1930 by sources close to the company. However, it is also believed that the company will show an improvement in its financial position as of Dec. 31 over the close of 1929. At the end of the September quarter of 1930 the company had cash or equivalent of $200,000,000, compared with $127,000,000 at the end of 1929.

Payment of the Dec. 12 dividend absorbed about $32,000,000 and it is not likely that the balance of $41,000,000 has been wiped out in the December quarter business. Moreover, the company's inventories are expected to be much lower than they were at the close of 1929.

A quarterly dividend of 40 cents a share was declared by the Iron Fireman Manufacturing company, placing the issue on a $1.60 annual basis.

Pullman, Inc., declared the regular quarterly dividend of $1 payable Feb. 16 to stock of record Jan. 28. Public Service Corporation of New Jersey declared the regular quarterly dividend of 85 cents on its common; payable March 21.

CHICAGO STOCK PRICES MOVE BRISKLY UPWARD

Insull Utility Shares Are Feature of Advance.

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

Professional traders switched to the buying side in sufficient numbers yesterday to cause a brisk advance in leading shares on the Chicago exchange. The advance was narrow in scope with the buying limited to a few issues which are usually found in the active group.

Volume of sales expanded with transactions reaching 186,000 shares, the largest number in several days. Bond dealing likewise showed a gain with issues of a par value of 78,000 changing hands.

Insull Utility was outstanding in the advance. On a turnover exceeding 15,000 shares the stock pushed forward to sell at the highest price in months and at its best price during the day was within a fraction of forty. The stock has exhibited a good deal of strength in the last week or so, but yesterday's gain of 2½ points net overshadowed its other recent performances.

Also Shows Activity.

Middle West Utilities, the other Insull volume leader, outdistanced the investment issue in point of sales, but turned in a smaller gain. The final sale was made at 22⅛, up slightly more than a point for the day. Most of the other utility shares trailed in with smaller gains.

As a group the motor and accessory shares displayed considerable buoyancy with a net gain of two points.

The stock was bid up to 24¾, the best price since September. The final sale in the stock was made at the day's top price. Strength in the issue was attributed to reports of improved first quarter bookings. Bendix moved up better than a point, while lesser gains were recorded for Cord and Pines Winterfront.

An easing up in the pressure on Marshall Field enabled that issue to cross 26 on sales of about 2,000 shares. Other miscellaneous issues to make creditable gains were General Theaters and Parker Pen. The latter stock shot ahead 2⅛ points following the preliminary report of earnings for 1930 showing the dividend requirements covered by a good margin.

Grigsby Issues Sluggish.

The lack of authentic information concerning the present status of the Grigsby Grunow and Majestic companies was reflected in the sluggish market action of their stocks. Both issues were quoted around previous closing prices.

A cursory examination of the list reveals the highly selective character of yesterday's market. While the leaders were pushing forward for conspicuous gains the rank and file of stocks continued to move in the narrow trading rut in which they have been confined for days. The bulk of the trading was concentrated in a half dozen or so stocks, while the dealing in the less prominent remained at low ebb.

Business Personals

T. Clifford Rodman, formerly sales manager of the Chicago office of Dillon, Read & Co., has become associated with the management of Shields & Co., Chicago office.

R. D. Weilbrenner yesterday was elected treasurer of the Continental Assurance company, succeeding W. H. Roberts, retired. G. S. Beaumont was made assistant treasurer. E. V. Mitchell was elected general counsel. Cyril J. C. Quinn, a partner of J. W. Seligman & Co. of New York, was elected a director.

At the annual stockholders' meeting of the Arlington Heights State bank E. W. Mors and H. W. Freise were elected to the board. Other officers and directors were reëlected. Washington Park National bank reports the addition of Victor H. Munecke to the board.

The Logan Square State and Savings bank announces the election of W. J. Roehler as vice president and director. He had been manager of the real estate loan department.

FINANCIAL NOTES

Subject to the approval of the interstate commerce commission, Kuhn, Loeb & Co. has purchased $11,201,000 Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington Railroad company 4½ per cent mortgage bonds and $6,483,000 mortgage 4½s of the Pennsylvania, Ohio and Detroit Railroad company, both of which they are offering subject to prior sale. Both issues are guaranteed by the Pennsylvania Railroad company, which operates the properties under a long term lease.

Arrangements were completed yesterday for the sale of a seat on the Chicago Stock Exchange for $18,000, the same as the previous price.

Public Service Corporation of New Jersey is offering preferred and common stockholders rights to buy an issue of 344,013 shares of $5 cumulative preferred stock at $97.50 in the ratio of one share for each twenty held. The rights expire March 31.

BIERD ASKS RAIL OWNERSHIP OF TRUCKS, BUSES

Asks Regulated Monopoly of All Transportation.

as the people will not permit the second system to be destroyed or limited in usefulness. Both must be maintained.

Must Unify Two Systems.

"My judgment is that both transportations must be brought into one system, so far as the common carrier feature of the second system is concerned. The privately owned and operated automobile is the largest factor in the loss of railroad revenue from passengers, but I believe we must discard the thought, if there is such a thought, that this vehicle can be regulated either by federal or state governments beyond proper tax for its use of the highway and other legitimate expense for policing, etc. The common carrier truck and the passenger bus must be regulated like other common carriers (public utilities).

"The two systems must be brought under one general investment or ownership and there must be proper adjustment of rates. The railroad companies in their own exclusive territory should be given by regulative bodies the right to furnish and maintain the second system of transportation.

"If the railroad does not choose to give this service and be responsible for it, the commission in authority must give some individual the right. The rails should carry through passenger and through freight and its allied motor service the local passengers and local less than carload freight. The rails could take off certain expensive local steam service, save operating costs and still give the public better and more frequent service. Store door delivery of freight is already here and takes trucks to give it.

Believes Monopoly Is Possible.

"Only state and federal regulation can bring about the coördination. Without it the great investments of the public in two systems cannot be maintained. Independently the two systems are destroying each other."

Mr. Bierd held that existing common carrier trucks and buses can be absorbed at fair prices for their holdings, even if price arbitration is necessary when rails are given a monopoly of common carrier truck and bus business. Few vehicle companies are making money, he said, and many are more than willing to sell. He added he did not believe legisitive bodies would be unwilling to give the measure of monopoly he outlined to the railroads.

As for passenger rates on buses, he conceded that they should be lower than on trains. He cited his own twenty-eight seat buses can be operated for less than 27 cents a mile, while local trains carrying an average of thirty-three passengers on the Alton cost three times as much per train mile.

SCHEDULE TAX WARRANTS SALE FOR FEBRUARY 10

The sale of 1931 tax anticipation warrants to furnish the city with operating funds for this year was scheduled tentatively yesterday for Feb. 10 by members of the city council, as the result of the passage Wednesday night of the appropriation bill totaling $175,400,000.

The ordinance authorizing the expenditure of the money was in the hands of Mayor Thompson yesterday for action. He has until the next council meeting on Jan. 28 to decide whether to sign the ordinance, veto the whole bill or sections of it, or allow it to become effective without his signature. If he approves the expenditures the budget will be published for ten days, after which the tax levy ordinance will be adopted. Then the warrants can be sold.

Representatives of civic organizations are waiting until the budget is published in its final form, including the last minute changes made at Wednesday night's meeting, before making any statements. The controller's office shortly will submit a report deciding whether the appropriations balance with the amount of the estimated revenue.

MARMON LOSES OVER MILLION IN LAST QUARTER

Marmon Motor Car company for the quarter ended Nov. 30 reported a net loss of $1,120,861, against a net loss of $423,271 in the like quarter of 1929. For the nine months ended Nov. 30 the company had net loss of $1,937,808, against net profit of $727,010 in the corresponding period of 1929.

Chain Belt company and subsidiary for the year ended Dec. 31 had net profit of $514,711, equal to $4.29 a share, against $845,408, or $7.04 a share, in 1929.

Continental Assurance Shows $15,401,970 Assets

The annual statement of Continental Assurance company as of Dec. 31 showed assets of $15,401,970, capital and surplus of $3,250,000 and a voluntary contingent of $216,840, making surplus funds over all statutory requirements of $3,466,840. Life insurance in force was increased from $133,527,000 to $150,220,000—an increase of $16,693,000. After setting up all legal reserves required and valuing all securities held as of the market on Dec. 31 last, and after payment of $200,000 in dividends, the company increased its surplus funds by $130,696.

COTTONSEED OIL.

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—COTTONSEED OIL was fairly active today, but a large part of the business consisted of exchanges. Firmness in cotton and crude oil prompted covering in March by local and outside longs, some of whom sold July. The tone was steady and last prices were net unchanged to 9 points higher. The upturn was checked by a report that 250,000 lbs of loose tallow had sold at 4 cents, a decline of ¼ of a cent and the lowest price in nearly 40 years. Total sales were 8,100 bbls, including 3,000 in exchanges. Prime crude, 6.25c; prime summer yellow spot, 7.70c; January, 7.25c; March, 7.49c; May, 7.59c; July, 7.71c.

RAILS ACT AS BUFFER AGAINST STOCK SELLING

earnings subject to recapture have faced right along. Wall street thinks that the decision will be much more favorable to the railroads than was the case in the St. Louis O'Fallon litigation.

Most of the carriers shared in the buying based on these hopes and beliefs. Lackawanna advanced nearly 3 points, while gains of 1 to more than 2 occurred in New York Central, Southern railway, Chesapeake & Ohio, Delaware & Hudson, Missouri Pacific, and others. New York & Harlem, one of the most volatile members of the group shot up some 6 points in a few sales.

Pay Some Attention.

Outside of this report and its accompanying comment there was little in the day's industrial or financial news calculated to influence the market in any respect. Some attention was given in speculative circles to the remarks of Gov. George Harrison of the federal reserve bank here before the class committee in Washington which were interpreted to indicate that there is a possibility of a further lowering of the bank rate here, but keen observers were of the opinion that such a development if it be in store would not help the market to any great extent with the business situation what it is.

Short covering operations were in evidence in various directions and outside of the carrier group probably had as much as anything to do with the general advance. Covering was really urgent at times in a number of stocks in emaciated supply, such as Auburn Auto, for instance, which added another 6 points to its rise of yesterday. Allied Chemical and Dye rose 5 points, International Business Machine 5, and Eastman Kodak 4¾ points.

United States Steel Improves.

United States Steel reversed quite smartly in spite of an effort made by the bears at the outset to capitalize the downward revision in estimates of the Steel corporation's results in the first quarter. The old line leader boasted a net gain of more than 2 points on its final sale.

An announcement early in the day of the cutting of cigaret prices by one of the leading retail distributors of tobacco products caused some selling in the tobacco group. Liggett & Myers eased off more than a point, but American Tobacco, Reynolds, and others of the group recovered to the "plus" side of the column after initial setbacks. Assurances from ordinarily well informed sources to the effect that the action taken by the retailers would not affect the position of the leading manufacturers restored confidence and helped to dry up the selling.

WOOL.

LONDON, Jan. 22.—(AP)—The offerings at the wool sales today amounted to 9,612 bales of which 6,500 were sold. Bidding was slow and there were large withdrawals among Merinos owing to the high limits. Medium and faulty scourods were irregular and in buyers' favor. Greasy crossbreds sold fairly well to home and German dealers at low rates.

PRICE PEGGING TO END WITH 1930 CROP OF WHEAT?

Only an Emergency Can Extend It, Legge Says.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Farm board operations in the wheat market will normally end in May, according to an official announcement yesterday by Chairman Alexander A. Legge. He qualified his remarks by expressing the hope that it will not be necessary to continue stabilization operations into the new crop year.

The board's present stabilization operations end in May or June, as those are the last of the old crop months. By that time the cooperatives and the board will face the new crop. The corporations, however, probably will hold at that time twice as much wheat as was in their hands on July 1, 1930.

"We are not doing anything in wheat beyond May," Mr. Legge said. "We may have some June contracts, but we are not operating in the new crop months. However, it is too soon yet to know what may happen next year. The last time we remained out of the market from July to November, when the Russians came along and kicked the slats out of the market. I hope we will not have to go into the market in the new crop year."

Samuel R. McKelvie, wheat member of the board, had no comment to make on the wheat situation. Wednesday he said that he did not foresee any situation which would require the board to remain in the market after the end of the present crop year.

He said the board went into the market to peg the price last November only after it was clearly demonstrated that an emergency existed. What it does with the new crop will depend on conditions, he said.

Sees No Objection.

Mr. Legge sees no objection to the plan worked out by millers and the Stabilization corporation whereby the latter would loan mills old crop grain and receive the new in exchange later in the season to cover export flour sales. In his opinion, however, the plan will not result in a great deal of business. Chicago interests claim that southwestern mills are about the only ones in a position to take advantage of the plan, and they may do some business in order to keep their recognized brands in the hands of foreign buyers, making sales at a loss, if necessary.

Announcement that stabilization operations were not contemplated at present in the new wheat crop had no effect on the market. The July delivery advanced ½c early to 66⅝c in sympathy with Liverpool, which was firmer on further rains in Argentina, only to break 1¾c from the top when corn started downward. The finish was ⅝c lower at 65⅛c, buying against bids checking the decline. Old crop months were very dull and closed unchanged to ⅛c lower with March, 80¼c, and May, 82⅜c.

Removal of hedges against export sales of 750,000 to 1,000,000 bu wheat at Winnipeg gave the Canadian market a strong undertone and it gained ¾c for the day. A report to J. E. Bennett & Co. said there were liberal buying orders in evidence every ⅛@¼c down. Some improvement was reported in the flour demand.

Plan Big Cut in Acreage.

A reduction of around 25 per cent in the wheat acreage in the Canadian northwest is contemplated this year, according to a telegram from J. I. McFarland, heading the Canadian pool.

A reaction came in the Liverpool wheat market after showing early strength with the close ⅛d lower to ⅛d higher. Buenos Aires finished at a net gain of ⅝@⅞c for the day, with showers reported late in the day.

Corn made a firm start and a weak finish, commission house selling finally running the market into stop loss orders with the May dropping 1¾c from the top to 67⅞c, or within 2c of the lowest figures of the season. Sellers of bids were forced to protect themselves on the way down. Final sales were within a fraction of the bottom with net losses of 1@1¼c with March, 66@66¼c; May, 68⅛@68¼c, and July, 69⅝@69¼c. Support on the break came mainly from locals and from holders of bids.

A record corn crop is regarded as assured in Argentina, and a Buenos Aires cable estimated the exportable surplus at 290,000,000 bu, or 140,000,000 bu in excess of the average of the last five years. Futures in that market were ⅝@¾c higher, with the February quoted at 29¼c. Exports from that country for the week were estimated at 7,383,000 bu, compared with 2,041,000 bu last year.

Record Low for Barley.

Selling of barley futures at Winnipeg on stop loss orders and also by farmers who were getting rid of storage tickets carried prices there off 1⅝c to 22½c for the May delivery, an all time record low. The finish was at 23¾c, showing a net loss of ⅞c for the day. Minneapolis May dropped ⅝c to 25⅝c.

Trade in oats was light and the market easier with corn, final sales being ⅛@⅜c lower, with March, 35@35⅛c; May, 32⅜c, and July, 32¼@32⅝c. Rye lost ⅝c with trade limited, the March being 40⅛c and May 41c at the last.

SUGAR.

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—(AP)—SUGAR—Raw was a little more active today and while spot prices remained unchanged, shipment sugars were higher.

There was a little more activity in raw futures and prices were firmer, influenced by reports that the present Cuban crop would be restricted to 3,000,000 tons and the export quota to the United States to 2,605,000 tons. Approximate sales were 36,350 tons. Prices follow:

HOUSEHOLD LOANS
$50 to $300
ON PLEASANT TERMS

The Household Loan Plan offers cash loans of $50 to $300 to husbands and wives at reasonable rates.

Loans above $100 and up to $300 are made at a rate almost one-third lower than the lawful maximum.

Interest is paid by the month and charge is made only for the actual number of days the money is in use. There are no fees or dines.
